DEFYING HIS FOES, STRESEMANN OFFERS TO RESIGN AT ONCE

"If You Have a Better Man, Bring Him Forth," He Tells the Reichstag.

RECITES GERMANY'S WOES

Chancellor Says the Internal Situation Is Hopeless and Blames It All on France.

MAY BE TURNED OUT TODAY

One No Confidence Motion Is Presented by the Nationalists—Socialists Have Another.

BERLIN, Nov. 22.—Contrary to the expectation of the crowded galleries in the Reichstag, Chancellor Stresemann was able to deliver a defense of his administration this afternoon without interruptions by the Communists sufficiently violent to call for the suspension or expulsion of any one of them.

Before the session began Deputy Remmele, who was suspended for twenty days for his disorderly conduct on Tuesday, arrived, surrounded by a group of Communist members, and attempted to rush the entrance but was stopped by the doorkeepers and turned back without a fight.

In his speech the Chancellor divulged nothing new. He sought to placate both the Left and Right. And whereas German Nationalist fraction none the less brought in a motion for a vote of no confidence, Dr. Stresemann succeeded in inducing the Socialists to postpone their no confidence motion until a later caucus has thoroughly ventilated it again.

This brief respite Dr. Stresemann gained by promising partial progressive revocation of the species of martial law designated the "exceptional state" and declaring that it would be revoked in the near future in the quiet and orderly parts of Germany, which was interpreted to mean everywhere except in Bavaria, Saxony and Thuringia.

The Chancellor played up his hope in foreign, and particularly American, aid in the form of food and merchandise credits contingent on the Stresemann Government remaining in office and peace prevailing in Germany.

"As against various press reports," he said, "I must go on record that officially only one credit offer by foreign financiers has been made to the Reich's Government, which offer, transmitted through the Chairman of the Reich Landowners' Association, placed at least 1,000,000,000 marks in goods and credit at our disposal.

"It is correct that this offer contains a conditional clause—and not at the suggestion of the Reich's Government either—that this credit would only be given to the present Government.

"The question of the real value of money and the maintenance of the parity of the rentenmark is one of the main tasks of the Government necessitating the balancing and placing of the budget on a real value money basis."

Calls Internal Situation Hopeless.

Another point made by the Chancellor answering taunts of the Nationalist leader Hergt that the Government's foreign policy had been one grand failure, was this:

"The internal situation is hopeless. Neither do I see any way for the present of improving the hopeless situation. Germany is an open wound in Europe's body. Just as Germany is in danger of bleeding to death of the wound of the Rhineland and Ruhr, so will Europe bleed to death of the reparation problem if it is not solved."

The Chancellor went on to say that the German people and the rest of the world had not been deceived as to the degree of Germany's misery. "For this reason, too, we appealed to the charitable help of the world," he said, and he extended "warm thanks to the Scandinavian countries, to the United States, to many South American countries and particularly to German-Americans."

The Chancellor blamed France and M. Poincaré's policy for the increase of Communism and Nationalism in Germany.

"Nobody will deny that the development of internal German conditions is driving toward radical tendencies," he said. "Communism in Germany derives its strongest support from the misery breaking in on us, and the radicalism of the extreme Right builds its supports under the National opposition we are now experiencing from France's attitude."

The Reichstag adjourned at 10 o'clock until tomorrow, when a vote on the no confidence motion is expected. Political circles still count on his fall, but talk of the Chancellor as Foreign Minister in the new Government.

Chancellor Speaks Defiantly.

BERLIN, Nov. 22 (Associated Press).—The gallery approval extended to Chancellor Stresemann at the conclusion of his two-hour speech in the Reichstag today, in which he made a vigorous defense of his Administration, was considerably more vociferous than the applause contributed by the three middle parties on the floor of the house, which now constitute his only tangible parliamentary support.

The question of confidence in the Government will come up tomorrow. The German Nationalists have already presented a resolution of no confidence, and although the Socialists were expected to follow with a similar disavowal they

Four cases of German marks ranging in denominations from 10,000 notes to 100,000,000,000 notes were received yesterday by Isaac Baer & Co., Inc., of 39 Broadway. The consignment was valued at $500.

A lingering market for marks still exists, Mr. Baer said, and to accommodate curious customers who want marks as mementos the shipment was sent. "There are some, however, who still hope the mark will come back," he said. "Every few days we are asked if it wouldn't be well for a customer to buy marks now to even up on losses on marks bought at higher prices."

The notes in 100,000,000,000, 50,000,000,000, 5,000,000,000 and 1,000,000,000 denominations are of fairly good paper and the engraving is good. The smaller denominations are of inferior paper and the engraving is bad.

In the lot were some of the 1910 Berlin issue of 1,000-mark notes, supposedly payable in gold, and selling at $70 per billion against 25 cents per trillion of current issues.

MRS. W. E. COREY GETS DIVORCE IN PARIS

FIRST WIFE DIVORCED HIM

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 22.—Mrs. William Ellis Corey, wife of the American steel man, won a decree of divorce this afternoon in the Paris courts. The charge was desertion.

Mrs. Corey was formerly the American actress Mabelle Gilman. She married Mr. Corey in 1907, soon after he was divorced from his first wife.

Since her marriage she has spent much time in Paris, where she lived a short time before the ceremony. She was chatelaine of a large country estate at Villegenis, Seine-et-Oise, and spent most of her time between this home and her apartment in the rue Francois Premier, Paris, with occasional trips to the Riviera and London.

At the conclusion of one of her trips she recently came much into the public eye in France. Arriving in London, she discovered that a valuable pearl necklace which had been in a jewel case when she left the chateau had disappeared. Suspicion rapidly centred on the servants and was divided between the housekeeper and the chauffeur. The latter then confessed and said he had taken the pearls from the case while it was in the car. Several pearls were never found.

The man pleaded poverty as the cause of the theft and it is very likely when the case comes before the tribunal tomorrow he will be let off with a very light sentence.

Mrs. Corey also caused the arrest of her housekeeper on a charge of theft. According to the police, she discovered the woman had stolen a large quantity of silver and linen for a former chauffeur who at present is a hotel keeper in Paris. A considerable quantity of linen and silver was found in this man's hotel and he was arrested.

Marriage Followed First Corey Divorce.

At the Corey home, 991 Fifth Avenue, it was said last night that Mr. Corey was due in New York today from a hunting trip in Virginia.

The divorce obtained by the former Mabelle Gilman in Paris ends the second romance of the man who once held the dominating position of President of the United States Steel Corporation, from which he resigned when his wife, Mrs. Mary Cook Corey, obtained a divorce and the custody of her son.

Corey married Mary Cook on Dec. 1, 1883, when she was 17 and he was earning $40 a month dumping coal at his uncle's tipple in Braddock, Pa. Spurred on by the devotion of his young wife, Corey advanced rapidly until he came under the wing of Andrew Carnegie. Mrs. Corey bought him the small frame cottage in which they lived, and her husband studied nights, eventually becoming President of the Steel Corporation.

It was in 1903 that Corey met Mabelle Gilman, then a member of "The Mocking Bird" company playing in Pittsburgh. He was introduced to her at a swimming party and afterward was frequently seen in her company.

In a tearful statement to the Court at Reno, Nev., on July 30, 1905, Mrs. Corey described her final efforts to have her husband take up his residence with his family. Mr. Corey was reported to have settled a sum estimated variously as between $1,000,000 and $3,000,000 on his wife when they were divorced.

Corey and Miss Gilman were married at 1:29 on the morning of May 14, 1907.

GOMPERS ARRAIGNS HEARST FOR URGING SOVIET RELATIONS

CONCESSION HUNT CHARGED

HINTS BANKERS' PRESSURE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. — Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor and one of the stanchest opponents of the recognition of the Russian Soviet Government by the United States, made public tonight a statement in which he assailed vigorously what he termed "the latest campaign for recognition of the Soviets" being conducted by William Randolph Hearst.

Mr. Gompers brought into his assault upon Mr. Hearst the names of Colonel William Boyce Thompson, whom he classified as the first influential friend of the Soviet; former Secretary Fall of the Interior Department; the Sinclair and Barnsdall Oil interests, and the members of a commission composed of Senators King of Utah and Ladd of North Dakota, and Representative Frear of Wisconsin, sent by Mr. Hearst last Summer to investigate conditions in Russia. He also indicated that, in his opinion "international bankers" who had interests in Russia were involved in the campaign for Soviet recognition.

"Sheer effrontery," words employed by the court yesterday in sentencing Dr. Frederick A. Cook in Texas, were selected by Mr. Gompers to describe what he termed the "impudence" of Mr. Hearst in his fight in behalf of the Soviet Government.

Mr. Gompers took the position that the American people did not want Soviet Russia recognized by their Government and he wanted a show-down by the next Congress. The present campaign for recognition, he held, was the work largely of "international financiers, concession hunters, oil magnates and the like."

Statement of Mr. Gompers.

The Gompers statement reads:

"'Sheer effrontery,' said the Court in sentencing Dr. Cook, the fake discoverer of the North Pole, to fourteen years for his recent deeds of heroism in the oil fields of Texas. There is no other expression that so well describes the impudence of William Randolph Hearst in his latest campaign for recognition of the Soviets.

"Hearst knows that American labor, the American people, and the American Government want nothing to do with bloody monsters of Moscow, with their communism still taught as a catechism in the Red army and the Soviet schools, with their 'world revolution' still preached daily by all the Soviet leaders and in all Soviet publications, with their so-called new economic policy, or as they themselves call it, State Socialism, the sole aim of which is to call in foreign capital to enable the Bolshevist oligarchy to exploit their serfs and imperial domains more effectively, without relinquishing any of their political power or a single strategic point of their economic despotism.

"Hearst knows that, outside of the 'lunatic fringe' and a certain number of publishers, writers and correspondents bribed by Soviet scoops, the only support for Soviet recognition has come from international financiers, concession hunters, oil magnates and the like. Hearst knows that the first influential friend of the Soviets in this country was Colonel William Boyce Thompson, mining magnate, director in Sinclair Oil, and that his weighty authority on things Russian and mundane was publicly attested by Thomas W. Lamont of Pierpont Morgan & Co.

"Hearst knows that the latest influential recruit for the Soviets in the late Secretary of the Interior, ex-Senator Albert B. Fall, of Sinclair and Teapot Dome fame. He knows that representatives of Sinclair and of the Barnsdall Corporation—which is closer to Standard Oil—have repeatedly returned from Russia (one Mason F. Day only yesterday) with the proposition that 'something must be done at least to establish governmental 'contact' with the Soviets.

Hint of Pressure on Cabinet.

"Hearst knows of the repeated Russian voyages of a certain Western ex-Governor and coal magnate. Hearst is especially well acquainted with German-American and German-born high finance. He knows that these gentlemen have been working quietly from the beginning and almost openly in the last eighteen months for Soviet recognition, and that, finding a more sympathetic hearing in another quarter,

Only Servants Are Rich Enough to Attend Fashionable Charity Ball in London

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—A new idea in charity balls took place tonight at Queensbury Hall in the west end. The dance, in aid of the Y. M. C. A. Boys' Club, has been organized by Lady Malcolm, wife of Sir Ian Malcolm, with all the guests as butlers, cooks, housekeepers and footmen.

She has discovered that the "upper ten" in these tax-ridden days are too hard up to buy charity tickets gladly, but that their servants are still bulging with cash. So the household staffs, from the royal palaces and from the town houses of such society folk as the Duchess of Sutherland, the Duchess of Portland, the Marchioness of Salisbury, Lady Beatty, Lady Shaftesbury and Lady Cromer, are having a night off to dance for the Boys' Club.

Their employers, it is understood, are "doing with something on a tray," and the function appears to be the smartest affair since Sam Weller's famous "swar" at Bath.

Profiteering in Army-Navy Game Tickets As in Theatre Seats, Agency Canvass Shows

While officials of the Army and Navy were still expressing indignation over an increase of theatre prices here for tomorrow night and threatening to take the annual service game to some other city because of alleged profiteering, Broadway ticket speculators were offering tickets to the game itself at prices which went as high as $43 each.

A canvass of the Times Square ticket agencies last night disclosed that there was a plentiful supply of tickets, but they were in the hands of speculators, most of them coming from the allotments made to the two service schools. In the original distribution of tickets each school received 29,000, while 7,000 were retained by the New York National League Baseball Club, owner of the Polo Grounds, for distribution in this city.

The tickets were printed in three colors. Those sent to West Point were pink, the Navy's were orange, while those kept by the Giants were green. Most of the tickets offered for sale along Broadway last night were pink, but here and there orange ones were proffered. There was only one lot of four green ones. But color was not the only proof that the tickets now in the hands of speculators had come from West Point and Annapolis. One agency was reported to have been offered a block of fifty tickets by a man in a blue uniform, while an individual had an opportunity to buy a box, seating four persons, next to that of a high Army officer for $175.

Louis Cohn, a Broadway ticket broker, said that there had been a steady stream of ticket holders in his place of business yesterday offering from two to a dozen tickets at prices ranging up as high as $50 each. Cohn said that the real profiteering was being done by the individual ticket holders rather than the speculators. Since there is no general public sale of Army-Navy tickets, most of these individuals obtain tickets from their Congressmen, from Army or Navy officers, or from cadets and midshipmen, so that whatever they can sell them for is clear profit.

SWIFT & CO. BAR FEDERAL AUDITORS

FEARS FOR TRADE SECRETS

Declares That as No Law Violation Is Charged Court's Ruling Will Be Awaited.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Swift & Co., packers, will decline to "permit the Department of Agriculture to place auditors permanently in their offices with power to examine at all times their books, papers and other documents," according to a statement issued tonight by L. F. Swift, President of the company.

The Swift Company, Wilson & Co.'s and the Cudahy Packing Company were directed by Secretary Wallace to make their records available to Government auditors not later than today. No statements were forthcoming from the other two companies, but reports indicate that they would support Swift & Co.'s stand.

Representatives of all three indicated their belief that Secretary Wallace's order involves an "invasion of constitutional rights."

"We claim on behalf of our 45,000 stockholders," said Mr. Swift in his formal statement, "the right which the Constitution guarantees to all citizens of being permitted (in the absence of specific charges) to conduct our business peacefully without interference from Government agents.

"If the Government has power to maintain accountants in our office, as it claims, it also would have the power to establish such accountants permanently in all business offices in the country, a situation which we believe unthinkable.

"The proposed inquiry is not founded upon any complaint or charge of any violation of law, but is for the purpose of obtaining complete detailed information as to all business of the company. Such a sweeping inquiry must be considered an attempt to seize power reserved to the several States under the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States.

"Until the Court decides the Packers and Stockyards act to be as broad in its scope as Secretary Wallace construes it to be judging from the notice served upon us, Swift & Co. must decline to comply."

The company, it was indicated, conceded that the act under which Secretary Wallace's demand was made provided full authority to investigate specific cases of unfair and discriminatory practices, but officials maintained that it did not give authority to investigate in the absence of specific charges.

It is further objected by the company that Government auditors "after having had these privileges of examination would be of such value to competitors that they might be hired away from the Government for the trade secrets which they had learned."

Full Knowledge of Business Sought.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace made a demand upon Swift & Co. last week for full access to their accounts, records, memoranda and documentary evidence, and a similar demand is being made upon the Wilson Packing Company and the Cudahy Packing Company.

The demand is that the auditors of the packers and of the Stock Yards Administration of the Department of Agriculture, as agents of the Secretary of Agriculture, shall have access to and the right to examine and copy books of accounts, records, memoranda and documentary evidence which relate to the organization, business conduct, practices, management, relations to other corporations, individuals, partnerships and associations, transactions involved in the conduct of the business and the true ownership of business.

The stated purpose is:

1. To determine the extent to which Swift & Co. are engaged in the buying of live stock in commerce, the manufacturing and preparing of meats or live-stock products, including dairy products, poultry, poultry products and eggs.

2. Obtain information concerning the ownership of the business.

3. To determine whether such accounts, records and memoranda fully and correctly disclose all transactions involved.

4. To examine and verify the information contained in the balance sheets, profit and loss statements, published from time to time.

5. To determine the extent to which the business is interstate or intrastate or intermingled.

6. To secure information with respect to the various plants, branches, agencies and offices and the character of business carried on.

REVOKES LICENSES OF FIFTY DOCTORS

$36 DEATH 'CURE' REVEALED

Banton Seeks Fake Degree Agents Here on Evidence Sent by Hartford Grand Jury.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 22.—On recommendation of the Extraordinary Grand Jury which is investigating medical diploma frauds, the State Health Department today revoked the licenses of all Connecticut physicians claiming graduation from the St. Louis College of Physicians and Surgeons. They number about fifty, and one of them, Dr. George M. Sutcliffe, formerly of Unionville, is being sought on a charge of manslaughter because of the death of Albert C. Hoody from an overdose of ether.

Dr. James W. Cottner, a graduate of the Kansas City School of Medicine and Surgery, was tonight removed as school physician at Stratford on order of the town's Board of Education. Dr. George Sutcliffe in his confession to Governor Templeton three weeks ago said Cottner called on him while he was in Ray, Col., in 1920 and sold him for $100 a Connecticut medical license later sent by mail. It was on this license that Sutcliffe practised for a year.

Connecticut officers failed to find Sutcliffe in Albany, N. Y., where he had been reported visiting friends, and tonight County Detective Edward J. Hickey was said to be investigating Albany information that Sutcliffe had escaped to Canada.

The authorities here today sent to New York District Attorney's office records of charges made by William P. Sachs, former Missouri Superintendent of Schools, with corroborating affidavits, regarding the New York agents of the national fake diploma ring. Sachs will testify here when the Grand Jury reconvenes on Monday.

As result of information sent from New York by a reputable physician who desired to aid the inquiry, many chiropractors, osteopaths and naturopaths suspected of possessing improper credentials are to be called before the Grand Jury to explain where and how they got their titles of "doctor."

The New York information stated the belief that out of 100,000 chiropractors in New York City about 30,000 by the use of cheap electric machines are causing cancer "because electricity and the X-ray are most dangerous unless properly controlled and administered."

Teaches How to "Raise Dead" for $36.

Other evidence prepared for the Grand Jury is said to show claims of unauthorized naturopaths practicing in both Connecticut and New York that "the dead are restored to life."

The college advertising the resurrection claim is the Naturopathic Health School of 759 East Thirty-seventh Street, Chicago. The fee for its course to learn the process is advertised as $36. From the school's circular to prospective students the following paragraphs have been taken as evidence:

"Unbelievable as it may seem, this school actually instructs how by simple scientific procedure to restore many classes of dead persons to life.

"It is being done every day, and you can accomplish this result when you understand the principle and process required.

"There are three great fields of restorative action.

"One is low powered, and is capable of dealing successfully with the majority of sicknesses and disease, and restoring only some recent dead to life.

"The next one is of medium power and has to do largely with common control of circumstances.

"And the third is of supreme restorative action, and enables full control of all circumstances; the positive recovery from any and all conditions of sickness and disease; the restoration complete of any and all parts removed by accident and surgery, and the restoration of both the recent and the long time dead."

Elsewhere in its literature the Chicago institution declares that "no longer is the natural system of restoring life and health esteemed an offender in the affairs of men. But it is looked upon as the chiefest of potentialities in strengthening, defending and building up the personnel of that organization that must take the rule of the world in its hands."

The school also advertises that "the powerful health restoring truths God has revealed to Dr. M. E. Yerkin and given into the keeping of the N. H. S., may be had by those who desire first-hand information. The fee of $36 includes matriculation fee $1, diploma $20, and printed notes $15, all of which must be paid on day of entrance."

The Grand Jury next week will receive a mass of evidence concerning

GROWING PROTEST AGAINST LETTING CRAIG GO TO JAIL

DARES MAYER TO JAIL HIM

Controller's Friends See Pardon by Coolidge as Only Hope to Avert Prison Term.

REPUBLICANS ARE WORRIED

Fear Political Effect of Imprisonment—Movement to Have Congress Curb Bench's Power.

Criticism of Federal Judge Julius M. Mayer and the system which made it possible for him to sentence Controller Charles L. Craig to sixty days' imprisonment for contempt of court came yesterday from several quarters.

One of the most caustic critics was Supreme Court Justice John Ford, who wrote Mr. Craig a letter of congratulation, declaring that his imprisonment would do more than a million tongues or pens to end judicial tyranny. In commenting upon the situation Justice Ford asserted that Mr. Craig's criticism of Judge Mayer's Brooklyn Rapid Transit receivership order, expressed in a letter to Lewis Nixon, then Public Service Commissioner, did not constitute contempt. Justice Ford added that in sentencing Mr. Craig to jail Judge Mayer sought revenge for Mr. Craig's "personal aspersions" upon him.

Amos Pinchot, brother of Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania declared that Judge Mayer, by ordering the imprisonment of Mr. Craig, had opened up the whole question of free speech and discussion. In a letter to Judge Mayer, Mr. Pinchot characterized the former's order imprisoning Mr. Craig as "monstrous," the word used by Mr. Craig to describe Judge Mayer's B. R. T. receivership order in his letter to Mr. Nixon, which was the basis of the contempt proceedings.

Pinchot Taunts Judge Mayer.

Mr. Pinchot declared that Judge Mayer, if consistent, would order him imprisoned. He added that he did not expect Judge Mayer to do this, because, he said, a man who abuses power rarely had courage and because Judge Mayer probably knew that the public would not take kindly to a repetition of a violation of the spirit of the country's fundamental law.

No progress was made in the search for some legal method by which Mr. Craig might escape the imprisonment in the Essex County Jail in Newark. Mr. Craig said he knew nothing of any such attempt and was said to continue to regard the decision of the United States Supreme Court dismissing the writ of habeas corpus issued by Judge Manton of the United States Circuit Court as final. In the opinion of his close friends Mr. Craig's only hope of escaping a term in jail was in a pardon from President Coolidge.

More suggestions that Congress enact legislation to take away from Federal Judges the power to punish for contempt in cases such as that of Mr. Craig were made public. There were increasing indications that local Republican leaders were not pleased with the possibility of Mr. Craig's imprisonment by a Republican Judge becoming a political issue.

Representative Thomas Jefferson Ryan of the Fourteenth New York Congressional District announced that he had consulted his colleagues, Representatives J. D. Clarke of [illegible], N. Y., and J. J. Connolly of Philadelphia, and that he was ready to support a bill to prevent a Judge acting in cases in which he was personally interested in cases resembling that of Mr. Craig. Representative F. H. LaGuardia had already announced that he would introduce such a bill, and it is expected that with the impetus furnished by the Craig case it will have considerable Republican support in the House.

"A Great Shame," Says Ryan.

"This is a great shame," Mr. Ryan said, in discussing the prospect of Mr Craig's imprisonment. "Mr. Craig did what any normal man would have done. He did what he believed was right. Without intending any disrespect to the courts, Judge Mayer went much further

Farmers' Union Demands Wheat Tariff of 50 Cents

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 22 (Associated Press).—Declaring that as long as high prices of necessities prevail as a result of duties for protection of American manufactured goods, it is right to raise or equalize the tariff on farm products, delegates to the annual convention of the Farmers Union asked in a resolution adopted late today that the tariff on wheat be increased to 50 cents a bushel.

The convention likewise urged repeal of the wheat schedule, "which permits our mills to import, manufacture and re-export great quantities of Canadian wheat in direct competition with American producers."

Other features of the program adopted were public ownership of transportation systems, banning of tax-exempt securities, a "reasonable" reduction in freight rates, restoration of the excess profits tax, retention of higher surtaxes on incomes and enactment of a graduated inheritance and gift tax law that would take all of an estate in excess of $1,000,000.

$40,000 FUR THEFT IN HEART OF THE CITY

HULBERT TAKES ACTION

Assumes Charge of Drive on Crime and Calls on Other Officials to Aid.

After giving the police a breathing spell for a few days, robbers and burglars sallied forth yesterday and last night.

Charles A. Jackman, president of William Jackman's Sons, Inc., of 35 West Thirty-fifth Street, a fur store, informed reporters that burglars had entered his place and taken a number of mink and caracul coats. He said the value of the stolen articles might reach $40,000.

The police of the West Thirtieth Street Station passed the inquiries of reporters with denials at first. Eventually they admitted there had been a robbery and that "perhaps a coat or two had been taken."

The Holmes Detective Agency, two blocks from the store, refused to discuss the case beyond saying the burglary alarm was in perfect working order and that this had been reported to the police. The agency was employed to protect the premises.

"I was at dinner at my home here at Pelham Manor when the agency telephoned me," said Mr. Jackman. "They told me the store had been entered. I hurried to New York. Burglars had made entrance through a rear window after breaking a projecting bar and smashing the glass. They left the same way. Escape must have been by an alley leading to the street.

"If they say nothing was stolen they are in error. I can't tell until an inventory is made in the morning just what was taken, but I observed on the spot that a number of mink coats were missing. I did not see detectives at the station house. Others of the company did. Detectives were in the store before I got there and they must have seen furs scattered around."

Burglar Alarm Went Off at 6:42 P. M.

In the presence of reporters a detective last night telephoned Jackman. The detective said he had been told by Jackman that the value of the goods could not be ascertained until an inventory had been made.

Jackman emphasized the daring of the robbery by pointing out the burglar alarm went off at 6:42, a time when home-bound crowds were thronging Fifth Avenue. He said the alarm must have gone off when the burglars were leaving. The store had then been closed about an hour.

The furrier said that two months ago $15,000 worth of Russian sables were taken from the store by burglars.

Reporters who examined the rear window found that one bar had been broken and the glass smashed, making an opening about two feet square.

Detectives were reported to have found a piece of lead pipe and a monkey wrench inside the broken window.

Employes and guests of the Hotel Collingwood, next door, said they did not hear the crashing of glass or other noises.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—At the suggestion of Thomas A. Edison, of the Chemical Warfare Service of the army has been asked to devise some means for using poison gas in connection with the trapping of wild animals, to the end that animals caught in traps will be instantly killed instead of lingering for hours in torture.

The matter has been brought to the attention of War Department officials by a New York banker, who had previously applied to Mr. Edison for suggestions as to whether it would be possible to make use of electricity in such an undertaking.

The latter to the War Department reads, in part, as follows:

"Permit me to bring to your attention a matter of the deepest concern to all who are interested in ameliorating the sufferings of dumb animals, and to bespeak your co-operation in a very practical and feasible method to this end.

"You are doubtless cognizant of the facts in connection with the torturing of the fur-bearing animals in the steel traps with which they are caught, twenty millions going through a slow and agonizing death in this way every year.

"I brought this matter to the attention of that great master mind, Thomas A. Edison, asking if he could not suggest some application of electricity which would give merciful and instant death in place and stead of lingering and useless suffering. His reply was, in part, as follows:

"'I do not think it commercially practicable to combine electricity with a trap. Of course, it could be done, but it never would be used. It would be more practicable to have the movement of the trap break a container filled with death-dealing war gas. This would be easy and practicable as well as inexpensive.

"In further correspondence he said:

"'I think you had better take up the matter with the Gas Division of the War Department at Washington before doing anything else. I believe that you could get them to try experiments, as they are actively engaged in experiments.

"'I can conceive no more illustrious deed to be credited to the genius, the ingenuity and the humane heart of your Department than that it should follow the lines indicated by Mr. Edison and prepare a mechanism for trapped animals, properly equipped with poison gas that will instantly and effectively put out of suffering anything caught in it.'

According to War Department officials such a device could readily be contrived, the requisites being merely a steel trap with a mechanism for loosing a small quantity of toxic material, probably in the form of the revelation service toxic candle now in use.

POLITICIANS MOVE TO PASS BONUS BILL BEFORE TAX RELIEF

FORCING COOLIDGE'S HAND

CAPPER FOR HIGH SURTAX

Norris Wants the Small Incomes Taxed Less and the Big Ones More.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Agitation for the passage of a bonus bill before action is taken on the tax reduction program is receiving strong support as the advance guard for the assembling of Congress increases in numbers. This plan has been worked out by some of the Republican politicians as a test of the President and as a legislative manoeuvre that may lead to a compromise where a tax reduction program inclusive of bonus can be agreed upon by the Administration leaders.

Sentiment is becoming stronger in the larger centres of the East for a sweeping tax reduction, as the Mellon recommendations are studied more closely. That the sentiment for reduction is just as great in other sections of the country is also evident.

This sentiment, in many other sections, does not go as far as to exclude payments to ex-service men. In smaller communities where ex-soldiers are larger in proportionate numbers, members of Congress are favorable to reductions for the smaller taxpayers, but with the retention of enough war-time taxes to support bonus payments.

Views on taxation plans in the farming and small manufacturing districts appear not to have crystallized. Bonus advocates who said that they would be strong enough to pass their measure in advance of tax revision fear that their strength may be greatly weakened after Congress gets in session and the President has sounded his call for reduction. They were frank in saying today that they had not yet heard sufficiently from their constituents to decide whether their own conclusions were approved. At present bonus members from the so-called farming sections assert that they do not intend to give up their stand.

Look for Coolidge Leadership.

Administration leaders say that their position will be weakened unless the President, in his message, treats tax reductions firmly and in such language as to convince members of Congress that he will veto a bonus bill. They say that if a bonus is passed in Congress, and the President vetoes it, the difficulties of getting a satisfactory tax bill will be greater.

Recognized Republican leaders favoring a bonus have never abandoned their hope that the President would accept Secretary Mellon's recommendations in part only, and agree to a tax reduction which would permit bonus payments not in excess of $50,000,000 a year for the next five years. These same leaders are encouraging the ardent bonus men in their announced fight to force the passage of a bonus bill before a tax revision bill is presented. In pursuance to this plan they intend to compel, if possible, the formation of a new committee in the House to deal entirely with the bonus and other questions of interest to ex-service men.

These Congressmen say that there is no need to consider a bonus measure longer as nine-tenths of the members of Congress passed at the last session on a project which is acceptable to the American Legion. The same bill will be reintroduced and the bonus advocates assert that they will be able to pass it in the House before Christmas. Republican leaders say there is enough strength to pass a bonus bill unless the President, in his message, opposes a bonus or takes a stand which suggests compromise or delay.

If President Coolidge should come out formally and emphatically for the Mellon plan and in opposition to the bonus, many Republicans favorable to the bonus would hesitate a long time before going counter to his recommendations. Such a message would force the bonus advocates into conference with the Republican leaders in the hope that a compromise might be effected and that tax revision and bonus would go hand in hand.

Tax Reduction Deemed Sure.

Whatever may be the fate of the bonus, it is believed that there will be important tax reductions, approaching in the aggregate the cut recommended by Secretary Mellon. The reductions may not be entirely along Mr. Mellon's lines, for some of his ideas, it is suspected, will not command a majority in Congress. Again, a bonus may be provided by means of a bond issue.

There is unanimity in Congress for a reduction of the burden on the smaller taxpayer and for a differential between unearned and earned income. Beyond this the Mellon recommendations enter a field of controversy. It is considered doubtful whether the higher surtaxes, now 50 per cent., can be reduced greatly, if at all. There is a strong element in Congress in favor of increasing the inheritance tax, especially that on inheritances which represent tax-exempt securities.

With the radicals holding the balance of power, the chances of a reduction of surtaxes appear slim, because many Republicans, although convinced of the wisdom of such reductions, say that the average taxpayer cannot grasp the argument that the lowering of these taxes means the putting of more money in production and the end of evading taxation through buying tax-exempt securities.

Capper Against Surtax Cut.

Senator Capper, of Kansas, head of the farm bloc, said today that he was opposed to the Mellon recommendation to reduce the surtaxes from 50 to 25 per cent.

"That would further reduce the taxes of those amply able to pay taxes," he said. "If taxes are to be reduced, and they should be, the place to begin is by exempting all incomes up to $3,000. It is the man of small income who should be favored.

"If the surtax on big incomes is lowered, the excess profits tax must be put back, and we should increase the inheritance tax on large incomes. We should pass the resolution to amend the Constitution to prohibit further issues of tax-exempt securities.

"An additional inheritance tax should be placed on all tax-exempt securities now existing, variously estimated from $20,000,000,000 to $30,000,000,000. Such a tax would soon put a stop to great wealth hiding from the tax collector in tax-free bonds and leaving the duty of maintaining the Government to the little taxpayer."

Views of other radical and progressive Senators today show that a fight is starting for increasing the taxes in certain respects. Some of these views are:

Senator Norris of Nebraska, Chairman of the Committee on Agriculture and member of the Progressive organization—I am for lowering the taxes on small incomes and for increasing them on the big incomes. That's my position.

Senator Howell of Nebraska—I am for tax reduction, of course, but I am also for a bonus for the soldiers. I have not had time to study the Mellon proposition, and until I do I will not commit myself.

Senator Wheeler of Montana, who will be one of Mr. La Follette's chief lieutenants—I have not gone into the Mellon proposition sufficiently as yet to discuss it intelligently. Until I do I will not pass any opinions on it. Of course, I am for a bonus.

Senator Shipstead of Minnesota—I am strong for bonus legislation and favor tax reduction. I have not been able to study the effect of Mr. Mellon's reductions. There will be reductions, but I should not think offhand that they will be anything like Secretary Mellon suggested.

PEPPER SAYS PLAN MAY FAIL.

Senator Distrusts Statements of Congressmen for It.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—The tax reduction plan advanced by Secretary Mellon will be defeated in Congress unless the strength of public opinion is thrown back of it, Senator Pepper said here today.

In explaining his silence on the Mellon plan, the Senator warned against building "false" hopes of a lightening of the tax burden because of statements favoring the plan issued by members of Congress.

"I do not take much stock in the statements that are being issued by Senators and Congressmen approving the proposed tax program," he said. "It stands to reason that no public official is going to place himself on record at this time as opposed to a reduction of the tax burden of the people.

"I do not believe that a number of the members of Congress who are eulogizing the Mellon plan will vote for it. For my part, I do not wish to make any statement either for or against the Mellon plan, because I think that at this time it is the people who should do the talking and not the Congressmen, whose statements may give false assurance to advocates of Mr. Mellon's program."

FAIRCHILD FOR MELLON PLAN.

Yale Professor Tells Manufacturers Reduction Is Needed.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 22.—At an open meeting in the Hotel Taft today, before members of the Manufacturers' Association of Connecticut, at their annual gathering, Professor F. R. Fairchild of Yale, who delivered an address on taxation in Connecticut, placed himself on record as heartily in favor of the Mellon tax reduction plan.

In answer to a question regarding the plan Professor Fairchild said:

"I am wholeheartedly in favor of it. It will give the individual more chance than ever before. It will give the people a chance to be counted separately instead of being figured as a group in economics. It is high time we had some tax reduction.

"Of course, I expect to see a lot of opposition to the plan, but I cannot conceive of anything to stop it. Of the opposition I look for, the majority will probably come from those who favor the bonus, who are, if any, small taxpayers."

MELLON SAYS TAX CUT WILL REDUCE COSTS

Secretary Declares in Pittsburgh That Relief Will Aid in Continuing Prosperity.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 22.—Reduction in taxation will continue to keep the country prosperous, in the opinion of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, who was in Pittsburgh today to attend the formal opening of the new home of the Union Trust Company.

"A reduction of taxes will work toward the improvement of the condition of the farmer," said Mr. Mellon. "Lower taxation will help to lower costs. The railroads will obtain lower money rates with which to make improvements and carry on their business, with the result that the burden taken off will work out to the benefit of the ultimate consumer.

"However, as far as my suggestions are concerned, regarding the proposed reduction in the income tax, that matter is now in the hands of the Ways and Means Committee, and it no doubt will be touched upon by President Coolidge in his forthcoming message to Congress."

Mr. Mellon did not care to discuss the world situation.

"As for the international situation," he said, "that matter is in the hands of the State Department and the situation is changing so much that I cannot say anything of value at this time about it." Mr. Mellon smiled when the political situation was broached.

"There is really little I can say about that at the present time," he said, "except that President Coolidge appears to be growing in strength daily throughout the nation."

He would not discuss Pennsylvania politics.

COOLIDGE HEARS PLEA TO ADMIT 700 ALIENS

American Jewish Committee Makes Representations to President and Labor Department.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22—President Coolidge took under advisement today a request made by Louis Marshall, representing the American Jewish Committee, that a stay be ordered in deportation proceedings against the approximately 700 immigrants who were detained at Atlantic ports early this month because immigration quotas had been exhausted. Mr. Marshall proposed that the immigrants be admitted under bond pending authorization by Congress for their permanent admittance.

Similar representations have been made by the American Jewish Committee to the Labor Department.

PLANS NATION-WIDE FIGHT FOR TAX CUTS

National Founders Association and Women's Republican Club Endorse Secretary's Proposals.

Led by the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, approximately 1,000 business and trade organizations of the country are expected to deliver a smashing attack on the proposed soldiers' bonus bill and against the opponents of the Mellon tax reduction proposals when these issues come before the next Congress. Officials of the Chamber said yesterday that the Mellon proposals would be taken up at the meeting of the Chamber on Dec. 6 and that if, as they have every reason to believe, the membership subscribes to this program, every similar organization in the United States will be asked to fall in line for concerted action.

In this step, which, from indications yesterday will amount to one of the most comprehensive assaults ever made by the nation's business men upon what they consider an uneconomic measure and in defense of what they consider an economic one, these organizations will have the active assent of a great majority of the memberships of such related bodies as the American Bankers' Association and the Investment Bankers' Association. While these bankers' organizations have yet to make known their position as such, it is known that individually and practically without exception the members favor the Mellon tax plan as opposed to the enactment of a general bonus.

Besides making known its view to an imposing list of other commercial organizations, asking for similar expressions and requesting their co-operation in the campaign, the New York Chamber is expected to urge each member to write to his Senator and Representatives in Congress, asserting his position individually.

Delegation to Attend Hearings.

At the same time the regular procedure of the Chamber of Commerce will call for the memorialization of the entire National Administration, from the President down, and the appointment of a committee or delegation to appear in behalf of the business interests of the country at the hearings to be held in Washington after the Christmas holidays.

The Committee on Taxation of the chamber will meet next week to prepare its report for submission to the chamber membership on Dec. 6, Irving T. Bush, President of the chamber, said yesterday. The members of this committee are Clarence H. Kelsey, Chairman; Donald G. Geddes, H. Hobart Porter, William D. Baldwin, Frederick H. Hurdman, William P. Phillips and A. A. Tilney. Both Mr. Bush and Mr. Kelsey, who is Chairman of the board of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, expressed the belief that the chamber would vote as a unit for the Mellon plan. The organization has repeatedly made known its opposition to the payment of a general bonus.

In his first public comment on the Mellon tax program Mr. Bush said a continuation of the existing tax system would eventually prove injurious to the interests of every one in the country. It had already discouraged capital where it seldom sought legitimate investment in new and productive enterprise, he said, and things had reached a point where the success or failure of a concern depended very largely upon its ability to stand up under the tax assessments.

"The investor is asking, and will continue to ask until the present law is amended, why he should take the risk," Mr. Bush asserted. "If he goes into business and he succeeds, he gives the major part of his profits to the Government in taxes. On the other hand, if he goes into business at this time and does not succeed, he has lost little more than if he had succeeded. In either instance the investor is the loser.

"Every one who is interested in the commerce and business of the country cannot but see the danger in the present system.

"The Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York has a list of nearly a thousand trade and civic organizations throughout the country. I cannot predict in advance what the chamber will do at its next meeting, but it is my judgment, and I believe it is the judgment of the 2,000 members, that the Mellon revisions must go through."

Founders Approve Plan.

The National Founders' Association convention yesterday approved the Mellon tax reduction plan in the following statement:

"We hereby voice our unqualified approval of the recommendations of the honorable Secretary of the Treasury of the United States to Congress to make material reductions in the burdens of national taxation and to improve the efficiency of the Administration.

"This association agrees with Secretary Mellon that his proposals would divert the enormous sums which are now being invested in exempt securities into the channels of manufacturing industry and other lines of business to the manifest advantage of the whole country, and this association is, therefore, emphatically of the opinion that Secretary Mellon's recommendations should be adopted."

The association also deplored the tendency to hamper the railways in their effort to work out their salvation in their own way.

The Women's National Republican Club, at a special meeting at 38 West Thirty-ninth Street, yesterday unanimously endorsed Secretary Mellon's tax reduction proposal. A letter from the organization to Mr. Mellon, containing this endorsement, will be mailed today. Professor William Starr Myers of Princeton, in an address, also voiced his approval of the tax cut. Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, President of the club, presided. About 200 women were present.

APPROVED IN INDIANAPOLIS.

Chamber of Commerce Endorses Mellon Tax Reduction Plan.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 22.—By unanimous vote the Board of Directors of the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce today approved the tax program proposed by Secretary Mellon. In announcing the action, President McWhirter said:

"The recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury for a reduction in taxes and for the elimination from the Government's program of measures that would mean increased taxation merit the commendation of business men generally.

"The proposal to reduce the taxes on earned incomes will have a wholesome effect on the entire nation if it is enacted into law by the coming Congress. The whole plan as outlined in the Secretary's recommendations is fair to business, large and small, and if made operative will have a far-reaching effect in mitigating against tax legislation that is destructive to business enterprises.

"In announcing its approval of the Mellon program the Chamber of Commerce is voicing the sentiment of the business men, who have given serious thought to the subject of taxes and who welcome a sound move on the part of a Government department to reduce the cost of Government."

The vote of John R. Welch, Vice President of the Chamber of Commerce, was accompanied by a letter in which he said:

"I think it important that the business men and civic organizations of the country express their approval of the Secretary's attitude in the matter in such a way as to let the Congress know what the business interests of the country think should be done in the matter. Personally, I unqualifiedly approve the Secretary's recommendation."

L. M. Wainwright, a director, in a letter voiced the approval of himself and of the Diamond Chain & Manufacturing Company, saying that the Mellon program "represents a constructive method of increasing our national revenue and at the same time lowering our tax rates, all of which will be reflected in increased business and lower costs to the consumer."

B. A. Worthington, one of the directors, said:

300,000 SALESMEN BACK MELLON PLAN

National Council Representing 38 Associations Send Message to Smoot.

Support of Secretary Mellon's tax reduction plan is contained in a telegram sent to Senator Reed Smoot of the Finance Committee of the Senate by the National Council of Traveling Salesmen's Associations. Ratification of the Executive Committee's endorsement of the Mellon plan was made last night at a meeting at the Hotel Pennsylvania. A. M. Loeb, President of the council, said it represented thirty-eight salesmen's associations, with a combined membership of 300,000.

"The traveling salesmen of the nation approve and commend the wisdom of your position regarding the reduction of the fearful tax burden under which the initiative and progress of our people is being smothered," Mr. Loeb said in the telegram. "Tax relief is as mandatory as bonus legislation would be unwise. The able manhood of our soldiery should not be insulted, but the veterans who fought under the flag and who are in need of aid should receive it to the fullest extent."

Explaining in further detail his organization's stand on the proposition, Mr. Loeb said:

"The National Council wants the Government to provide for the disabled and incapacitated veterans. We believe it is an obligation and duty of the Government to provide for these men. We do oppose, though, the payment of a bonus to men who suffered no injury because of their service in behalf of their country. We believe that the thinking men embraced in the ranks of the veterans upon deliberation will coincide with our position because, in the final analysis, physically able men who participate in the bonus will repay in the form of taxation all that they receive in bonus.

"The reduction of taxation would, in our opinion, necessarily improve the business of the traveling salesmen, and the public generally would share in that improvement. Salesmen would directly benefit by a reduction of their taxes, and a reduction of their taxes means a reduction in the cost of doing business, which is to the advantage of the consumer. Likewise the general effect upon the country by this evidence of the country's sound financial condition inspires confidence and gives impetus to the business energies of the community at large.

"It encourages business men to initiate new commercial and industrial enterprises. It will have an impetus in causing men to invest in old enterprises rather than placing their surplus funds in tax-exempt securities."

SERVICE MEN BACK MELLON.

Anti-Bonus League Sends Messages of Approval to Washington.

The ex-Service Men's Anti-Bonus League of 19 West Forty-fourth Street sent telegrams yesterday to President Coolidge, Secretary Mellon and United States Senators Smoot and Lodge expressing the organization's approval of the tax reduction program. The message to Secretary Mellon was as follows:

"Hon. Andrew Mellon,

"Secretary of the Treasury,

"Washington, D. C.

"We heartily approve your attitude upon the proposed adjusted compensation measure which certain leaders of the American Legion are again seeking to impose upon this country. We are opposed to any attempt to place our service to the country in time of its need upon the basis of a contract. We resent the thought of having the finest thing we have ever done or probably ever will do for the nation spoiled by being reduced to terms of wages. The incidental reduction of taxes upon all citizens proposed is not sound business judgment and common sense, but we are chiefly concerned that we shall no longer be misrepresented to our fellow citizens as beggars for a bonus.

"We wish every member of Congress to know that the element that is so loudly voicing this demand does not represent a majority opinion of ex-service men. No poll has ever been taken to determine this question, but we believe a very large proportion of veterans are opposed to a Federal bonus for the able-bodied. We welcome your advocacy of tax reduction, because it has helped mightily to crystallize public opinion. Because the vast majority of ex-service men placed the welfare of their country above all else during the war, we are convinced they now favor your tax reduction program, even though it means no adjusted compensation for the able-bodied."

JEWS HERE GIVE $350,000.

Two-Thirds of City's Quota for Seminary Fund Already Raised.

More than two-thirds of New York's quota of $500,000 toward the $1,000,000 endowment fund for the Jewish Theological Seminary has been raised since the campaign started a week ago, it was reported last night at a meeting of committees and other workers at the Hotel Astor. New York's total to date is $350,000.

Among the largest contributions and pledges are: Congregation Bnai Jeshurum, $45,955; Congregation Anache Chesed, $23,000; the Society for the Advancement of Judaism, $10,000; Mount Vernon Committee, $1,000; Montefiore Congregation, the Bronx, $3,000; Congregation Shaarey Torah, Brooklyn, $1,300; Congregation Schaare Zedek, $5,000; Washington Heights Congregation, $7,500. There also were thirty-eight individual contributions of $500 each.

Funds announced by committees in other States total $240,000, including $30,000 in New England, $35,000 in New Jersey, $15,000 in Ohio, and $10,000 each for Louisville and Baltimore.

Millikan of the California Institute of Technology, a recent winner of the Nobel Prize for physics, has been notified of the award to him of the Hughes Medal by the Royal Society of London. WILL BACK MURPHY ON DRY REFERENDUM

Tammany Leader Gets Many Messages at French Lick About His Recent Move.

PLANS TO PRESS PROGRAM

Special to The New York Times.

FRENCH LICK, Ind., Nov. 22.—Since he came out some days ago in favor of nation-wide referendum on the question of liberalizing the Volstead law, Charles F. Murphy, it was learned today, has received messages from all parts of the country approving the stand he has taken.

Mr. Murphy is unwilling to make public any of the these missives because they carry no authorization looking to their publication. It is known, however, that while many have come from political leaders of his own party, by far the large percentage was sent by bankers, business men and others not actively identified with Democratic politics.

In his recent statement the Tammany leader suggested that for the purpose of giving voters throughout the country their first real opportunity for an expression of their views on this situation, and thus set agitation at rest, a plank should be embodied in the party platform pronouncing in favor of modification of the Volstead act by fixing a limit on the alcoholic content of permissible beverages beyond the present limitation and at a figure more closely in accord with what, upon scientific determination, shall be found to be really intoxicating. This would be the work of Congress.

Further, Mr. Murphy expressed the view that within any new limitation established the States should be at liberty under the Eighteenth Amendment to legalize the manufacture and traffic in the higher-voltage beverages after the question has been submitted to the voters. In effect, Mr. Murphy's plan would provide for a double referendum.

Not all, by any means, of those from whom Mr. Murphy has heard are "wets," nor, it was learned, are all in favor of even tampering with the present rigor of prohibition law, as Murphy's tentative plank proposes. But without exception they all approve the proposal of having the voters pass upon the question; that is, all with the exception of a comparatively small number that expressed themselves out of sympathy with what he suggested.

It was said today that there is now every reason to believe that the suggestion of Mr. Murphy will be followed up, at least to the extent that such a plank will be presented to the Committee on Resolutions in the Democratic National Convention next year. And the prospect of its possible adoption by the convention is now viewed here with a great deal more optimism than when the Tammany leader threw out the suggestion.

Mr. Murphy, on the strength of election results last year and this, believes that his own State has changed from a State with a dry preference to a State with a wet majority. He has stated this belief with a great deal of emphasis since he reached French Lick. Reports which have been received here while the conferences have been in progress, according to one of the leaders who participated, are indicative of a change in the same direction in some parts of the country where a couple years ago the preponderance of public sentiment was dry beyond any question.

The Democratic leaders who have been conferring here are not overlooking the fact that a majority of what is known as the "rural vote" remains dry. But they believe that the farmers have questions much nearer to their hearts and pocketbooks than the liquor question and that as long as the Democratic Party in its platform does not overlook these, the platform pronouncement on prohibition will prove only of secondary importance in the rural sections.

While the leaders at the French Lick conference realize that owing to poor markets for farmers' products and the high price of commodities, the party will be afforded an unequaled opportunity next year for a telling appeal to the rural voters, and propose to take advantage of this, they recognize that as in other years the big cities throughout the country constitute by far the most promising field to the Democrats in a national election.

In the cities, especially the larger municipalities with a big yield of votes, they are convinced the plank proposed by Mr. Murphy would prove exceedingly popular and eclipse in the interest it would arouse the League of Nations, tariff reform, or almost any other issue that could be injected into the campaign.

ATTACKS ON JEWS BROUGHT UP IN DAIL

Irish Home Minister Says an Investigation Is On—Suspects Private Vengeance.

DUBLIN, Nov. 22 (Associated Press).—The possibility of pogroms in Ireland was discussed in the Dail Eireann today when Daniel McCarthy asked the Home Minister for information relative to the recent murder of Jewish citizens in the streets of Dublin and whether any special precautions had been taken to protect the Jews from further attacks.

The Home Minister, Kevin O'Higgins, replied that sectarian crime had not within living memory manifested itself in Dublin, and he did not believe the city now faced anything so horrible. He was inclined to the view that some perverted mentality had been seeking private vengeance; he stated that energetic investigation was now proceeding, and added that the Jews had never been persecuted in Ireland and that all decent citizens would view with disgust any departure from that record.

TO FIGHT DAYLIGHT SAVING.

National Grange Organizes for Contest Here.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 22.—The fight of the National Grange against daylight saving is to be carried into New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and New England through an organization of State masters perfected at a session of the Grange here today. Allen B. Cook of Niantic, Conn., was chosen the leader.

The movement is to be directed against existing laws for daylight saving and to fight State plans for the enactment of similar legislation. In co-operation with the National Grange, the committee also is to set on foot a campaign for the passage of a new "Standard Time law," so worded that it will be a Federal statute with which the individual States cannot interfere.

At the executive session last night the Grange adopted a number of resolutions, which were made public this morning as follows:

Urging the enactment of a "truth in fabrics" act and asking similar legislation to prevent untruthful labeling and advertising of fertilizer, seeds and insecticides.

Asking the extension of the postal savings law to small communities.

Resolutions opposing the revival of free distribution of seeds and any weakening of the national prohibition law also were adopted.

FOREIGNERS CROWD ALL PARIS HOTELS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 22.—Paris has now 1,356 more hotels than before the war. For tourists there are available 235,000 bedrooms in hotels and boarding houses, an increase of 30,000 since 1914.

But there are not enough. Apart from the casual holiday visitor to Paris from foreign lands, there are, according to police statistics, 400,000 resident foreigners in the city, a big proportion of whom live in hotels. In the past two years the number of resident foreigners has increased by more than 100,000, and the police receive 300 applications a day for permission to remain.

Today the Minister of the Interior laid before the Cabinet a new proposal for the control of the number and employment of foreign workers, who are becoming a serious problem. France can easily make use of them, but finds it essential to have some control of their movements and activities.

SOIL OF BATTLEFIELDS FOR ITALIAN LEADERS

D'Annunzio Will Receive One of Twenty Bronze Memorial Urns Containing It.

ROME, Nov. 22.—Twenty bronze urns are being prepared in which Premier Mussolini will place earth collected from the battlefield of the Piave and Carso by an expedition under Major Giuriati, former Minister of Liberated Regions. Fourteen of the urns will be forwarded to Italians in South America, while the remaining six will be offered to the Italian leaders who were most prominent in the World War.

One will be presented to Gabriel d'Annunzio, to whom also will be sent stones from the Timavo River, in which region the soldier-poet greatly distinguished himself. It is expected that the stones will be incorporated in the altar erected by d'Annunzio in the garden of his villa where he holds services in honor of his fallen comrades.

Y. M. C. A. ANNUAL DINNER.

Dr. John R. Mott Foresees Difficult 15 Years for Christianity.

Dr. John R. Mott was the chief speaker last night at the annual dinner of the International Committee of Young Men's Christian Associations at the Waldorf-Astoria. The next fifteen years he predicted as a period of great difficulty for Christianity, but asserted that when Christianity had been made difficult it had always been victorious.

A motion picture displaying the growth of the Y. M. C. A. from its founding to the present preceded the addresses. Other speakers were: G. K. Hooper Jr., Secretary of the Transportation Department of the International Committee, Y. M. C. A.; Arthur Cotton, Senior Secretary of the Boys' Work Department International Committee, and C. V. Hibbard, Associate General Secretary of the International Committee in charge of the service in Western Europe.

HELEN HAMILTON FAILING.

Death of Camden Child Expected at Any Time.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMDEN, N. J., Nov. 22.—Orders not to leave Helen Hamilton alone were issued today by physicians who are attending the dying child. "The end is very near," said Dr. W. W. Kain, "it is more than likely that little Helen will die in her sleep."

Two New York specialists examined the dying child last night and said nothing could be done to save her life. The specialists advised against any one being permitted to see the girl except her mother and Mrs. May Schock, who took in the mother and child after they had been evicted from a rooming house.

Helen is dying of a dilated heart, as a result of a shock seven years ago when she was buried in a hole by playmates.

REPUBLICANS FAVOR CHICAGO NEXT YEAR

Treasurer Upham Says That City Has a Cinch on the National Convention.

SAN FRANCISCO OUT OF IT

Cleveland Regarded as Too Much of an Experiment—Mellon Tax Plan Approved.

The Republican National Convention next year will be held in Chicago, according to Fred W. Upham, Treasurer of the Republican National Committee. Mr. Upham gave this as his opinion after a conference yesterday with Charles D. Hilles, Republican National Committeeman from New York, at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Mr. Upham said that the subcommittee of the National Committee would formally ratify the choice at a meeting to be held in Chicago on Dec. 11 and 12, called to select the time and place of the convention. Mr. Upham, whose home city is Chicago, said that Chicago was now far in the lead, having outdistanced its nearest rivals, San Francisco and Cleveland.

"It's a cinch that the convention will be held in Chicago," said Mr. Upham after his conference with Mr. Hilles. "Has Chicago matched the offers of the other cities?" he was asked.

"Chicago will do all and more than the other cities to get the Republican Convention there next year," he replied.

San Francisco's Inducements.

In its eagerness to get the convention San Francisco submitted to the subcommittee of the National Committee a list of 150 available hotels and apartments, showing that it would be well able to furnish all the accommodations necessary. It also submitted menus of the different hotels, showing present prices and also an agreement that these prices would prevail throughout the convention period and that there would be no advance whatever in hotel rates.

Cleveland also submitted a list of its hotels and drew attention to the Ohio law which forbids a city in that State raising its hotel rates without an advance notice of sixty days.

Mr. Upham said that throughout the West a strong sentiment had sprung up among the people in favor of the tax reduction plan of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

"It is the most popular thing that any Administration has ever attempted," he said. "The sentiment in Chicago is unanimous for it. Even the Democrats frankly admit that it is the very thing needed to strengthen business and restore the confidence of the country."

Representative Bertrand H. Snell of Potsdam, N. Y., who is being spoken of for Chairman of the Committee on Rules of the House, of which he is the ranking member, returned yesterday from Washington. He said the Mellon tax plan was being favorably considered by his fellow-members. He said there was general praise of President Coolidge for the manner in which he has handled problems since he has been in office. A feeling exists on all sides, he said, that Mr. Coolidge should have a chance to prove his fitness for President.

Snell Approves Mellon Plan.

"Personally," said Mr. Snell, "I approve of the Mellon plan. I think that in all respects it is a fine thing, for it is founded on facts and figures with all guess work eliminated. It is the first definite tax revision scheme that has been proposed by anybody.

"During the war we got into the habit of spending money right and left, because we wanted to do our part with the greatest speed without regard to the cost. Now the chickens are coming home to roost. The debt service, on account of the bond issues, must be met and the plain people of the country must foot the bills. They are feeling the pinch of heavy taxation, and any plan like the one proposed by Mr. Mellon to relieve the burden meets with instant response.

"It will be especially grateful to a large number of the people who are on salaries of from $2,000 to $10,000 a year. The Mellon plan gives relief to these very people. If the effectuation of the reduction goes through uncomplicated with certain features which some Congressman want to hitch to it, it will be a great piece of constructive legislation. Getting it through will make the new session of Congress a most interesting one."

Charles D. Hilles of New York is a member of the subcommittee of the Republican National Committee which has charge of selecting a convention city. The other members are David W. Mulvane of Kansas, Chairman; William M. Butler of Massachusetts and Ralph E. Williams of Oregon. It was not only because Chicago could guarantee ample hotel accommodations at reasonable rates to hadle a convention crowd that decided the subcommittee in favor of that city, it was said yesterday, but the fact that Chicago is the right city geographically.

It was in Chicago that President Harding and Vice President Coolidge were nominated in 1920. President Coolidge is said to have indicated his desire to have the convention there next year. He has many friends among the present National Committeemen, who will remain in office until the Republicans meet next year. Des Moines, Iowa, was in the race as a convention city for a short time, but soon dropped out. The announcement by Senator Hiram Johnson of California of his candidacy is said to have eliminated San Francisco from all consideration as the place to hold the convention next year, while Cleveland, which has never had a national convention, was considered as offering too much of an experiment.

DECLARES AIR SERVICE ENTIRELY INADEQUATE

Gen. Patrick Reports to Weeks That Personnel and Equipment Are Insufficient.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Major Gen. Patrick, Chief of the Army Aviation Service, asserts in his annual report to Secretary Weeks, made public today, that the peace organization of the service now bears no relation to its war requirements, and affords little or no foundation upon which war requirements either in personnel or material can be built.

Two problems of vital importance, he says, present themselves for immediate consideration, first, the total inadequacy of the Air Service, and second, the need for a radical change in the methods of procurment, replacement and elimination.

The authorized strength of the service, of 1,061 officers and 8,764 enlisted men, including 190 flying cadets, is inadequate and the service is operating on a basis which does not permit the fulfillment of its mission, General Patrick declares. Any further reduction will result in greater deficiencies and only a substantial increase can enable it to meet the demands placed upon it.

"If the required number of officers were available," the report continues, "if the enlisted strength were adequate, or if the civilians might be employed, the difficulties would not be so perplexing, but with continued reductions in every class of personnel, efficient operation becomes an impossibility."

In the establishment of new flying fields and in the selection for retention of certain fields among those operated during the war, General Patrick says every possible effort has been made to develop a comprehensive airway system, to stimulate commercial aeronautics as well as to fulfill the strategic needs of national defense.

The achievement of this ideal has been quite impossible, he adds, due to the reduced strength of the air service, the enforced concentration of activities and the consequent lack of operating personnel.

General Patrick points out the lack of an adequate aeronautical industry in the United States. "Unless such an industry can be built up in time of peace," he says, "the war-time program must fall far short of its goal. The solution of this problem lies in the development of commercial aviation through the timely enactment of suitable legislation and by judicious expenditure of such funds as may be appropriated for the support of Government aeronautical activities."

Norris, engineer, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; George Otis Smith, Director of the United States Geological Survey; P. B. Butler of Joplin, Mo.; B. D. Quarrie of Cleveland, Ohio; L. D. of coping with crime and preventing raids on holiday shoppers. The Acting Mayor called into conference at the City Hall District Attorney Joab H. Banton of New York County, District Attorney Charles Perkins of Kings County and Acting District Attorney Cohn of Bronx County.

Later in the day he conferred with Acting Police Commissioner John A. Leach and announced he would seek a conference with the Magistrates to the end of establishing a standard of dealing with hold-ups, burglaries, &c.

"Effective measures with regard to the prevention of lawlessness and the most expeditious means of securing immediate prosecution of lawbreakers were discussed at today's conference," said a statement issued at City Hall.

"It was determined at the conference that the District Attorneys, who now have control over the criminal court calendars, would give precedence on the calendars to all such criminal cases, where arrests are made, in order that they may be presented immediately to the Grand Jury and prompt trial had. The instant prosecution and swift punishment of offenders would, it was believed, have a deterrent effect upon the criminally-minded.

Aid of Bankers Asked.

"District Attorney Banton pointed out the need of increased caution at this time on the part of shoppers because of the greater sums of money carried about for Christmas shopping. The fact was particularly stressed that because of the need of ready money for Christmas purposes, the movement of cash to and from banks had increased. Toward the insurance of maximum protection for such convoys, Acting Mayor Hulbert urged that the bankers themselves be asked to aid. His suggestion was that instead of attempting to move quantities of cash surreptitiously, knowledge of which too often comes secretly to criminals through confederates employed on the inside, the bankers should apply to the Police Captain of their precinct for the assignment of a man in uniform to accompany the convoy. With this co-operation extended by the banking institutions to the police, it was the belief of the conference that many crimes of highway robbery would be forestalled and the whole problem of sporadic lawlessness made easier of solution.

"The Acting Mayor plans to have Chief Magistrate McAdoo call upon him with a view to arranging a conference of all the City Magistrates for the purpose of determining upon a uniform standard for all Magistrates in dealing with particular classes of cases."

Orders from Police Headquarters for a round-up of known criminals resulted in the presence yesterday of the largest number of prisoners in the line-up in many months. Forty-one were on view among them a woman. She was Louise Johnson, 23, a maid, arrested Wednesday night on a charge of burglary. According to detectives to whom she told her story after the Headquarters display of prisoners, she was led to commit crime by a desire to help a Sing Sing convict.

The young woman, a native of Norway, who came to the United States six years ago, was arrested by Detective Joseph Daly in a furnished room at 350 West Seventy-first Street, where the detective found a packet of love letters from a prison inmate. In them he told of his coming release, his desire to marry her and settle down to start life anew in a home in California. The convict was an artist.

Miss Johnson told the police that two months ago she obtained employment as a maid in the home of Mrs. Beverly Robinson at Merrick, L. I. Detectives said she confessed that while the Robinsons were out the night of Oct. 29 she stole $2,500 worth of clothing and jewelry and fled. They asserted she admitted that on the night of Nov. 17, knowing the Robinsons were out again, she entered their home and this time took property worth $11,000. Most of the stolen property was recovered. The woman said she was prompted by a desire to build up a fund with which to establish a home for herself and the convict on his release.

Handkerchiefs saturated with chloroform were applied yesterday to Samuel Cooper, a jeweler of 598 Broadway, Bayonne, a block from the East Thirty-third Street station of the Jersey Central Railroad in Bayonne, by two men, who got away with two rings valued at a total of $6,000. They lacerated his fingers in taking off the rings. In their haste to escape they overlooked a box containing $5,000 worth of jewelry in their victim's clothes and a diamond stickpin and gold watch he carried.

Because he could not explain his presence at an early morning hour on the rear fire-escape of the five-story tenement building at 87 Rivington Street, John Prazbsky, 24, of 153 Sixth Street, Jersey City, a kitchen man, was arrested on a charge of unlawful entry by Detectives O'Rorke and Keane of the Clinton Street Police Station. A woman had telephoned she had seen a man on the fire-escape. The prisoner, taken on the second floor landing, said: "I don't know myself how I got here."

After a chase of a block, Antino Gerbigniel of 21 Union Street, Brooklyn, was arrested by Traffic Patrolman James Young on the charge that he stole a suit of clothes from the store of Joseph Rysil at 323 Livingston Street, Brooklyn.

John Lamagano and John Glacobo, awakening yesterday morning in a room at the rear of their candy store at 426 West Fifty-second Street, saw several men in the store. Lamagano fired a revolver at them, wounding Thomas Burke, 24, of 436 West Fifty-second Street, in the left thigh. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital. The store proprietors were arrested on a charge of felonious assault

PLEA FOR A TARIFF TO BRITISH WOMEN

Chamberlain Argues That It Will Increase Wages and Buying Power.

ASQUITH'S FREE TRADE VIEW

Says England's Traditional Policy Enabled Her to Finance the War for Three Years.

Copyright, 1923, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Four of the "big guns" of the electoral campaign were in action today—ex-Premier Asquith, Winston Churchill, J. Ramsay Macdonald and Neville Chamberlain.

All the parties realize that women's votes will play a more important part in this election than ever before, and in recognition of that fact the Unionist women held a mass meeting this afternoon in Drury Lane Theatre and listened to a speech from the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Importance of the Women's Vote.

The importance attached to the women's vote is not only in recognition of the large proportion of women in the electorate, but of the fact that tariff reform has a distinct women's side. Men may debate its effect on national credit and commerce; women consider how it will touch their weekly household budgets. Women are the financial controllers of the average family, and they understand as no men do the effect of outgo and income. So, while the free traders have been telling them how tariffs will send up their weekly catering bills, the Government supporters, banking on the Premier's pledge against food taxes, are replying: "What does it matter if you pay a little more on one or two articles if thereby you secure the payment of wages which will enable you to bear the cost of living?"

So Mr. Chamberlain this afternoon took up with his audience of women the general effect of protective duties on prices. Winston Churchill, he said, had declared that he, Mr. Chamberlain, had expressed the view that protection must increase the cost of everything protected. He said he must ask Mr Churchill, if he wanted to quote his arguments, to quote the whole of them. Tariffs, he considered, affected prices in different ways, according to circumstances. If this country could produce at home enough goods to take the place of those it excluded byi ts protective duties, prices would not be altered at all. And even if the home supply could not be sufficiently increased, and if the importer could pass on some of the duties he paid to the consumers, this was not the whole of the story.

Effect of Tariff On Home Prices.

"In considering the possible effect of the tariff on prices," Mr. Chamberlain said, "you who have to spend the money of the household have not to think merely of the cost of the things you are purchasing. You have to consider what is coming into the household as well as what is going out. It is no use having the cheapest market in the world if you have nothing with which to buy what you want."

He also spoke of the Government's policy of developing the resources of the British Empire, and in the course of it had a few words to say about Mr. Lloyd George. Some people, he said, were so embittered by party spite that they could see nothing in these proposals but tin cans and dead crabs. Such gibes were more worthy of a pothouse politician than of a statesman who had just returned from a visit to the senior Dominion. All the Government was proposing to do, he said, was to put a duty of 10 shillings per hundredweight on tinned salmon which came from America and to allow tinned salmon which came from Canada to enter British markets free. Then Mr. Chamberlain explained how greatly, in his opinion, this preference would benefit Canada as compared with the United States. New capital would flow into Canada, new factories would be erected and a fresh army of men would find employment on the Canadian side of the international boundary.

That was the benefit to Canada; but was there no benefit to this country also? Every man employed in a Canadian factory on the Canadian side of the invisible barrier bought goods from this country to the amount of £2 16s., 80 per cent. of which was in manufactured goods, as against 10s. 2d. purchased by the man employed on the American side. There was something more than crabs, he said, in that policy. Mr. Chamberlain took another fling at Mr. Lloyd George as he remarked that the cans used in the canning trade were made of tin plate, the manufacture of which was one of the chief industries of Wales. In a letter which he said he had seen from one of the largest manufacturers of tin plate in Wales it was stated that for two years his factory had shipped from 500,000 pounds to 600,000 pounds of tin plate for the salmon-canning industry in America, and that the whole of its working force had been kept fully employed. The prosperity of Wales was largely built upon tin cans, and the last person in the world to sneer at them should be a Welshman.

Ex-Premier Asquith, speaking at Bradford today, declared that Sir Robert Horne's statement that the war had been won only by the financial support of France and the United States was "a travesty of actual facts."

"For three years or more," said Mr. Asquith, "we financed on our own credit all our European Allies out of resources accumulated under the free trade system, but for that the country could not have carried on at all. They still owe us hundreds of thousands of millions on paper, not a farthing of which has been paid, while we are steadily repaying our debts to America. There cannot be a more complete vindication of free trade as the only fiscal system suited to the geographic and economic requirements of this country."

Banbury Argues for Protection.

The City of London Unionist Association today renominated its former members of Parliament, Sir Frederick Banbury and E. C. Grenfell. The City, as the money market of the world, has been for nearly a century one of the chief free trade strongholds of the country, and its agreement without protest in the Government's program of tariff reform is regarded in Unionist circles as a strong argument in favor of its absolute necessity.

In addressing the association Sir Frederick explained that if worldwide free trade were possible he would be in favor of it, but the unemployment situation was so serious that he could not see how the country could do anything but adopt the policy of Premier Baldwin.

Mr. Grenfell spoke in the same strain. He said he had been born a free trader and had remained a free trader as long as possible, but he could not see how Englishmen could remain with their hands tied behind their backs while everyone else hit them. Since the war, he continued, every country of importance had raised a tariff wall against England so high that he goods could not get over it, and he saw no way of helping British trade save by some form of retaliation.

LONDON, Nov. 22 (Associated Press).—Herbert H. Asquith, J. Ramsay MacDonald and Winston Spencer Churchill, all in opposition to the Government, again were on the election platform today. Mr. Churchill carried out a particularly strenuous program of speech-making. Premier Baldwin and former Premier Lloyd George had a day of rest. Mr. Baldwin is preparing to visit his constituency Saturday. He will speak at Bewdley and remain at his Worcestershire home over the week-end and proceed to Bristol Monday.

Tomorrow Mr. Lloyd George will start on what may be compared with the Midlothian campaign of Gladstone memory. He will seize every opportunity to speak from his train, but he will have to do it from his car window, as the English trains have no back platforms. Mr. Lloyd George will speak at Glasgow Saturday and at Paisley with Mr. Asquith Saturday evening. He will continue his whirlwind tri pto Edinburgh Monday. Then he will tour the Lancashire district, where he will encounter hordes of unemployed.

"I mean to go to the limit of my capacity on behalf of the reunited liberalism," said the former Premier today.

Mr. MacDonald, who is the Leabor leader in Parliament, continuing his motor tour, will go to Worksop Saturday in support of his son, who, like four other sons of members of the House of Commons, Major Lloyd George included, are seeking seats beside their fathers.

SOCIALIST CHIEFS BAN HECKLING LADY ASTOR

Speaking With Fewer Interruptions, She Taunts Hostile Hearers About Their Orders.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PLYMOUTH, England, Nov. 22.—Lady Astor has somewhat modified her tactics in dealing with her Socialist hecklers. Instead of goading them to fury by fierce attacks upon their principles, she adopted tonight the policy of reminding them that their leaders had told them not to interrupt her meeting.

"I know how restive you are under the word of your leaders," she said, "but you have got to obey so keep quiet. I said last night—and I meant it—that I was not going to get upon a single platform if I had to have Hooligan hyenas yelling at me every time I spoke, because an election to me is a serious thing, and not time for simply bawling about something you know nothing about. You can do that with men, but you cannot with me."

She added that their Socialist leaders had more "gumption" than their followers. This assertion had a mixed reception, after which she shouted:

"You are not here to hear what you want, but what I'm going to tell you. I am not a paid delegate; I am a free white woman. You can follow the red flag, but you won't get England to follow it."

After this she had a fairly patient hearing, but now and then she was called upon to silence interrupters, as, for instance, when she said: "When I want to know what the Labor Party are thinking I read The Daily Herald, and then I know they are not thinking at all."

She was so pleased at her success in subduing interrupters that at the close of her speech she could not refrain from chaffing them, saying:

"They have intended so well that I should not be surprised if my sweet reasonableness had won them to my side."

Washington Says Official Attendance Is Impracticable—Open Ports Proposed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Lewis W. Haskell, American Consul at Geneva, it was disclosed today at the State Department, is acting as American observer at the second general conference on communications and transport which convened under the auspices of the League of Nations at Geneva on Nov. 15. The Washington Government was invited to participate in the first conference, which met in Barcelona, but declined.

The second conference is continuing the work begun by the first, and in connection with instructions sent to Consul Haskell the State Department's announcement said:

"When the invitation was received from the League of Nations to participate in the second conference the matter was carefully considered and the views of the interested departments of this Government were ascertained. While it was not practicable for this Government to participate as a member of the conference, the United States Consul at Geneva has been instructed to follow the proceedings and to keep this Government fully advised."

LONDON, Nov. 22.—T. Ward Hulton has presented £76,000 (about $334,000 at present exchange) to the staffs of the newspapers which he sold recently for £6,000,000. They include The Evening Standard of London and The Daily Despatch and Evening Chronicle of Manchester.

Commenting on this The Evening Standard writes:

"There is an enormous benefaction. I suppose there exists the critic who will say that it is not much out of £6,000,000 for which the Hulton newspapers were sold, but that critic is a type who had he been present at the miracle of loaves and fishes would have complained that the bread was stale and the fish not as fresh as it might be. I cannot recall any parallel of generosity on such a gigantic scale in the case of a proprietor leaving a business."

JAPAN CRITICISES DECISION.

Upholding of Land Laws Is Called Discrimination.

TOKIO, Nov. 22 (Associated Press).—Lengthy comment on the decision of the United States Supreme Court sustaining the alien land laws of California and Washington is contained in yesterday's editions of some of the leading Japanese newspapers.

Regret is expressed at what the Chugai Shogyo terms "evidence of racial discrimination, which is inconsistent with the humanity, justice and benevolence to which the American Government and people traditionally are pledged."

The Hochi in a similar vein states:

"If the agitators' final object is not to drive out all Japanese from America, the anti-alien land laws should be modified."

The Kokumin advises the Government to redouble its efforts to settle the immigration question, because, the newspaper asserts, "Japanese friendship never will be permanently cemented until the spirit of discrimination has been eliminated."

FIND KING DAVID'S CITADEL.

Prof. Macalister Says Excavators Are Uncovering Biblical "Millo."

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The report of the discovery of traces of the ancient city of David which came from Jerusalem some time ago is confirmed in a dispatch from Professor Robert A. Macalister, leader of the joint expedition sent to the Holy Land by the Palestine Exploration Fund and The Daily Telegraph.

Professor Macalister says he has every reason to believe that by a fortunate coincidence the expedition has discovered the remains of the mysterious "Millo," mentioned in the Biblical description of David's fortifications in the Jebusite citadel he captured. The statement that the King built "roundabout from Millo" has always puzzled commentators. It has been conjectured that "Millo" was a tower or dam, but it has been agreed that only excavation could reveal its true identity. It is believed that Professor Macalister is now in a position to supply precise information.

PARIS SURE NOTES WON'T MOVE BERLIN

Prediction Is Made That Next Six Months Will Show the British Idea Is Wrong.

TALK OF NEW WAR SOON

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 22.—In Paris there is not the slightest belief in the efficacy of the notes sent to Germany last night by the Conference of Ambassadors asking for resumption of military control in Germany. It is the general belief here that actual military supervision of Germany is about ended and that France must herself take measures to insure her security.

Ever since the war ended it has been the idea of the military chiefs of France that the safety of the country lay in holding the Rhine. And so the situation has raised the question whether M. Poincaré was making a real concession to preserve allied unity when he signed last night's note to the Reich, or whether he has not outplayed the British Cabinet in a manner to give the French one more claim to the Rhine.

What, it is asked, would have happened in M. Poincaré had refused to accept the British point of view? And it is answered that the English would have withdrawn from the Commission of Control and perhaps the Italians and Japanese, too, leaving the French facing the manifestly impracticable task of supervising the military equipment of all Germany. The next six months, it is argued, will show the British idea to be wrong. If M. Poincaré had refused and future efforts at control proved futile the onus would have been on him. As it is now if efforts at control prove futile as the French expect, they say the onus will not be on Paris, but on London, and that such an outcome would place the French Nationalists in a very much stronger position in proclaiming their intention to hold the Rhine as security against German revenge.

Some Expect New War Soon.

Many Frenchmen expect another war with Germany within five years, and indeed there are not lacking those who believe that were it not for the antagonism it would arouse among France's former allies, the wisest and easiest step would be to have it over sooner.

M. Poincaré will, it is expected, reply in the Chamber tomorrow to his critics, who accuse him of backing down on German policy. He is more or less caught between two fires. On the one hand there are those who hold that the allied accord yesterday was only a façade and want to question the Premier on the wisdom of a policy which is separating France from her allies. And, on the other hand, there are those who, like M. Tardieu, attack the Premier for sacrificing the rights of France to maintain agreement with England.

The Paris press agrees today that the notes to Germany last night amount to little, but there is sharp division as to whether M. Poincaré should have signed them. The Government press argues that, inasmuch as interallied military control in Germany long ago became a joke, the Premier paid only a small price to maintain the agreement with England. Others argue that in adopting a platonic tone toward Germany in respect of military control, Mr. Poincaré was endangering the future of the country.

Pertinax, in the Echo de Paris, argues that in holding the Rhine and Ruhr the French have the only real guarantee against Germany, and that it would have been foolish to break with England in order to gain nothing. He says the simplest program for France is to watch the armaments of Germany and remain on the Rhine so long as there appears any probability that Germany has exceeded the military strength allotted her under the treaty.

Would Maintain a Barrier.

The Intransigeant says it would not do France any good to march on Berlin or try to control all the military organizations in Germany, for in the present state of German opinion that would require half a million men.

"The only thing for us to do," it goes on, "is to turn to the Rhineland and Ruhr and install ourselves there as much for security as for reparations. If we do this we shall not need one extra soldier and we will make of the occupied provinces a barrier against Germany."

This paper thinks that so long as Germany is obliged to begin another war without the Ruhr and with the Ruhr and with the Rhine to cross she will not start it.

The Liberté thinks France should proclaim her intention to keep the Rhine, since the protections given her by the treaty are vanishing into thin air.

The Journal des Débats thinks M. Poincaré is wise in not undertaking new occupation to force Germany to observe the disarmament clauses. It says much depends on Germany. It has little faith in German good-will, but says that in any event the French retain their right to individual action if necessary.

The Temps says what happened is that France made great concessions to preserve the entente with England and is waiting with open mind to see if concessions on the disarmament of Germany bring any better luck than concessions on reparations. It is possible, says the Temps, that the new form of control will be inefficacious, but that that will be a bridge to cross when it is reached. The Temps continues:

"The position of France is very simple. Certain guarantees of security are written in the treaty. To maintain them one must have collective action by the Allies. France has accepted conditions of collective action. But if the day comes when collective action by the Allies is not successful France maintains the elemental right of legitimate defense and she will use it."

The Temps predicts that if the necessity arises there will be a common attitude toward the dangers of German militarism by France, the Little Entente and Poland.

The Petit Journal does not doubt that Germany will accept the allied note, but says the future must be watched.

"England has made us pay for her assistance by obliging us to accept her views and abandon our program of penalties," it goes on. "But thereby England has become the guarantor of a new system, and if it does not work she will evidently not be in a position to oppose our taking more efficacious measures."

The Gaulois calls the two notes of last night scraps of paper and says they result only in delaying the issue.

M. Tardieu in the Echo National berates M. Poincaré roundly, saying the Allies have now left Germany free to prepare a war of revenge. He thinks that if France had a Premier who would follow the program of M. Clemenceau, Germany would not do this.

Anatole France Hits at Poincare.

One of the sharpest criticisms of French nationalist policy yet printed appears in a prefact by Anatole France to a book written by Raymond Hesse entitled "Riquet à la Houppe et Ses Compagnons," which is something of a satire on what the French Hop o' My Thumb thinks of current affairs. It is well known that the Socialist author, who at heart is a pacifist, does not like Premier Poincaré.

"I do not understand very well the xenophobia which at the present time excites Frenchmen," he says. "During the war we loved the people who fought for us or who showed kindly neutrality toward us. In those days it was the loyal English, the brave Belgians, the generous Americans, the valorous Serbs, the ingenious Japanese. We found in the Italians our long lost brothers. Our women embraced Russians in the streets of Marseilles. We even boasted the virtue of the neutrals, the celebrated philanthropy of the Swiss, the chivalry of the Spaniards.

"Riquet à la Houppe does not understand our point of view today. I will whisper an explanation in his ear if he will keep it secret—it is that when the next war comes we wish to be alone to fight the Germans so that we will not have to divide up our glory or our profits."

Senator d'Estournelles de Constant today introduced in the Senate a demand to interpellate Premier Poincaré on "the causes and consequences of the present isolation of France." At the same time he made a request to the Premier to fix a date for discussion of this interpellation.

To this M. Poincaré replied with the following letter:

"Monsieur, I expect to see you Monday at the Foreign Affaires Committee of the Senate and I shall then try to reach an agreement with you on a date for discussion of your interpellation. I believe I shall not have much difficulty in persuading the Senate, if not yourself, that France is not isolated."

LONDON, Nov 22.—The unusual pliability France has shown in the discussions by the conference of Ambassadors over the Military Control Commission and the Crown Prince problems is believed in Unionist political circles to have been considerably increased by the British election contest.

The view is held that Poincaré recognized that were Mr. Lloyd George to return to power he would find a much stiffer attitude on the part of Great Britain toward French politics than if the present Government remained in office and he was therefore glad to make concessions which can be legitimately claimed by Premier Baldwin as diplomatic successes. The break in the entente which appeared likely earlier in the week might well have been used by the Liberals as a reason for recalling Mr. Lloyd George to Downing Street.

Mr. Baldwin's supporters say his successful solution of the crisis has provided him with an excellent answer to Liberal gibes at the ineffectiveness of his foreign policy. He can urge that his long-suffering attitude toward M. Poincaré has given the latter an opportunity to moderate his actions vehemently.

Now that the allied notes have been dispatched there is earnest hope that Berlin will not once more think it sees a chance of dividing the Allies and consequently try to play fast and loose with them. If it does, political circles say, it will be for the same inability to understand the psychology of the Allies which has so often made it difficult for them to help Germany toward establishing sound conditions.

Great Britain and Italy have gone as far as they possibly can in restraining what they consider the unwarranted aggressiveness of France, these authorities say, but they are quite as determined as France herself to obtain their treaty rights. Consequently Germany will only be preparing an unpleasant surprise for herself if she assumes that she can get the legitimate demands on her cut down by playing off one ally against the others.

BELGIAN THREAT TO BERLIN.

Will Seize Indemnity for Officer's Murder if Not Paid by Sunday.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 22 (Associated Press).—The Belgian Government, not having received a reply to its last demand on the Berlin Government for a settlement of the indemnity for the assassination of Lieutenant Graff near Dusseldorf early last year, has notified Germany that if the sum due is not paid by Sunday Belgium herself will secure payment in occupied Germany. The necessary orders already have been given to this effect and will be executed if Germany does not comply.

M. Jaspar, Minister of Foreign Affairs, today personally authorized The Associated Press to state that the reports that further German territory would be seized as a punitive measure were absolutely without foundation.

Satisfaction was expressed in governmental circles today over the unanimity achieved by the Allies with regard to the notes to Germany on military control and the return of the ex-Crown Prince.

Their optimism regarding the results, however, is not shared by the Opposition and independent parties, who feel that a break will come when penalties are imposed later upon Germany, as they believe she will disregard the notes. This, they say, gives Berlin the power to precipitate a European crisis when it wishes.

WILL HEAR GERMANS TODAY.

Reparation Board Will Listen to Story of Why Reich Cannot Pay.

PARIS, Nov. 22. (Associated Press).—The delegation headed by Herr Fischer and Dr. Mayer of the German War Burdens Commission, which will be heard beginning tomorrow at 10 o'clock by the Reparation Commission concerning Germany's capacity to pay, met this afternoon in the headquarters of the German commission for final consultation.

The delegates will set forth in the fullest manner the economic and financial situation of Germany, presenting statistics showing the comparative purchasing power of the mark and other moneys and contrasting the situation of German officials and functionaries with those of the allied countries.

They will present a mass of carefully tabulated data showing the effect of the Ruhr occupation on Germany's resources as seen from the German side, to support the argument that the Reich is unable to do anything to put itself in a position to pay until the Ruhr is evacuated.

It is expected that several sessions will be required to hear all the arguments the Germans have ready to present.

STRESEMANN OFFERS TO RESIGN AT ONCE

The Socialists, who ended their caucus at nearly 11 o'clock tonight, decided to move in the Reichstag the following resolution:

"The Government has proclaimed a state of emergency in Saxony and Thuringia, although conditions did not warrant such a measure. On the other hand nothing decisive was done regarding the unconstitutional situation in Bavaria.

"The Government therefore does not enjoy the confidence of the Reichstag."

It is considered in parliamentary circles that this resolution considerably improves Chancellor Stresemann's prospects, as it is not thought likely a majority of the Deputies will support it.

None of the political wizards around the Reichstag profess to know just who or what would follow the Stresemann Government, in the event that it were turned out of office. Much of the recent opposition to the Chancellor appeared to have been nullified by the fearless character of his defense.

"It seems to me that this is a parliamentary, rather than a Cabinet, crisis, and that presupposes that men and measures that will command confidence are at hand," the Chancellor observed toward the conclusion of his speech, and he added defiantly:

"If you have a better man for the job than I am, bring him out."

He admitted that the way was long and dark, and that any aspiring successor who could see further ahead than he was quite welcome to the post. A Ministerial job in Germany was a thorny path, the Chancellor observed, recalling a statement made to him by the former Chancellor, Dr. Cuno, when he left the Chancellery—"I am glad to leave this house, where I never spent one happy hour."

To Continue Parley With France.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—In his address before the Reichstag, Chancellor Stresemann is quoted by agency dispatches from Berlin as declaring that his Government would relinquish office if it were considered necessary, and that he hoped the Reichstag would make up its mind quickly in order that he might know whether he should continue.

He declared that Germany's internal position was hopeless, and so far as he could see there was not the slightest prospect of effecting improvement.

France had expressed fear of serious German developments arising from recent incidents, but he could assure France that any developments that might occur would be due entirely to France herself.

Dr. Stresemann said that despite Germany's serious position efforts would be made to continue negotiations with France, because the German Government desired to leave no stone unturned in its efforts to effect an agreement and improvement in the situation. The Reichstag, however, must not be led away by the idea that concessions to France would do much to help Germany. The Reich was in too weak a condition to force counter concessions.

"Germany will bleed to death over the Rhine and Ruhr if the wound is forcibly kept open by France," he said. "The declaration by France that our help to the hungry Germans in the Ruhr constitutes continuance of passive resistance is untrue; it is shameful."

If Germany permitted France to take coal not for reparations but for other purposes, then Germany would be acknowledging the justice of the Ruhr occupation. Germany had not one creditor, but the whole Entente. It was not right, therefore, that only one should pocket the money.

As to Germany's internal condition, it could only be improved by introducing longer working days.

Chancellor Stresemann concluded by saying the present crisis was more a parliamentary than a Cabinet one. He said he had asked President Ebert to take energetic measures, if they were called for.

RIOTS AGAIN SWEEP OVER RUHR TOWNS

Numerous Police and Unemployed Casualties Reported From Industrial Districts.

PLUNDERING IN COLOGNE

Admission of Rentenmark to the Occupied Region Brings Some Relief to Inhabitants.

Copyright, 1923, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The London Times correspondent at Cologne telegraphs today:

Serious rioting occurred today in the Ruhr of which the following bare details have just reached me.

"The trouble arose out of demonstrations led by Communist agitators in Essen, Gelsenkirchen and neighboring towns. In Essen one policeman was killed and two were wounded. Fifteen of the demonstrators were injured, some of them seriously. The French troops made no attempts to interfere."

In Rothausen between Essen and Gelsenkirchen two policemen were killed and more than forty wounded. In Gelsenkirchen demonstrators were dispersed by the French. Towards nightfall the police were masters of the situation everywhere.

"Up to 3 o'clock today Herren Stinnes, Vögler and Klöckner had not yet appeared at Düsseldorf. However, I think it can be taken for granted that this is only a temporary hitch and that the negotiations of the Rhineland industrialists with the French Mine and Factory Control Commission will be resumed this week. Repeated conferences are being held at Coblenz between M. Tirard, President of the Rhineland Commission, and representatives of the Rhineland province both on the question of the political future of the occupied territory and financial questions which affect them.

"It can no longer be disputed that the Rhineland is being gradually forced against its will to be independent. Its representatives have made certain suggestions which go some way toward meeting the French wish in this respect but not far enough yet. The French are waiting for them to give in. They have set up a bogus Rhineland republic to accustom them to the idea. This republic is in itself a comedy; its set of Ministers and officials are a farcial crew, but the French mean to keep them there until the real leaders of the Rhineland are prepared to take their places. Meanwhile propaganda goes on diligently. Separatist agitation is at present most active in the Palatinate and occupied parts of the Province of Hessen of which Limberg is the centre. Certain indications point to the intention on the part of the French to cut off these two provinces entirely from Germany and make them into independent States, whereas their conception of an independent Rhine Province maybe assumed to be a State within the German federation, but separate from Prussia.

"As to the Ruhr it presumably is being excluded for the present from French Separatist plans. Since the great Separatist meeting in Düsseldorf on Red Sunday there has been little development of Separatist propaganda within the coal fields. The Belgians' idea of an independent State in their zone seems to be definitely in abeyance.

"Admission of the German rentenmark into the occupied areas to which the Rhineland Commission or rather M. Tirard has given his consent is an important step for monetary conditions in the occupied territory were fast becoming intolerable. This concession was apparently bartered in return for the German Government's consent to resume payment for the Armies of Occupation. When this had been agreed on the French still withheld their consent for some time while they demanded suppression of the Cologne Gazette which always has been a thorn in their sides. They regarded its articles as sort of continuation of passive resistance."

BERLIN, Nov. 22.—A big unemployment demonstration, riots and plunderings are reported from Cologne and suburbs today. Two policemen were disarmed and killed by one mob. Many were seriously wounded. Rioters clashed with the police and unemployed and troops of 3,000 stormed and plundered the south freight station.

Serious demonstrations throughout the Ruhr were percipitated today by the Reichsbank branches on orders of Berlin, refusing to accept local agency paper money, issues of private banks or public businesses. Most of the banks closed.

BERLIN, Nov. 22.—It was semi-officially announced here today that the French authorities on Nov. 16 seized 35,000,000,000 marks in the Düsseldorf branch of the Reichsbank. The seizures in the occupied territory now aggregate more than 2,000,000,000,000 marks.

MAN SHOOTS HIMSELF ON DOME OF ST. PAUL'S

Police Remove Him, Still Living —Question of Reconsecrating the Cathedral Arises.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—A middle-aged man, believed to be J. Tysoe Smith of Manchester, shot himself today with a revolver in the golden gallery of St. Paul's Cathedral, which runs around the dome just below the ball and cross and is 350 feet above the ground. Visitors are admitted to it on payment of a fee to see the view over London.

Tysoe Smith, who was carrying a small bag, loitered behind a party which he had accompanied, and shot himself in the right temple.

When an attendant found him a problem arose as to his removal. He was evidently in a bad way, and it appeared extremely difficult to get him down the narrow stairway, but if he died in the building, and it was held that he was a suicide, it might be necessary to reconsecrate the Cathedral.

The police decided to take him down, and had got him half way down the stairs when a doctor arrived. He was able to apply immediate remedies and the man was taken to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, where he lies in a precarious condition.

In general Catholic practice, if blood is spilled by violence in a consecrated edifice, either as murder or suicide, the building must be reconsecrated. The Oriental churches follow the same custom, but in the Anglican Church the decision would rest with the Bishop of the diocese, though the tendency is to adhere to the general custom in such matters.

MOSCOW BANK HEAD WILL BE TRIED SOON

Sixty Members of Textile Trust Also Face Charges Because of 2,700,000 Gold Ruble Loss.

MOSCOW, Nov. 22 (Associated Press).—A. T. Krasnotchekoff, formerly of Chicago and who at one time was Premier of the far eastern Republic and later President of the Moscow Industrial Bank, is to be brought to public trial shortly, on a charge of improper acts in connection with his official duties with the bank. Commissar of Justice Kursky today made the announcement of the forthcoming trial. Krasnotchekoff was arrested two months ago.

M. Kursky told The Associated Press today that the investigation of Krasnotchekoff had not yet been completed, but that he had decided to bring a test case in the Supreme Court, where, for the first time, several jurors, as well as the Judges, would sit on the case.

"As far as I know, though I am not fully acquainted with the investigation into the matter," said M. Kursky, "M. Krasnotchekoff is not accused of fraud, but of having acted improperly in his capacity of Chairman of the bank by favoring relatives to a great extent. He also exceeded his rights and discredited his position, thereby causing a miscarriage of the trust imposed in him by the Communist Party."

M. Krasnotchekoff's brother James may be tried at the same time. James is not in the Government service, but is the local manager of a Russian-English construction firm. Both the Krasnotchekoffs formerly lived in Chicago, where they were known under the name of Tobelson.

Interest in the trial of A. T. Krasnotchekoff will be rivalled by the trial of sixty persons, including the most responsible officials of the Bogorodsky-Schelkovsky textile trust, which, in consequence of alleged mismanagement, lost 2,700,000 gold rubles the first year of its operation. No bribery or fraud charges are involved in this case, but the Government puts responsibility for the present high prices and the general economic crisis on the bad management of trusts, it is considered this will be an important test case.

VISITORS TO SEE TOMB.

Egyptian Government Will Issue Permits to View Luxor Treasures.

LUXOR, Nov. 22.—An official communique received here today announces the settlement of the vexed question of whether visitors will be permitted to enter the tomb of Tut-ankh-Amen this season.

The communique says visitors inevitably entail delay, but the Egyptian Government nevertheless recognizes legitimate curiosity concerning the tomb in Egypt and abrpad, and therefore has decided to permit visitors to descend to the interior of the tomb as soon as Howard Carter has advanced his work to a stage where it is possible to admit them without unduly endangering the safety of the frailest antiquities in the mortuary chapel.

It is expected that the work will be interrupted for some time during January to permit public visits, but those wishing to enter the tomb must first obtain a permit from the Egyptian Government.

Seven thousand American tourists are expected after Christmas, but it is not settled whether those arriving after the first series of visits has been concluded will be given an opportunity to see the inside of the tomb.

NEW BLOOD FOR THE AGED.

German Surgeon Says His Transfusion Method Rejuvenates.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Discovery of a method of blood transfusion which not only rejuvenates aged patients submitting themselves to it but prolongs life is claimed by Dr. Frederick Heyman, a German consulting surgeon.

The method of transfusion adopted, Dr. Heyman told an interviewer, revitalizes the blood of the patient and can be practiced on both sexes. In cases where a direct transfusion is not desired a serum may be injected.

Dr. Heyman has acted as consultive surgeon at Breslau and Leipsic Universities, and it was while holding these posts that he carried out most of his experiments, in which striking results are alleged to have been obtained.

IGNORES VETO BY WOOD.

Philippine Senate Repasses Relief Bill, Appropriating $50,000.

MANILA, Nov. 22 (Associated Press).—The Philippine Senate has repassed a bill, vetoed by Governor General Wood, appropriating $50,000 for the alleviation of suffering during public calamities.

General Wood vetoed the bill on the ground that it was unconstitutional. Manuel Quezon, President of the Senate, speaking on the bill, declared that it was constitutional and that the Governor General had vetoed it because distribution of the fund would be in the hands of the Secretary of the Interior instead of his own.

BALFOUR GREETS ZIONISTS.

Praises Their Aims When Receiving a Gift From America.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The Earl of Balfour, acknowledging the statuette from American Zionists which was presented to him yesterday by Dr. Chaim Weizmann, said he rejoiced to hear of the progress of Zionism's work in Palestine, and especially of the spiritual impulse animating it.

Referring to the political and racial objections raised against Zionism, the Earl said that some of this opposition was of a meaner sort; for his part, he felt Zionism was a cause worthy of all true idealists.

ALFONSO CONCLUDES VATICAN AGREEMENT

ENTENTE IS WELL LAUNCHED

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 22.—The floodgates of the heavens opened in Rome today and it rained as it rarely has rained before. The Spanish sovereigns were therefore prevented from making the tour around Rome which had been prepared for them and seized the opportunity to pay their second visit to the Pope.

After performing the usual ceremonial, which consists of going from the Quirinal Palace to the Spanish Embassy accredited to the Holy See, and there changing into clothes suitable for the occasion, they drove to the Vatican in papal motor cars. While the remainder of the party were admiring the museums and the innumerable art treasures, King Alfonso was immediately admitted into the presence of the Pope and General Primo de Rivera disappeared into the apartment of Cardinal Gasparri, Papal Secretary of State. Both these interviews lasted an hour.

Later General Primo de Rivera also conferred at length with the Pope and Queen Victoria visited him for a few moments to pay her respects.

The Vatican maintains the strictest secrecy concerning the result of these conferences, limiting itself to saying that they were most cordial and highly satisfactory. One may therefore conclude that King Alfonso's mission to the Vatican has been brought to a successful termination. One also gathers the same impression from talking with Vatican officials, all of whom were loud in their praise of the Spanish sovereigns and of their attachment to the Catholic Church.

The newspapers today contain the first direct references to an Italo-Spanish political understanding. The Giornale d'Italia, which is the most influential paper in Rome and usually excellently informed, says:

"A firm union of the Italian and Spanish peoples, in whose veins new life is flowing cannot but lead to positive results. It is our boast that we have co-operated to dispel the threats which surround the work of the Ambassadors in Paris. It is now Spain's turn to defend in an international conference the thesis of civilization and justice which demands freedom of the seas for all producing nations."

This is an obvious reference to the conference on Tangiers from which Italy has been excluded.

The Giornale d'Italia continues:

"Italy and Spain are led to remain close to each other and to operate together, strong in their mutual trust in each other by their memories, by their sentiments, by their common interests. They can now co-operate to maintain an equilibrium in the Mediterranean, thereby realizing one of the essential conditions for European peace."

Opposition papers are even more outspoken, especially those which speak for the Extremist parties.

The newspaper Voce, for instance, says:

"The uses of Italo-Spanish alliances on Entente are secret in their details but obvious in their general lines and their details. Mussolini and de Rivera wish to form an anti-democratic and monarchical coalition to stem the spread of Socialist and Republican tendencies in Europe. This monarchical and anti-democratic dual entente is born under the auspices of the Vatican, which always dreams of the return of its temporal power."

Political circles are emphatic in asserting that no regular treaty will be signed. Mussolini and Primo de Revera have merely discussed various outstanding European problems and have verbally bound themselves to observing a common policy in their solution.

The visit of the Spanish sovereigns to Rome ends tomorrow. At midnight tomorrow they are leaving for Bologna, whence they will journey to Florence and Naples, where they will embark aboard the Spanish battleship Jamie and return home.

ROME, Nov. 22.—A violent thunderstorm, accompanied by torrential rain, which began last night and continued this morning, caused the electric lights to go out during the gala reception at the Quirinal Palace last evening. It was necessary to continue the presentations to the Spanish sovereigns under candle light.

Numerous houses and schools were flooded during the storm. A bolt of lightning struck a large barn in the outskirts of the city, splitting it wide open and setting fire to its contents.

King Alfonso and Queen Victoria paid a second visit today to Pope Pius. His Holiness discussed at length with the Spanish monarch various questions in which the Vatican is interested. One of these, it was understood, was a suggestion for an increase in the number of Cardinals in the Spanish-speaking countries of South America.

The Pope received the King and Queen separately and presented the latter with a gold medal for each of her sons.

Their Majesties visited the chambers of the Vatican decorated by Rafael and the Sistine Chapel, and also paid a second visit to St. Peter's, where Alfonso ascended into the dome.

The sovereigns were enthusiastically greeted by a crowd when they returned to the Spanish Embassy, to the Holy See and thence to the Quirinal Palace.

Copyright, 1923, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

TOKIO, Nov. 22.—A big Japanese-American combine has just been effected. The Westinghouse Electric and Mitsubishi and Takata electrical interests have combined to form the Mitsubishi Electric Company, to manufacture and sell electrical equipment in Japan.

Through the combination American interests supplant German interests which heretofore have been closely affiliated with the Takata group. The company was incorporated for 15,000,000 yen ($7,500,000) to manufacture electrical goods and steam and electrical turbines. Shops are maintained at Kobe, Nagasaki and Nagoya and ground has been broken for the construction of a main plant at Nagoya to employ 4,000.

According to the agreement the Japanese corporation will get all the Japanese patent rights of the Westinghouse Electric Company while the Westinghouse International will become the licensee of the Mitsubishi and Takata patents for the rest of the world.

PROTESTS TO HUGHES ON KILLING KOREANS

CITES AMERICAN WITNESSES

And Says 250 Koreans Were Burned in Oil—Japanese Embassy Denies It.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Dr. Floyd Williams Tomkins, a leading clergyman of Philadelphia, filed with Secreary Hughes today a protest against the killing of Koreans in Japan.

Dr. Tomkins, acting in his capacity as President of the Friends of Korea in America, charged that 500 Koreans were massacred by official Japanese order after the Tokio earthquake, and that 15,000 others were imprisoned without charges being preferred.

The protest undertakes to relate how the order went out from Japanese officials to "kill as many Koreans as possible," and quotes from statements by alleged eye-witnesses that 250 Koreans were bound hand and foot, covered with oil and burned alive and eight others bayoneted to death in sight of an American party in an automobile, who were forced at the point of a pistol to drive over the mutilated bodies. The protest concludes with a request that Secretary Hughes investigate, "and, finding the circumstances as we relate them to be, that you will take steps to aid these unfortunate people."

The Japanese Embassy tonight officially denied the charges contained in the protest. Embassy officials characterized as "unthinkable" that the legally constituted authorities of Japan should have condoned the killing of Koreans, and stated that some 558 persons were now either being tried or awaiting trial in connection with disorders following the earthquake. They declared this should serve as proof that the Japanese Government was seeking to punish those guilty of crime during the exciting times immediately following the great disorder.

American Tells of Burnings.

Declaring that episodes occurring during the earthquake again attract attention to the justice of the Korean cause, the protest filed by Dr. Tomkins asserts that Captain Hedstrom, assistant dock superintendent at Yokohama, an American citizen who has lived in Japan for years, "reports that the official order went out to 'kill as many Koreans as possible.'"

"In furtherance of that order," reads the Tomkins protest, "he [Captain Hedstrom] vouches for the fact, as an eye-witness, that on Sunday, Sept. 2, 1923, 250 Koreans were bound hand and foot, in groups of five, placed in an old junk, covered with oil and burned alive.

"Another American citizen, W. H. Stevens, on Tuesday night, Sept. 4, 1923, hired an automobile to take himself, his wife, his sister-in-law, Miss Ethel Wainwright and George Ross of New York City, to Nikko. The automobile was stopped by Japanese soldiers and Mr. Stevens and his party were compelled to witness the preparation for the execution of eight Koreans who were to be shot.

"The soldiers apparently enjoying the horror of the party, instead of shooting the Koreans, bayoneted them, compelling them to die by inches. The mutilated bodies were then thrown into the highway and the party was forced at the pistol point to drive the automobile over the dead bodies, and threatened with a similar fate to that of the Koreans if they disobeyed.

"These are two instances which can be placed before your department, along with many others. The spectacle, vouched for by authentic dispatches, of hundreds of Koreans massacred and thousands interned with insufficient supplies, with no one to protest or to reprimand, much less punish or exact reparation from the offenders, must remind the world that this is the status of Korea, notwithstanding the fact that fourteen nations of the leading powers, following the example of the United States in 1882, made formal treaties with Korea for her assistance and protection.

"Japan, leading all others in kindly protestation, guaranteed the independence and territorial integrity of Korea. The United States agreed that if Korea should be unjustly or oppressively dealt with it would exert its good offices. Yet we find Korea absorbed by the very power which guaranteed its independence and a people once proud to call themselves Korean citizens now reduced to 'people without a country,' with no one to speak in their behalf."

At the Japanese Embassy tonight it was said it is not disputed that there was fighting between Koreans and Japanese, and between Japanese and Socialists and Aanarchists, but that official reports to the embassy place the total number of Japanese and Koreans killed in the disorders between 200 and 300. The embassy is able, it was stated, to deny flatly the charge that 250 Koreans were covered with oil and burned to death by order of Japanese officials. Such reports, embassy officials declared, could be accounted for only when consideration was taken of the fact that in the terrible times following the disaster most baseless rumors spread and were augmented in every telling.

Embassy officials said the internment of Koreans was a measure taken for the protection of the Koreans themselves, some 3,000 having received shelter at Narashino camp, near Tokio, and later transferred to Tokio, where they were cared for in three different camps. Free railway tickets were provided by the Government, it was stated, for such Koreans as desired to go to their homes outside the earthquake zone, or to homes of friends. In all, 2,700 such tickets were issued.

DAKOTA GRATIFIES M'ADOO.

4 to 1 Victory for Him in County Meetings Is Now Claimed.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 22.—The results of the South Dakota county proposal meetings, in which William G. McAdoo is leading Henry Ford as a Democratic presidential possibility, were characterized here today by Mr. McAdoo as "certainly very gratifying." Mr. McAdoo said:

"My friends in South Dakota have conferred a great honor upon me by their endorsement."

Turning to his criticism of the Treasury Department's stand on the soldiers' bonus, Mr. McAdoo said that the nation should take the bonus out of politics by paying the veterans in cash raised by issuing fifty-year bonds and thus building an effective barrier against any future demand for pensions.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Nov. 22 (Associated Press).—McAdoo leaders said today that they were undisturbed by claims made by backers of Henry Ford, that the latter had carried the State, and reiterated that McAdoo had been an easy victor in the county proposal meetings Nov. 20.

Instead of having at least a two to one majority, as indicated by early returns, McAdoo has at least four to one now, according to a statement issued by U. S. G. Cherry of Sioux Falls, one of the leaders of the McAdoo movement in the State.

Mr. Cherry predicted that an even larger majority of the Pierre proposal convention would be found voting for McAdoo. He said that incomplete returns showed at least 30,000 votes for McAdoo as against a possible 5,000 to 6,000 for Ford, and that when complete returns have been received the McAdoo vote would swell to 35,000 or 40,000 out of a total possible convention vote of 50,000. The actual convention vote will probably not exceed 45,000 owing to failure of some outlying counties to hold meetings.

HOLLAND WELCOMES CROWN PRINCE NOTE

NO RULING ON WILHELM

Government Will Not Commit Itself on Ex-Kaiser's Return Until Time for Definite Action.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 22.—Considerable surprise and, in Dutch Governmental circles, some relief is felt that, in spite of the much talked of return of the ex-Kaiser to Germany and the apparently unexpected return of the ex-Crown Prince, the Dutch Government has not been approached by the allied Governments concerning the exact position of the ex-Kaiser in Holland. Since the somewhat belated note concerning the departure of William Jr., the conversations have not been resumed with the Dutch Government on the question of either of the Hohenzollerns. The question of the ex-Kaiser was not broached by the five allied Ministers who presented the note at the Foreign Office twelve days ago, nor have any assurances been asked of the Dutch Government since.

The question of the return of William Hohenzollern remains in exactly the same status as on Nov. 10 and people are not asking whether any steps will be taken or whether the policy of wait and see will be pursued.

No official utterances have been forthcoming from the Government and it is impossible to obtain any official statement. Correspondents, requesting enlightenment, are referred to the one note in existence regarding Holland's obligations in the question of the ex-Kaiser and which was published in the Dutch Orange Book of 1920 with the whole correspondence.

It is obvious that the Netherlands Government does not wish to commit itself or take any definite decision until the time for action arrives, and since the first reports concerning the ex-Kaiser's departure there has been an ominous silence in the Dutch press, except for reports from Paris.

Today's news from Paris causes feelings of evident relief that the ex-Crown Prince question is settled and that the Allies have decided not to take steps against Germany in this matter, as this, it is assumed, practically settles any responsibility borne by Holland in permitting him to return.

One thing is, of course, certain and that is that the Netherlanders would be only too pleased to see the last of the Hohenzollerns, but what exactly the Dutch Government's attitude is regarding the position of the ex-Kaiser in the Netherlands remains a mystery and one must, of course, reckon with the possibility that the allied powers will again be faced with a fait accompli as with the departure of the Crown Prince unless official questions are asked. The possibility of flight must also be taken into account for although guarded William Hohenzollern is by no means looked upon as a prisoner in the true sense of the word and any one acquainted with conditions at Doorn is aware that an escape is possible.

Meanwhile since the Crown Prince's departure the ex-Kaiser has been living in a highly nervous state and I learn on good authority is again suffering from hallucinations as at the time of his much discussed extradition when he had visions of himself being shot. For some unknown reason William Hohenzollern is convinced that he would be safer in Germany than in Holland. It is even stated that it was owing to these fears that he was given passports but which were afterward taken from him. There is moreover reason to believe that after the uproar caused by the Crown Prince's departure the Dutch Government persuaded him to give up any plans of departure at least for the time being.

REVOKES LICENSES OF FIFTY DOCTORS

"chiro dips" as they were called, including the following letter from the National College of Chiropractic, Grand Rapids, Mich.:

"Dear Doctor: We note there is considerable agitation in your State regarding the science of chiropractic.

"Now, doctor, the best and the quickest way to overcome chiropractic competition is to be able to deliver chiropractic treatments.

"If you were able to take a correspondence course in chiropractic and secure a diploma like sample enclosed, do you not know that when the patients advised they would try chiropractic treatments, if you were able to point to a diploma 18 by 22, nicely engrossed, which says nothing about its being a mail order course, that it would have the proper psychic effect?

"Holding one patient would more than pay the expense of the course, as we make the price only $15 to the registered profession for fifty lessons, life size charts of the spine for framing, and the diploma, which will be properly engrossed and forwarded on receipt of answer to question blanks attached to lessons.

"Think this over. If interested, sign the enclosed enrollment blank and we will do the rest. Respectfully yours,
"NATIONAL COLLEGE CHIROPRACTIC."

Tells of New York Diploma Agents.

The evidence forwarded to New York involved the relations of William Sachs, the St. Louis witness, with the Demarco brothers, who until recently had been living at the Elks' Club in Forty-third Street.

"I met Achille C. Demarco and his brother, James A. Demarco, the latter part of August or early in September," Professor Sachs said today. "From time to time I talked with them in St. Louis, chiefly on the matter of purchasing high school and college preliminary credits to establish themselves in professional pursuits.

"Achille Demarco wanted to take an examination in law and wanted a diploma without going through the necessary education studies. The other brother claimed he had purchased his medical credentials and diploma from Dr. Robert Adcox of St. Louis, the man now being referred to in connection with the irregular disposal of medical diplomas in Missouri and elsewhere.

"Adcox was doing business with them, so I learned, and from time to time, through the mails and otherwise sold them medical credits and diplomas for New York City. The diplomas were distributed from the various schools with which Adcox had relations. I have since learned that Adcox really did not distrust the Demarco brothers, but wanted to keep their business in the purchased diplomas all to himself."

Summons Sutcliffe's Albany Friend

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 22 (Associated Press).—The arrest of Dr. George E. Sutcliffe, who is being sought by authorities here in connection with the Extraordinary Grand Jury probe of the alleged "diploma mill" workings in Connecticut, is expected momentarily, and M. H. Dobbs of Albany, N. Y., has been served with a subpoena to appear Monday before the Grand Jury to tell what he knows regarding the whereabouts of the missing doctor, who is said to have visited him in Albany a few days ago.

PROTEST IS GROWING ON CRAIG SENTENCE

than he should have done. It is a situation which should be remedied."

Justice Ford's letter to Mr. Craig follows:

Nov. 22, 1923.

Hon. Charles L. Craig,
Municipal Building, City.

My Dear Controller:—

This is not a letter of sympathy but of congratulation. Your incarceration will do more to destroy the judicial tyranny which imprisoned you than could a million tongues or pens.

The consciousness of a public duty, bravely performed at the sacrifice of a term in a New Jersey jail, will assuage the discomforts of your imprisonment.

Something like this was needed to bring sharply home to the minds of our people the growing arrogance of our irresponsible judicial despotism. You should be proud and happy to serve as the instrument for the accomplishment of this splendid public service. Faithfully yours,

JOHN FORD.

Sees a Immunity for Judges.

In discussing the foregoing letter, Justice Ford said:

"It has always been the law—and any other would be deadly to democracy—that the actions of a Judge may be criticized, and he may be criticized and the court may be criticized, all courts, high or low, with just as much freedom and unrestraint as any other public official may be criticized, from President down to Alderman. There is nothing in the law or the Constitution, either Federal or State, that gives to them any immunity or commands from the people, their masters, any more respect for them than is due any other public official."

Justice Ford added that Mr. Craig's letter to Mr. Nixon did not constitute contempt of court. He declared that there were only two forms of contempt, disorder in court, which might include criticism of the judge in the court room, and violation of a judicial decree.

"All that Judge Mayer wanted was to take revenge for Mr. Craig's casting personal aspersions upon him," he said.

Pinchot Denounces Judge.

Mr. Pinchot's letter to Judge Mayer was almost in the nature of a "dare" to the latter to order him imprisoned for contempt of court for use of the same word in characterizing Judge Mayer's order sentencing Mr. Craig to a prison term as that used by Mr. Craig in the letter which resulted in the sentence. The letter follows:

Nov. 22, 1923.

Hon. Julius M. Mayer,
United States District Court,
Post Office Building,
New York City.
Park Row.

Dear Sir—By your sentence of Mr. Craig for criticising your court order you have opened up a rather large question, namely, Is the American Republic willing to have Judges destroy under cover of law the guarantees of free and unafraid discussion, which the Republic's founders wrote into the Federal Constitution?

If the ruling of the Supreme Court sustaining you should become a guiding precedent—which is unlikely, for, in spite of its stickling for technicality, it has often proved its ability to reverse itself under pressure of public opinion—no man would be safe in criticizing any judicial order, or, for that matter, any law. For the argument offered in your defense by Chief Justice Taft, that such criticism may have the "tendency and effect of obstructing the enforcement," would then always be available to throw the shadow of jail over any man or woman who contemplated hostile criticism of any judicial or legislative determination, no matter how unjust, unwise or ridiculous.

You sentenced Mr. Craig to prison for stating that your order seemed to him a monstrous thing. I do not know whether it was monstrous or not, for I am unfamiliar with the circumstances of your receivership. But let me assure you that your sentencing of Mr. Craig was, to my mind, a very monstrous thing. And, may I say, an ignorant act, which no man of good will, such as I believe you are, would be capable of if he understood history and knew the story of the long, self-sacrificing and often bloody struggle which other men of equal good will and more intelligence carried on for centuries and in many lands, to secure for their children the measure of freedom of speech and conscience which is ours today.

Again, may I say that if you are consistent and believe you were justified in jailing Craig for criticising your order in 1921, you have no choice but to conclude that you would be unjustified in not jailing me and others who criticize your sentence of Craig today. In both cases, a judicial decision is the subject of criticism, and certainly our criticism impedes the enforcement of your decision no less and no more than did his. Nevertheless, I imagine that, whatever may be your conviction, you will neither jail me nor any one else at present. And this for two reasons: first because a man who abuses his power as brutally as you have done rarely has courage as to his convictions or anything else, and second because you are probably aware that the public would not take kindly to a repetition by you of so obvious and subverse a violation of the spirit of this country's fundamental law.

Very truly yours,
AMOS PINCHOT.

Believe Coolidge Can Pardon.

Despite previous reports to the contrary from Washington, the opinion here yesterday was that President Coolidge has the power to pardon Mr. Craig, if he chooses to exert it. Mr. Craig's counsel, Edmund L. Mooney, was reported to be of that opinion. Well qualified lawyers in the office of United States District Attorney William Hayward were said to entertain a similar opinion.

In speculating as to whether Mr. Craig would accept a pardon, his friends said he would undoubtedly do so, if the pardon was not accompanied by conditions such as a requirement to apologize to Judge Mayer. The Controller was said to feel that his letter to Mr. Nixon was justified in the public interest, and it was said that he would stand by his recent statement that he had no regret for taking the position that he did.

Both Colonel Hayward, United States District Attorney, and former United States Senator William M. Calder denied a report that the possibility of the late President Harding granting Mr. Craig a pardon had been discussed in advance of the decision of the United States Supreme Court.

According to this report, the local Federal authorities had difficulty in getting permission to appeal from the habeas corpus order of Judge Manton of the United States Circuit Court, and if no appeal had been taken the contempt case would have ended there. It was said that the possibility was considered of a Supreme Court decision adverse to Mr. Craig, which would stop any other attempt on his part to escape the jail sentence, and that the possible unfavorable political effect was also borne in mind. The permission to make the appeal was not granted, the report continued, until the possibility of President Harding granting a pardon. In the event the litigation resulted as it has, was considered by those having the matter under discussion.

"The appeal of the case was ordered from Washington," Colonel Hayward said. "I have never spoken to Attorney General Daugherty or the President about the matter. I have no reason to believe, nor did any one ever tell me, that President Harding was ready to grant a pardon."

With his friends aroused by what they declared to be faults in the judicial system that would permit a Judge to sentence a man in a matter in which he was personally interested, Mr. Craig passed the day at work in his office in the Municipal Building. When seen by reporters, he said he had no knowledge of any legal steps to prevent him serving the sentence.

Hopes to Run Office in Jail.

Mr. Craig made it clear that he did not take seriously reports that he would be prevented legally from performing the duties of his office when he was in jail. "I shall hope for the same facilities to do my work as are in my home," he said. Mr. Craig was in serious mood because of the death of Deputy Controller Henry Smith. He will go to his home in Carmel after Mr. Smith's funeral this afternoon, but will return to his office on Monday.

Denial was made at the Controller's office of a story in an afternoon newspaper, in which Mr. Craig was pictured as saying good-bye to his aids before a battery of motion picture cameras and quoting Lord Nelson to the effect that "England expects every man to do his duty" as his farewell word. Mr. Craig permitted a number of motion picture and newspaper photographers to take pictures of him, but it was denied that he posed as saying farewell to his staff or that he said anything for publication.

SAYS COOLIDGE CAN PARDON.

Former Corporation Counsel Watson Gives an Opinion on Craig Case.

Archibald R. Watson, former Corporation Counsel of the city, said yesterday that there was no doubt that the President has the power of pardoning Controller Craig, thus saving him from imprisonment for contempt. One of the authorities quoted by him says that it would not be compatible with free institutions if there should be no way of protecting an individual from the tyrannical exercise of power by a judge. Mr. Watson in his opinion says:

"Manifestly the letter Comptroller Craig, if contemptuous, comes within the category of criminal contempt. * * *

Viewing the Craig contempt as a criminal contempt as he must, and not as a civil contempt, the decided weight of authority is to the effect that the President has power in his discretion to pardon the Controller.

"A similar question has been passed upon by several former Attorneys General of the United States. In the case of one Dixon a fine of $400 had been imposed for a personal affray in a Federal Court room. Dixon was unable to pay the fine, was committed for contempt and applied to the President for a pardon. Attorney General Gilpin was consulted as to the President's power to pardon in such circumstances and rendered an opinion (3 Op. Atty. Gen. 622) in part as follows:

If we adopt, as the Supreme Court of the United States has decided we should do, the principles established by the common law respecting the operation of a pardon, there can be no doubt it may embrace such a case. A pardon has been held to extend to a contempt committed in Westminster Hall, under circumstances not materially different from those which occurred in the case submitted to the President. I am therefore of opinion that, should the President consider the facts as to justify the exercise of his constitutional power to grant reprieves and pardons for offenses against the United States, there is nothing in the character of this offense which withdraws it from the general authority.

"The reasoning by which the power of the executive to act in such cases is supported, is that the offense is committed against the State or the United States and that it is not distinguishable from other offenses of a criminal nature. Sharp v. State, 102 Tenn. 9.

"In a well-known Louisiana case State v. Sauvinet, 25 La. Ann. 119, Judge Taliaferro said:

'We can scarcely think it compatible with the genius of liberal government and free institutions that there should be no authority to protect an individual against a tyrannical exercise by a judge of his power to punish for contempt, and therefore conclude that, upon the principle of checks and balances upon which our American governments are founded, it was not intended by the framers of the Government that the pardoning power should not reach a party unduly deprived of his liberty by, it might be, a hasty and petulant fiat of a Judge.

"Whether Comptroller Craig might decline to accept executive clemency if a pardon were tendered to him by the President is another question. An authority of no less distinction than Chief Justice Marshall (7 Peters 161) said:

A pardon is a deed to the validity of which delivery is essential and delivery is not complete without acceptance. It may then be rejected by the person to whom it is tendered; and if it be rejected, we have discovered no power in a court to force it on him.

"Certain it is that if Controller Craig were pardoned, his decision to go to jail, notwithstanding, would do much to alienate such public sympathy as may be now with him."

REPUBLICANS FAVOR PARDON.

Leaders in Washington Fear Jail Term Would Become Campaign Issue.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Controller Charles L. Craig of New York City should be pardoned if President Coolidge should follow the views of Republican leaders in Washington.

Those entertaining this opinion feel that if the New York Controller is sent to jail he would emerge in the rôle of martyr and his imprisonment, in the event of no Presidential pardon, would be made an issue in the next Gubernatorial campaign in New York.

It is stated on authority that the matter of a pardon for Mr. Craig has not yet been formally laid before the President or the Department of Justice.

Edward T. Doyle of New York called at the White House today and talked with C. Bascom Slemp, Secretary to the President, about the status of the Craig case. He made no request for a pardon and did not formally place the matter before the President. Mr. Doyle, it is understood, discussed the situation that would be presented in New York in the event that Mr. Craig served sixty days for contempt, how it would affect the City of New York, and is believed to have sought this conversation with the President's secretary to ascertain whether there is some avenue of approach toward saving the Controller's office from the situation that would confront it if the Controller went to jail.

BANTON STARTS INQUIRY.

Two Men Sought on Word From Hartford Are Not Found.

Acting on information that James A. De Marco and Achilles C. De Marco, temporarily residing at the Elks' Club, West Forty-third Street, could throw some light on the bogus medical diploma mill now under investigation in Hartford, District Attorney Banton yesterday sent a process server to the club with requests that the De Marco brothers appear at his office. The process server did not find the men.

It was learned that mail for the De Marco brothers had accumulated for several days. Achilles, said to be a lawyer, is a member of Elks' Lodge No. 243 of Worcester, Mass., and a resident in the clubhouse here. His brother is not a member of the local lodge and until recently was a guest of Achilles.

Dr. Frank J. Monaghan, Health Commissioner, also took a hand in the diploma mill investigation. He received a message from a man who is in touch with the Grand Jury investigation in Hartford. The message asked for the arrest of two men in this city, but direct information as to the evidence against the men was not furnished. Dr. Monaghan directed Dr. S. Dana Hubbard to confer with District Attorney Banton with a view to determining whether criminal action could be taken.

Both Commissioner Monaghan and Dr. Hubbard said that most of the reports received so far of illegal practice in New York City had been based on suspicion and that in nineteen cases where complaints were made that doctors were operating without licenses or diplomas investigation did not bear out the suspicions.

GAMBLING EVIDENCE DIDN'T REACH COURT

Detectives Say They Gave Affidavits Against Slot Machine Owners to Counsel.

INJUNCTION NOT OPPOSED

Hirshfield Tries to Trace "Political Influence" Alleged to Have Tied Hands of Police.

Testimony was given at a hearing yesterday by Commissioner of Accounts David Hirshfield regarding the alleged gambling by children with slot machines in candy brought by a police inspector that word had been left for him, while investigating a case against the owners of a device, to telephone County Judge George W. Martin in Brooklyn.

It was further developed that John P. Carroll, counsel for owners of the machines, was private Secretary to Judge Martin. The hearing centred on allegations that because of political influence the owners of the devices were able to operate under a Supreme Court injunction restraining police interference.

"If anybody mentioned my name as calling up Inspector Kelly and interceding in behalf of the owners of the machines, he is an absolute liar," said Judge Martin last night. "I never called up Inspector Kelly on any subject. John P. Carroll is my private secretary. He is still practicing law."

The session was one of a series resulting from the statement of Police Commissioner Enright and Assistant Corporation Counsel Dolphin that gamblers with money and with political influence could obtain injunctions against the police. Justice Hagarty of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn answered that he had to issue the injunction because the Corporation Counsel's office filed no papers in opposition to the injunction application and that if the Corporation Counsel's office had filed opposition to the petition it would have come to trial in October. Testimony by detectives called yesterday by Commissioner Hirshfield was that they gave affidavits to Assistant Corporation Counsel David P. Goldstein, who handled the particular case in question.

Invitation to Magistrates.

Commissioner Hirshfield wound up the day by sending a letter to Chief Magistrate William McAdoo asking that Magistrates doubting the gambling nature of the machines, at which he himself had lost money, were invited to attend a demonstration in his office.

Police Inspector Thomas J. Kelly, with headquarters in Jamaica, testified that he had ordered his detectives to investigate reports of the appearance of alleged gambling machines in saloons, cigar stores and candy stores of the district. He said that in compliance with instructions from Commissioner Enright and Deputy Chief Inspector John O'Brien he ordered the seizure of such machines. He testified that Robert Edwards, one of the owners of the Triangle Novelty Company, which put out the machines, sought the injunction eventually obtained from Justice Hagarty and that his information was that Edwards had boasted he "was in right politically" and the machines would receive "protection."

When Commissioner Hirshfield asked a number of times whether the inspector had received a telephone call from a man in Brooklyn interceding in behalf of the machine owners, the witness denied knowledge of such a call. He remembered eventually, however, that his clerk one day told him that County Judge Martin had phoned, leaving word that he would like to have the inspector call him up. The witness said he did not know what the Judge wanted and therefore did not telephone him.

Detective Philip Marx testified that he and Detective Reich seized a machine in a saloon at 811 Forest Avenue, Ridgewood, and arrested the bartender, Harry Hoffman, after the detectives had placed several nickels in the slot without winning. Hoffman was discharged by Magistrate Miller in Jamaica Court. The detectives said Hoffman informed them that Edwards's partner, Leo F. Byk, had installed the machine, and that Byk had "lots of influence in Brooklyn."

Tell of Filing Affidavits.

The two detectives informed the Commissioner that they filed affidavits on the case with Assistant Corporation Counsel Goldstein, and that additional affidavits describing the operations of the devices were filed with Goldstein by Detectives Hughes and Sherry of Inspector Kelly's staff.

Goldstein handled the case before Justice Hagarty. Commissioner Hirshfield read from the record of a previous hearing testimony in which Goldstein said he had received no assistance from the police and had obtained from them nothing with which to combat the injunction application. Goldstein admitted on the stand that he had filed no papers, but made his argument orally.

At this point Commissioner Hirshfield informed Inspector Kelly that Mayor Hylan was very much incensed with the failure of the corporation counsel's office to combat the injunction petition and for that reason had ordered the inquiry to determine whether the machines were really gambling devices and, if so, to place the responsibility for the failure of the corporation counsel's office to oppose by filing the affidavits submitted by four detectives. Commissioner Hirshfield observed the fault plainly lay with the corporation counsel's office and that one must take cognizance of allegations that political influence had been brought to bear. He said that because the affidavits had not been filed Justice Hagarty could not do otherwise than grant the injunction.

The Commissioner read into the record that one John P. Carroll of 197 Amity Street, Brooklyn, was a confidential clerk in the Kings County Court and that it was said Carroll had appeared for the machine owners in the Magistrate's Court and in the Supreme Court.

Hirshfield Loses in Machine.

Spectators were treated to a demonstration of one of the machines during the hearing when Commissioner Hirshfield dropped a number of nickels into it, lamenting the while the loss the night before of $1.25 in seven minutes of taking chances with a similar device. When the Commissioner decided he had had enough of losing, Inspector Kelly and Detectives Marx and Reich dropped in coins, limiting their contributions to a few each.

Inspector Kelly said that because of the injunction his men had refrained from arrests. He said detectives had been instructed to ask Magistrate Kochendorfer for warrants, but that the Magistrate had refused in each instance on the ground that the machines were protected from police interference by the Supreme Court injunction.

Frank J. Flynn, clerk in the Brooklyn office of the Corporation Counsel, informed the Commissioner that papers were being prepared for a reopening of the case in question and that if the proceedings succeeded the Supreme Court would try in January the question of whether the injunction should continue.

"Such devices as punchboards and the playing of cards in hallways are starting school children on the wrong road and their sales should be prohibited," said Magistrate Oberwager in Essex Market Court yesterday, in holding Joseph Wolf, owner of a candy store at 123 Rivington Street, in $250 bail for trial in Special Sessions on a charge of maintaining a gambling device in the form of a punchboard. Wolf was held in similar bail for Special Sessions on the additional charge of impairing the morals of minors in permitting children to operate the board.

Detective Donald J. Slattery informed the Court that a number of teachers had complained that children were playing candy store punchboards.

MAYOR WOULD DROP PHILADELPHIA FAIR

Suggests 'Inspirational Demonstration' Instead—Fair Committee Assails Him.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—Disbanding of the Sesquicentennial Exhibition Association and immediate cessation of the money raising campaign for the 1926 celebration, was urged by Mayor Moore today.

He advocated as the successor to the proposed international fair an "inspirational demonstration," to be financed by the city and planned by the next Administration for observance of the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

It would be far better now to disband the Sesquicentennial Association and permit Philadelphia, through the Mayor, City Council and citizens, to provide for an inspirational demonstration which the city could pay for out of public funds, Mr. Moore said.

"Such a scheme would free the city from the menace of ramshackle structures and cheap and gaudy entertainments, all of which would leave an aftermath of expense and embarrassment."

The Mayor discussed the fair problem this afternoon after receiving many expressions of approval on his statement of yesterday that the fair association's "drive for funds indicated a misrepresentation of facts" on the part of the fair management.

"We certainly are not in shape now to ask the Secretary of State to invite foreign nations to take part in an international celebration," he said. "The honor of the city would seem to demand an immediate halt on such a procedure, seeing it cannot be done upon a scale commensurate with the magnitude and influence of Philadelphia."

A broadside at the Mayor for his criticism of the Sesquicentennial was fired by the Fair Association executive committee earlier in the day.

The statement, which was prepared by committee members in collaboration with Ernest C. Trigg, Chairman, says in part:

"It is a mistake of the Mayor to assert that we have represented that the financial plan had been approved by the President, Congress, the Governor, the General Assembly, the Mayor and Council and the Commissioners of Fairmount Park.

"We have not said the financial campaign was under the auspices of the official bodies, but we declared and we maintain that this great celebration will be held under the auspices of the authoritative bodies which sanctioned it."

GIRL ACCUSES MAN RESCUED FROM MOB

NO BAIL FOR PRISONER

Court Orders Additional Charge of Kidnapping—Still Seek Slayer of Pickelny Boy.

The intense feeling aroused in the lower east side as the result of the kidnapping and murder of Irving Pickelny, 4½ years old, was illustrated in the Essex Market Court yesterday when the police told of a battle with a crowd of men, women and children in a tenement at 410 East Eleventh Street to save a man 6 feet tall and weighing more than 250 pounds who had been accused of a serious offense by a girl 8 years old.

Joseph Bruno, the prisoner, was held without bail on a charge of impairing the morals of a minor when he was arraigned before Magistrate Charles A. Oberwager on the complaint of the girl, Edith Dorico, of 408 East Eleventh Street. The Magistrate, after denouncing the prisoner, ordered an additional charge of kidnapping to be made against him.

Bruno was arrested in the yard of his home next door to the tenement in which the Doricos live by Policeman Nathan Whitman of the Fifth Street Station. Mrs. Clemintino Dorico, the girl's mother, had aroused the neighborhood by shouting from the window of her home on the third floor that her daughter was being killed in the cellar of the house next door.

It developed that the woman's son, Frank, 11 years old, had told her that while he, Edith and several other children were at play in the basement hallway Bruno grabbed Edith by the arm and dragged her inside, and that when she did not come out in half an hour he became frightened and told his mother.

A crowd of neighbors, led by Mrs. Dorico, went to Bruno's apartment to batter down the door. Policeman Whitman appeared, and in response to his command Bruno opened the door and declared that he had not seen the girl. When Frank and several other children insisted that he was the man that had dragged Edith inside, the crowd made another attempt to get at Bruno, and the policeman had to threaten them with his pistol.

A storekeeper telephoned for the reserves, and on their arrival the crowd was driven to the street. Mrs. Dorico then was informed by a neighbor that Edith was crying in the yard in the rear of her home. The girl told the policemen that Bruno had taken her into his apartment and that when he heard the cries of Mrs. Dorico and her neighbors outside his door he carried her through a rear entrance to the yard and threw her over the fence into the yard where she was found.

It was with difficulty the police cleared a path for Whitman and his prisoner. The girl also was taken to the station, where she was examined by Dr. Hughes from Bellevue Hospital.

Bruno declared that he was innocent of any intention to harm the girl. He will be arraigned for hearing next Monday.

The same Magistrate held Jacob Richman, 54 years old, a tailor, at 95 Cannon Street, in $2,500 bail for examination on Tuesday when he was arraigned on a charge made by Sadie Feld of 63 Sheriff Street. The girl, who is 12 years old, alleged that the man attacked her in his store on Nov. 12. Richman denied the charge. He said he had a wife and eight children in Russia.

Acting Captain Cornelius Willemse, in charge of the detectives seeking the murderer of the Pickelny boy, admitted yesterday that no clue had been found which might lead to the arrest of the slayer. He said that Samuel Pickelny, father of the boy, had turned over to him a batch of letters received since the disappearance of the boy on Oct. 26. Some of these letters told the father long in advance of the finding of the body last Tuesday in the cellar of 71 Suffolk Street, that Irving had been killed by his kidnapper.

IRISH LOAN OUT TOMORROW.

$45,000,000 Will Be Offered at 95 and 5 Per Cent. Interest.

DUBLIN, Nov. 22.—The prospectus of the forthcoming Irish Free State loan of £10,000,000 ($45,000,000) will be issued on Saturday. The loan, it is forecast, will be a 5 per cent. stock loan, issued at 95 and redeemable at par between 1935 and 1945.

It will be a trustee security, authorized under the Trustee act. A half yearly sinking fund is provided for by the terms.

GOMPERS ARRAIGNS HEARST ON RUSSIA

they have not limited their pressure on Cabinet members to Mr. Hughes.

"Hearst knows all this because he has openly carried on the propaganda of the concession hunters both in his news columns and, in his editorials—describing the fabulous wealth in markets and concessions to be gained by joining hands with the Soviets in terms so grossly exaggerated that they literally contained 1 per cent. of the truth to 99 per cent. of Dr. Cook's form of—shall we say mis-statement?

"Hearst knows more than this. He knows that of the delegation of United States Senators and Congressmen he sent to Russia, at least one, Senator King, has had the courage (or perhaps the wisdom) to name openly the concessions in which he is interested. What, to do, then? What to do to cover this raw game of becoming shareholders in Soviet loot and upholders of the enslavement of the Russian people? What else than the bold game of Hearst's friends, the German militarists, when they prefaced their historic attack on Belgium by fabrications of a planned Belgian attack on the Fatherland?

"So here is Mr. Hearst with the colossal effrontery that 'international bankers' are responsible for the opposition of the United States to the recognition of the Soviets. What better camouflage or smoke screen for the operations of international bankers and concession hunters to secure recognition? What more effective appeal to the American masses, who have no love for high finance—international or otherwise?

Demands Names of Bankers.

"In Hearst's Washington Herald of Nov. 22, we read: 'A few international bankers whose bond syndicate agreements have been repudiated by the Soviets now dictate the policy of our Government toward Russia. * * * This is the Government which free America is refusing to recognize, and for that reason none but a few international bankers and Secretary Hughes know. Nor do we think that Mr. Hughes himself really knows.'

"As the matter has not this far, an answer to the following questions would be of interest: Is it not true that some of the highest representatives of international finance have recently visited Secretary Hughes or other members of the Cabinet concerned urging recognition? Is it not true that high financial interests, seeing Mr. Hughes obdurate on political recognition, or recognition via politico-commercial agreement, are pressing the Administration to find some other formula which will be recognized by another name? And is it not also true that international finance is largely responsible for forcing Lloyd George and Asquith into the demand for 'full relations' with the Soviets that appears in their election manifesto?

"Let Hearst and his handful of friends in the Senate and House (many have already deserted his sinking ship) come out in the open when Congress meets and tell the American people just who the international bankers are who are preventing the recognition of the Soviets. It may be that a few are on that side for the moment—they have been occasionally in the past few years—when their interests so dictated. But they were all pretty well lined up with Lloyd George at Genoa, where—as he told us in America the other day—the Soviets were practically recognized.

"A line-up here and now would be interesting. Once publicly challenged, those international bankers working for recognition in some form are in no position to issue a flat denial, especially if the question is fairly put. Let us know just which international bankers are opposed to any sort of relation of the United States Government to the Soviets. And—a nearly related subject—what international financiers believe that there are no financial, commercial or industrial advantages to be secured by any sort of an agreement (private or political) with the Soviets?"

King Denies Interest in Concessions.

Senator King took exception tonight to the statement made by Mr. Gompers that Senator King at least "had the courage, or perhaps the wisdom, to name openly the concession in which he is interested."

"Mr. Gompers is mistaken," said Senator King. "I have not admitted that I was interested in any concession in Russia. I never have been and never will be and do not want to be. A short time ago a dispatch was sent from Moscow saying that I had purchased rights to the iron manganese ores in Russia. It was called to my attention and I flatly denied it. I had never heard of any such thing until the dispatch was shown to me and do not know anything about it."

The commission which included Senator Ladd and Representative Fenn and himself, Senator King said, went to Russia to find out what they could about conditions there.

SAYS SOVIET IS VILIFIED.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—That the agitation in the United States against the recognition of the Russian Soviet Government is based on the "vilest propaganda" is charged by Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana in a letter to Alton B. Parker of New York, President of the National Civic Federation.

Mr. Parker wrote to Senator Wheeler as head of the federation, other prominent members of which are Elihu Root, John Hays Hammond, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, T. Coleman Dupont, Ogden L. Mills and Samuel Gompers. In the letter to Senator Wheeler, Mr. Parker asked him to consider seriously certain phases of the Russian situation before committing himself to the policy of recognition.

Senator Wheeler made public his reply to the Parker letter this afternoon. It says:

"Your conclusions are doubtless based on the same kind of information that induced you to make the statement that I was a 'guest of the Soviet Government in Moscow.'

"I am not in accord with your statement that in case of recognition the Soviet Consulates here would be 'nothing more than centres for communistic propaganda, including the promotions of atheism.' I am absolutely convinced that the Russian Government, as such, is not promoting communism and revolution in the United States, nor is it carrying on a propaganda for atheism.

"By reason of the opportunities afforded me on my visit to Russia to observe and study the church situation, I feel that I am able to speak with some authority on that subject; at least, I feel that my opinions are based on facts, and not on the mendacious propaganda that fills the capitalistic press, and which you so smugly endorsed in your open letter.

"I know many of the men whose names appear on your stationery as officers of your organization. I have the greatest respect for many of them, and I regret that they are lending the influence of their names to this backward step with reference to the recognition of the Russian Government.

"Believing as I do that the statements you have made as facts are not facts, but mere conclusions based on the vilest propaganda, and believing also that this Government of ours, as well as the Christian religion, is able to withstand all attacks from whatever source, because they are founded on truth, faith and justice, your organization and its purposes do not appeal to me."

MARATHON STONE IS UNVEILED HERE

Ceremony at the City College Stadium Is Attended by 3,000 Students.

SLAB DATES FROM 350 B. C.

Inscriptions on Marble Stele, Gift of Greek Government, Are Still Legible.

The unveiling of the ancient marble stele from Marathon, recently given to the College of the City of New York by the Greek Government, was attended yesterday by 3,000 students and the faculty and by representatives of the Greek Government and Greek organizations. The monument, dating from 350 B. C., originally stood near the triumphal mound reared over the bodies of the 192 Athenians who perished in the decisive battle which saved the ancient world from Oriental domination.

The ornamental carving on the stone is still clear and the inscriptions are legible. It bears the names of two brothers, Elpines and Eunikos, the sons of Elpinikos of the township of Probalinthium. The tablet has been placed in the Stadium, which is modeled after the theatres of Ancient Greece. Dr. Sidney E. Mezes, President of the college, presided at the ceremony.

Dr. John H. Finley, ex-President of City College, at whose instance the Greek Government presented the monument to the college, spoke. He related the history of the relic which he found in its original position. Dr. Carroll N. Brown spoke Greek in welcoming Michael Tsamados, Greek Chargé d'Affaires at Washington. M. Tsamados delivered the presentation speech, to which Thomas W. Churchill, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, responded.

After the ceremonies in the Great Hall, the College Marshal led the procession to the Lewisohn Stadium. A color-guard of cadets bore the flags of the nation, State and city and the Greek flag. William T. Collins, Acting President of the Board of Aldermen, made the speech of acceptance on behalf of the city. Attacking the Ku Klux Klan, he contrasted the loyalty of the ancient Greeks to "the grotesque and clownish bigotry of the 'Invisible Empire,' whose members are a menace to our civilization."

Other speakers were Adolph Lewisohn, donor of the Stadium; Archbishop Alexander of the Greek Orthodox Church of North and South America, and Charles L. Guy, who administred to the students the Ephebic oath of allegiance. The tablet was unveiled by Mme. Constantine Xanthopoulos, wife of the Greek Consul-General.

LONDON EDITOR GUILTY OF 'OBSCENE CRITICISM'

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—For a review in The Sporting Times of Sherwood Anderson's novel "Many Marriages," in an article headed "The Naked Truth About An American Family," William Parker Evans, editor of the newspaper, was sentenced today at the Old Bailey to serve four months in prison for a first-class misdemeanor and to pay £50 costs.

The charge was "sending by post indecent print and publishing an obscene libel." The case has attracted a good deal of attention inasmuch as passages of the article complained of, according to the defense, were merely extracts from the novel.

Evans called many well-known literary men to testify for him. Louis McQuilland, the actual writer of the review, denied that he considered the novel obscene. It was not even passionate, he said; it was as cold as a washing bill.

The Hon. Bertrand Russell testified to Anderson's standing among American novelists, and Austin Harrison, former editor of The English Review, and Mrs. Cecil Chesterton defended the intention with which the book had apparently been written.

The Recorder, Sir Ernest Wild, instructed the jury that they were the guardians of the public good and must maintain a proper standard for the liberty of the press. He said literary people lived in a world of their own, and the jury were there not to protect literary people, but ordinary people who bought such newspapers on the bookstalls.

SWIFT & CO. BAR FEDERAL AUDITORS

ods and practices by which the records are kept.

Demand Warns of Penalties.

The demand closed with the statement that failure to comply would be subject to the penalties prescribed in the Packers and Stockyards act. Swift & Co. and the others were given until Nov. 23 to permit or refuse the access demanded.

The department's action followed negotiations which resulted in the packers refusing to give the accountants of the department full access to their books.

"For some months we have been conferring with the packers on this subject," said Secretary Wallace, in connection with his demand. "It is my opinion we have full right under the law to secure the information desired through examination by our auditors. The packers seem to feel that such examination goes further than the law permits and that it is a violation of their rights.

"I continued negotiations with them for some time in the hope that we might come to an agreement, which I considered very desirable. It would be very much easier for our auditors to make the examination with the consent and co-operation of the packers because they could secure information in very much less time with such co-operation.

"The day has not meant important loss of time, as our auditors have been busily engaged, first in helping to prepare testimony to be used in connection with the Armour-Morris merger, and second, in examining the Armour-Morris books in connection with the merger proceedings. Now that their work in this respect has mostly been completed, we are anxious to take up the examination of the books of the three other big packers at the earliest date possible."

A Pair of Scales

The Bond and Mortgage Guarantee Company is often asked why it never guarantees mortgages at a higher rate than 5% or 5½%. The reason is plain.

As a general rule in any investment safety and income are like the opposite sides of a pair of scales—if income goes up safety has gone down in proportion.

The higher rate mortgages are seldom the quality which we are accustomed to guarantee. The Title Guarantee and Trust Company deals in only the choicest mortgages, and our long experience has taught us that that is the only kind which can be guaranteed safely.

KILLS WIFE IN VIEW OF THEIR CHILDREN

GOES ASHORE, SURRENDERS

Little Girl Tells of Quarrel Between Parents After Which "Mamma Fell Down."

In more than an hour's questioning at the office of District Attorney Dana Wallace in the Queens County Court House at Long Island City last night Theodore Winkler, 32 years old, whose home was aboard the coal barge T. J. Adams from Bayonne, N. J., attempted to explain the death by pistol wounds of his wife Ethel, a rather attractive woman of twenty-eight years, in the dingy cabin of the Adams while it was being unloaded at Peace Bros.' dock at the foot of Lawrence Street and Flushing Creek, Flushing.

The killing took place shortly after noon yesterday. After he had fired four bullets into his wife, any one of which would have caused death, Winkler took off his coat and placed it over the face of the dead woman as the body lay on the cabin floor. Then he walked to Broadway and Lawrence Street, two blocks away, and surrendered himself to Patrolman Bernobski who was directing traffic at the corner. He was taken to the Flushing Police Station. There he wept and kept saying: "Why did I do it? I don't see why I killed her." Later he was taken to the District Attorney's office and then he was locked up in the Queens Jail on a charge of homicide. He will have an examination in the Flushing Police Court today.

Winkler's statement in substance was that his wife has been friendly with men who were seeking his life. He said that he had been informed that these men were going to take his life next Saturday when his boat would return to Bayonne and that he decided to kill himself. He was about to do so when his wife interfered, he said, and she was shot unintentionally while she was trying to get possession of the revolver.

When the detectives of the Flushing precinct reached the boat they found there the four children of Winkler and his wife. There were three little girls, the oldest being Caroline, 8 years. Also there was a little boy, about 6 years old. All of the children were barefoot and Caroline was putting stockings on her little brother and directing the others how to get into their clothing.

"Somebody said they was going to take my mamma to a hospital," said little Caroline to Detective Daly. "What kind of a place is that? Is it nicer and warmer than our home here? What will they do with mamma there? They will let her come back, won't they?"

The police questioned the little girl about what she had seen. This was what she said:

"You know every time the boat stops at a town papa and mamma scold each other. Papa came in a while ago and he began to scold mamma. Then papa got up and began hunting through the drawers here and finally he got a pistol. Mamma shook her finger at him and said: 'ou give up that gun in a hurry.' Mamma walked toward him and then the gun went off. It went off more than once, but so fast I could not count them. Me and my little brothers and sisters ran in a corner and hid. Mamma fell down and then papa took off his coat and put it on mamma's face. He said he didn't know how it happened. Papa then went off the boat and he told me to mind the children and keep them from the deck until he came back."

Several hours after the shooting an agent for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children took charge of the children.

FIGHTS ANTI-SALOON BONUS'

Representative Hill Urges Beer Tax to Pay Ex-Soldiers.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 22.—Representative John Philip Hill today urged a method of reducing national taxes and at the same time of granting a soldiers' bonus by legalizing and taxing 2.75 per cent. cider and beer. He said that to refuse to pay the bonus on the ground of economy and at the same time to grant an increased appropriation for the enforcement of the Volstead act was "absolutely raw."

"The attitude of the Treasury Department," Mr. Hill said, "is that taxes can be reduced, but that they can only be reduced providing nothing is done about the soldiers' bonus. On the other hand, the Treasury Department is urging that the appropriation for the support of the Anti-Saloon League Volstead act be increased from $10,000,000 to $40,000,000.

"If the amount of money which the Treasury Department is fighting to get for Anti-Saloon League purposes was used in connection with the soldiers' bonus it would be adequate to pay 3 per cent. on a bond issue of a billion dollars, and further, leave left over 1 per cent. for the sinking fund.

"To my mind it is nothing short of an arrant and stupendous piece of hypocrisy to propose tax reduction and economy and to say that the soldiers' bonus bill will prevent any tax reduction and economy and in the same breath suggest an Anti-Saloon League bonus of $40,000,000."

Colonel Hill said that on the opening of Congress he would reintroduce his bill for a cash bonus payable in three years and a tax on 2.75 per cent. beer and cider.

ATTACKS FLAGLER WILL.

Equity Suit Seeks Third of $2,000,000 Estate for Widow.

Clarence I. Spellman of Kansas City, Mo., began an equity action in the Federal Court yesterday to have the will of the late John H. Flagler declared invalid and the estate distributed according to the laws of New York. The plaintiff states that Mrs. Beatrice F. Flagler, Mr. Flagler's widow, had assigned to him half of her share in the estate, which will be one-third of the total value if the action succeeds. Mr. Spellman's interest, therefore, is one-sixth.

Mr. Flagler, who was the head of the National Tube Company, died on Sept. 8, 1922, leaving an estate estimated at $2,000,000. The will gave the income of $100,000 for life to the widow, the same income to his daughter, Mrs. Anne Herdin-Hickey; $70,000 to the St. Cecelia Club, and after several other bequests, the residue, estimated at about $500,000, was to go to George F. Sullivan and William Nelson Cromwell, his counsel, with a request that it be used in charitable and philanthropic work.

Half of the estate was to be used in creating a memorial to a former wife, who died in 1918, to be known as the Alice Mandelick Flagler Foundation. The complaint says that the provisions for the foundation and the legal advisers are invalid under the laws of this State and that the only heirs are the widow, the plaintiff, and one daughter. The court is asked to enjoin the legatees from making any transfer of funds derived under the will. One of the provisions of the will was that any beneficiary lost his bequest if an attempt was made to break it.

AUNT WILL TESTIFY IN ROTHENBERG CASE

READY TO WAIVE IMMUNITY

Special to The New York Times.

CATSKILL, N. Y., Nov. 22.—Mrs. Esther Litt, aunt of 7-year-old Howard Rothenberg, who was found strangled to death in Windham on the morning of Aug. 29, arrived here last midnight, apparently trying to keep her presence secret. Mrs. Litt is the last of the most important witnesses to come here in connection with the Greene County Grand Jury's investigation into the boy's death. With her came Edward W. Lackey, an attorney of Tannersville, who will assist Percy W. Decker as her counsel. On their arrival at the Saulpaugh Hotel the two did not sign the register and were booked as Mrs. Lady and Mr. Man.

In a previous investigation into Howard Rothenberg's death Mrs. Litt had been detained for some time. Several days ago District Attorney Charles G. Coffin asked her to appear before the Grand Jury. This morning she declined that she had come of her own volition to help her sister, Mrs. Rose Rothenberg, and the Grnad Jury solve the mystery of her nephew's death. She said she was ready to testify and to sign a waiver of immunity as demanded by Mr. Coffin.

Two witnesses, both of them important, were called before the Grand Jury today. They were Patrick J. Boyle of Newark and Burdsall Brannaugh, son of the boarding house keeper with whom the Rothenberg family spent the Summer.

Boyle was the first to discover Howard's body, in a willow copse near a creek. He also heard the lad at about 6 o'clock that morning outside the Birmingham cottage talking about going fishing. When Boyle found the body Mrs. Rothenberg was directly behind him and he heard her declare, he has said, "To think that they would do it after I had been so good to them."

Burdsall Brannaugh signed a waiver of immunity before he testified, and at the close of the day's session District Attorney Coffin said that he was through with him.

Tomorrow morning it is expected that Dr. Harrison S. Martland of Newark and Dr. Albert Edel, Essex County toxocologist, who performed the autopsy on Howard's body after it was exhumed in Newark, will testify. Mr. Coffin said tonight that the Grand Jury would adjourn tomorrow afternoon and not meet again until Monday morning, when Mrs. Litt would appear before it. Anna Sobin, an important witness, will not appear until next week, he said.

TO RADIO COURSES IN BROWNING POETRY

Columbia Supervisor's Lectures to Be Broadcast Every Monday Night.

An experimental course in the poetry of Robert Browning will be given over the radio beginning next Monday night by Hoxie Neale Fairchild, supervisor of English courses in the Home Study Department of Columbia University. Each lecture will last twenty minutes and will include an interpretation of Browning, with recitals of selections from his poems and comments on his contemporaries.

The course, as it is planned at present, Mr. Fairchild said last night, is simply experimental. Although the university authorities have prepared a syllabus of the course, with a synopsis of each lecture and questions for students, there will be no paper work attached unless there is evidence of a demand by students.

"I believe," said Mr. Fairchild, "that education should be active as well as passive and what we want to do at present is to broadcast these lectures in a way that will make them both comprehensible and entertaining. In each lecture I will quote Browning from different viewpoints. It will really be a course in general in poetry in which we will use Browning as a text."

The lectures will be broadcast every Monday night from Station WEAF, 195 Broadway. Each person who listens in is expected to devote an hour or more in advance to preparatory study.

Mrs. Mott Seeks Postmastership.

The office will become vacant on Feb. 20, 1924. Sheriff Richard Schulz is also a candidate for the appointment, but his formal application has not yet been filed.

MRS. W. E. COREY GETS PARIS DIVORCE

in the royal suite of the Hotel Gotham by a minister who subsequently returned the substantial check he received from Mr. Corey, saying that he was convinced that he did a great wrong in marrying the couple. Bishop Burgess of Long Island and the Right Rev. Father Lavelle of St. Patrick's Cathedral had declined to officiate because Corey had been divorced. Corey was an Episcopalian and Miss Gilman a Catholic.

The newly wed couple were the targets of much criticism from the pulpit and they sailed for Europe directly after the wedding, where Mr. Corey purchased Chateau Villegeniase for his second wife.

The second Mrs. Gilman's extravagance frequently brought upon her the condemnation of the clergy. At one time the Rev. Charles A. Eaton of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church declared that for Mrs. Corey to spend $75,000 on a fur coat when school children were starving was a disgrace.

Mr. Corey's first wife made her home with her mother at Swissvale, Pa. On July 10, 1914, she married Lenn A. Duckworth, general retail manager of a New York piano concern.

Mabelle Gilman was born in San Francisco. Her first New York engagement was with Augustin Daly's company. She was an understudy for Virginia Earl in "The Geisha" company. She afterward obtained the leading part for herself and later was a star in comic opera companies, including "The Belle of New York."

CORRIGAN ASKS CITY TO PAY HIS LAWYER

LINDSAY'S FEE IS $30,000

Counsel for Magistrate Cites $7,500 Awarded to Hirschfield as a Precedent.

Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan has presented to the Board of Estimate a claim for $33,523, representing counsel fees and other costs of his defense of the criminal libel action initiated by Police Commissioner Enright. The claim is on the calendar for consideration at today's board meeting, carrying the notation, made by the secretary of the board, "Refer to the Controller."

A provision of the charter authorizing the Board of Estimate to allow as charges against the city the costs of certain actions against Commissioners, City Magistrates or police officials is the basis for Magistrate Corrigan's claim. According to his counsel, John D. Lindsay, the Appellate Division has held Section 231, the provision in question, to be constitutional, and has further held that the board must take such a request under consideration.

As a precedent Mr. Lindsay cited the award of $7,500 to Commissioner of Accounts David Hirshfield for his defense of a criminal libel action brought against him as a result of former Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith's investigation of city departments. The trial of Commissioner Hirshfield lasted only a day and a half, Mr. Lindsay said, while he spent many months on the Enright libel proceedings.

$30,000 for Counsel's Fee.

Of the total amount claimed by Magistrate Corrigan $30,000 is for Mr. Lindsay's fee. Mr. Lindsay submitted with the claim an affidavit in which he said that his services on behalf of Magistrate Corrigan occupied practically his entire time for nearly six months, except for two weeks in July. The services, he declared further, were in his opinion, "of the fair and reasonable value of not less than $30,000."

The remaining $3,523 represents various costs. There is one item of $1,549 for the services of an investigator, and another of $1,321 for stenographic minutes.

Magistrate Corrigan's letter to the Board of Estimate follows:

Nov. 19, 1923.

To the Honorable
Gentlemen:

Herewith I submit a verified statement of the reasonable costs, counsel fees and expenses amounting to the sum of $33,523.01, incurred by me in the defense of the criminal action and proceeding entitled the People of the State of New York against Joseph E. Corrigan and Louis A. Cuvilliier, based upon the information of Richard E. Enright, Police Commissioner of the City of New York, laid before the Hon. Thomas C. T. Crain, one of the Judges of the County of New York, on May 9 last, charging me with the crime of publishing a libel and in which it was sought to convict me of the said crime and wherein I was a successful party, the said charge having been dismissed as to me by Judge Crain on Nov. 9, 1923, and I hereby request the audit and allowance of the same as charges against the city, pursuant to Section 231 of the Greater New York Charter.

Respectfully Yours,
JOSEPH E. CORRIGAN,
City Magistrate.

Section 231 of the charter reads: "The Board of Estimate and Apportionment is hereby authorized to audit and allow, as charges against the city, the reasonable costs, counsel fees and expenses paid or incurred by any Commissioner, City Magistrate, or Police Justice who shall have been a successful party to any proceeding or trial to remove him from office or who shall bring or defend any action or proceeding in which the question as to his title to office is in any way presented or involved or in which it is sought to convict him. * * *"

Mr. Lindsay Explains Claim.

In explanation of Magistrate Corrigan's action, Mr. Lindsay made this statement:

"Judge Corrigan's claim has been presented to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment under the provisions of Section 231 of the Greater New York Charter, which authorizes that body to audit and allow, as charges against the city, the reasonable costs, counsel fees and expenses paid or incurred by any City Magistrate who shall have successfully defended any action or proceeding in which it is sought to convict him. By Section 188 of the charter the Comptroller is authorized to issue revenue bonds to provide for the payment of amounts so audited, and Section 231 authorizes and directs the Board of Estimate and Apportionment to cause an amount sufficient to pay such revenue bonds, with interest, to be included in the budget for the year following the audit.

"The Appellate Division has held Section 231 to be constitutional and that the authority thereby conferred is not merely permissive, but imposes upon the Board of Estimate and Apportionment the duty of taking the matter under consideration and determining it on the merits, though the amount to be allowed, if any, is within its discretion. I understand that it was under this section that Commissioner Hirshfield was reimbursed by the city some years ago, after his acquittal, for his expenses in successfully defending an indictment for criminal libel."

RADIO ON MAIL PLANES TESTED SUCCESSFULLY

Messages Are Received From Pilot Knight, 2,000 Feet Up, Flying to North Platte, Neb.

OMAHA, Nov. 22.—Airplane radio telephone tests to determine the practicability of small but high powered sending and receiving sets which the Post Office Department contemplates putting on air mail planes, were a success today.

Officials said that messages received from Pilot Jack Knight while he was flying to North Platte at an average height of 2,000 feet, were clear and distinct, despite the fact that they had only a makeshift receiving set.

The messages were heard all the way from North Platte, which is 245 miles from Omaha. Knight broadcast for one minute every ten minutes of his day trip, which he finished this afternoon.

FINED $10 FOR AIR CRASH.

Two Milwaukeeans Pay for Landing Without a Permit.

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Nov. 22.—R. F. Conant, a former District Attorney, and Hanford Warschauer, both of Milwaukee, who with an unidentified woman in an airplane made a 2,000-foot plunge to earth near here, had to pay $10 each because they landed without a permit.

After being held all day yesterday by Sheriff Ahlstrom the men were released last night after paying the fines for trespassing. The woman disappeared after the crash and the men were arrested later when they returned to the plane.

Warschauer's wife came here yesterday inquiring about the woman in the plane, but declared "I would rather have her in the end of the world."

NAME CANNOT BE USED

Florist Made This Provision in His Will—Details to Be Given Out Later.

The florist business of the late Charles Thorley is to be turned over for the benefit of employes long in the service of Mr. Thorley by his widow, Mrs. Jennie E. Thorley, according to an announcement made yesterday by I. Howard Lehman of Cook, Nathan & Lehman, 111 Broadway. The announcement that Mrs. Thorley would carry out what she knew had been the plans of her husband ended speculation as to the future of the business built up over a period of forty years.

Neither Mrs. Thorley nor Mr. Lehman would supplement the statement given out by Mr. Lehman. More details, it was said, would be made public when the transfer had been formulated. It is understood that the business, including not only the shop on Fifth Avenue but the mail order business, is to be given outright to the old employes, and that every employe will benefit directly or indirectly. The indications are that the business will not be operated by trustees for the benefit of the employes, but will be in the hands of the employes themselves.

In his will Mr. Thorley stipulated that the business should not be continued under the name of "Thorley" or "Charles Thorley" after his death. The will directed the executors that in any sale or transfer the two names should not be included.

ARTIST WIFE OBTAINS DECREE FROM DRAYTON

Allowed to Resume Maiden Name of Viola Gebbie and Gets Permanent Alimony.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 22.—Mrs. Viola G. Drayton, an artist and illustrator, received a final decree of divorce from her husband, W. Heyward Drayton, from Supreme Court Justice Morschauser today. Permanent alimony of $333.33 a month and a counsel fee of $2,500 were also allowed. Mrs. Drayton is allowed to resume her maiden name of Viola Grace Gebbie.

Leon Gardiner of Gardiner's Island, N. Y., testified at the trial that he saw Mr. Drayton on a night boat bound for Albany, accompanied by a young woman with whom he occupied a stateroom. The witness said he saw Drayton and the same woman at the Grand Union Hotel at Saratoga Springs, where they spent three or four days. Another witness said that Drayton and a woman occupied a cottage at Long Beach.

W. Heyward Drayton 3d, head of the brokerage firm of Drayton, Pennington & Colket of 115 Broadway, and the wife who divorced him yesterday are both known in society in New York and in Philadelphia. The Drayton home here is at 830 Park Avenue.

The marriage took place at Chester, Pa., in June, 1911, shortly after Mr. Drayton had been divorced by his first wife, who was Miss Phoebe S. Voorhees, daughter of Theodore Voorhees, a Vice President of the Pennsylvania Railroad. There were three children by the first marriage.

The second Mrs. Drayton also was a recent divorcée at the time. Her first husband was Theodore E. Widerseim.

Mrs. Drayton is well known for her drawings of children, of which she has run many popular series in books, magazines and newspapers. She also is the originator of the Campbell's soup cards.

Mr. Drayton is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Drayton of Penlyn, Pa. He belongs to the Country and Racquet and Tennis Clubs in New York and several clubs in Philadelphia.

WOMAN LAYS FLOGGING TO JEALOUS ADMIRERS

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Nov. 22.—Assuming personal direction of the prosecution of the first six men ever indicted in Georgia for flogging a woman, Solicitor General Wood today was preparing to bring all of them to trial next week. Alibis to be submitted by the three Hasty brothers, including Keller Hasty of the Philadelphia American League Baseball Club, will be attacked by the State.

Mrs. Holcombe, alleged, with S. H. Morton, to have been kidnapped and flogged by a group of masked men last Friday, says there were at least twelve in the band. She attributed the outrage to jealousy on the part of some of "the village boys" of Smyrna, and unrequited affection on the part of P. C. Cook, an Atlanta mechanic, who lives at Smyrna with his wife and seven children, and Joe Bramlett, another Smyrna resident, both of whom have been indicted.

She supplemented her first account of the abduction in a statement that the masked men had left her on the front porch of the Hasty home, nearly three-quarters of a mile from her own home, and that Frank and Arthur Hasty had carried her in their automobile to her own home.

This was confirmed by Mrs. W. B. Hasty, mother of the accused youths, it was reported here. She said that they had just returned from a motion picture show in Marietta when Mrs. Harcourt was heard on the front porch. Mrs. Hasty supports her son's statement that they can establish alibis.

Morton was arrested here today charged with being drunk and possessing whisky.

MRS. STOKES DENIES KEEPING UP FIGHT

Has Not Ordered Chicago Counsel to Push Criminal Prosecution Against Her Husband.

FINAL AGREEMENT HERE

Coincident with the filing in the Supreme Court yesterday of the settlement agreement signed by W. E. D. Stokes and Mrs. Stokes, Charles E. Erbstein, Mrs. Stokes's Chicago attorney, gave to The Associated Press a telegram he said he had received from his client in which she urges him to push the prosecution against Mr. Stokes.

When this message was read to Mrs. Stokes she denied that she had sent it and made public a telegram she declared she actually sent. This was a short reply to a wired query from her lawyer as to the status of the criminal litigation in which Mr. Stokes is involved in the Chicago courts. He was indicted by the Chicago Grand Jury last month charged with conspiracy to defame his wife's character.

The telegram which The Associated Press dispatch from Chicago said had been received by Mr. Erbstein from Mrs. Stokes was as follows:

"I am more concerned in the vindication of my good name than I am in Mr. Stokes's money. You unearthed the conspiracy against me and I know that even if I had any desire to dismiss any of these cases that would be a matter for your State's attorney. However, Mr. Erbstein, it is my desire that you immediately push the prosecution against all, including Mr. Stokes, who tried to drag my good name through the mud and mire of the so-called red light and black belt district of Chicago, and can you not do this upon my arrival in Chicago, as I am anxious to get home to my babies in Denver?

"It is true, however, that I was asked to be lenient toward Mr. Stokes, but I refused to even discuss it, and referred him to yourself and the Prosecutor.

"You are instructed not to delay the prosecution of any of the litigations which I have entrusted to you."

Mrs. Stokes repudiated every detail of this telegram. The message she actually sent she said, was as follows:

"I made no arrangement regarding Chicago indictment, as I understood the District Attorney there governed that."

Mrs. Stokes said she added a few words about the slander suit brought by Hal C. Billig, her cousin, against Mr. Stokes, in Chicago, which had no bearing upon the telegram controversy, which she asked the newspapers not to make public on the ground that Mr. Erbstein may be offended and that a rift might arise between them.

"That telegram is simply ridiculous," she said. "I did not send it at all. It makes me simply furious. I think some reporter has made some huge mistake, or else has misconstrued what may have been told him. Anybody knows that I can't tell any one to push a prosecution. That's entirely up to the District Attorney and no one else. I can't govern the District Attorney of Chicago."

Later in the day Mrs. Stokes said she sent this additional message to Mr. Erbstein:

"Evidently papers misquoted settlement. Made no agreement regarding Billig or Chicago indictment."

Although the terms of the settlement were not made public, it was learned from a source close to the parties to the agreement that, while all civil litigation has been waived, neither of the criminal cases has been mentioned. It was said, however, that Mrs. Stokes had intimated her willingness that the conspiracy charge against her husband be dropped.

Samuel Untermyer, Mrs. Stokes's attorney, declared that, prior to having been informed of the disputed telegram, he did not know of the interchange of messages between his client and her Chicago lawyer. Later he gave out a statement in which he said Mrs. Stokes had denied sending such a telegram.

In his address to Justice Wasservogel, Mr. Untermyer thanked the Judge for his sacrifice of time and personal comfort in meeting with the lawyers for several days and nights to bring about "this happy result." He added that it should be clearly understood that the settlement did not clear up the Chicago matter.

Isidore Gainsburg, Mrs. Stokes's attorney, described the agreement as a "peace agreement that has terminated five years' litigation and avoided much additional litigation." All credit for the consummation of the settlement, Mr. Gainsburg said, was due Justice Wasservogel.

As announced in THE TIMES yesterday, a cash trust fund of $800,000 has been created for Mrs. Stokes, the income to go to her during her lifetime and the principal to go to the children at her death. All pending civil actions and all appeals from previous decisions are relinquished, according to the terms, it was learned. Mrs. Stokes's right of dower to her husband's real estate, having a total value of approximately $7,000,000, also has been given up, it was said.

Mrs. Stokes intends leaving for her home in Denver in a few days, she said.

ALL-UNION COAL REACHES CLEVELAND

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 22.—Six carloads of coal mined by union men from mines owned by union men, brought on trains operated by union train service workers and sold through a union-owned distributing company, in large part to Cleveland union members, are being brought into this city every day.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is behind the mining and marketing organizations, which have taken over the complete handling of the shipments from mine to user.

Coal thus brought into the city, however, is offered for sale to the general public as well as to members of union organizations, though the widest market so far has been among the union members.

The Coal River collieries in West Virginia and Kentucky, owned by a stock company organized by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, are the producers of the union coal. It is being marketed in Cleveland through the Cleveland Co-operative Coal Company. The Brotherhood is back of this company.

"We have an unlimited amount of coal for sale in Cleveland at $7.60 a ton for a good grade of bituminous suitable for household use," said Albert P. Coyle, Secretary of the company. "We are taking orders for the coal and hauling it direct from the cars to consumers, thus eliminating all middleman expenses. Five yards, one on the east side and the other in the western part of the city, have been rented, however, and stocked for emergency orders."

Cleveland trade unions have been notified by circular of the sale of this fuel. Many charitable organizations are also supplied, Mr. Coyle said.

NAVY SQUAD HERE FOR ARMY CONTEST

FOLWELL IS PESSIMISTIC

Burdened With Cripples and We Will Not Be Able to Beat Cadets, He Asserts.

The football squad of the United States Naval Academy arrived here last night for its annual encounter with the gridiron warriors from West Point on Saturday at the Polo Grounds. The party of fifty-four, including players, coaches, trainers, managers and other attendants, reached the Pennsylvania Station at 9:50 P. M. and was immediately transported to the Hotel Commodore, where headquarters for the Navy team will be located until Sunday morning.

Coach Bob Folwell was as pessimistic concerning his team's chances of winning tomorrow's encounter as the famous Gloomy Gil Dobie ever thought of being.

"We are burdened with cripples and near-cripples," Folwell said soon after the squad arrived. "I won't know who will be able to play and who won't until just before the game, and we haven't a chance to beat the Army, no chance whatever. The Army is a bigger, older, stronger and more experienced eleven, and it has not been set back as we have by injuries.

"Carney will start at guard, but he is not in the best sort of shape. Devens, on whom I had counted as a first-string halfback, was taken to the hospital last night with an attack of grippe, and although he made the trip with us, he may not be able to play. Filippin, who will probably play at Devens's position in case Devens is unable to start, is suffering from an abscessed tooth, and both my ends, Taylor and Brown, are suffering from injuries. Stolz, an end, and Hirst, a back, are absolutely out of the game.

"Under present conditions it appears as if Shapley will start at quarterback instead of fullback, as had been planned, and McKee will be moved back to a halfback position. Cullen will be at the other half and either Devens or Flippin at full. Barchet, although in fine shape, will not start the game."

Folwell in Charge of Players.

The party was under the command of Lieutenant Benjamin F. Perry, football representative of the Navy Athletic Association, while Head Coach Bob Folwell was in charge of the players. Assistant Coaches Whelchel, Scaffe, Ewen, Perry, Moore, Conroy, Wilson and Daugherty were also in the party, as were Surgeon George E. Mott, medical officer; Trainer Schultz, and Hospital Steward Snyder.

The players included Captain Carney, Barchet, Cullen, McKee, Brown, Taylor, Walker, Swart, Shewell, Schreiner, Wellings, Handly, Zuber, Clyde, Leveneky, Filippen, Shapley, Grant, Caldwell, Devens, Query, King, Hutchins, Bernet, Forsberg, Lentz, Campine, Powell, Chillingworth, Harvey, Ballinger, Mathews, Bernstein, Vieweg, Stolz, Hirst.

This morning the squad will breakfast at 8 o'clock and take a short walk through the streets until 9:45. Loafing around the hotel will be the order until noon, when lunch will be served. At 1:15 the squad will depart for the Polo Grounds, where the last short and light workout will be executed before the team faces the Army. Tonight the players will go to an early show at the Palace Theatre, departing at 9:30.

The entire regiment of midshipmen, 2,400 strong, will leave the Naval Academy tomorrow morning at 5 o'clock, under the command of Commander C. C. Slayton. The regiment will arrive at 158th Street at 12:30, march to the Polo Grounds and take their seats in the stands to cheer the Navy team in its efforts to beat the Army eleven.

Team Gets Rousing Send-Off.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 22.—The focus of interest in the football game between the elevens of the Naval and Military Academies passed from this city to New York this afternoon, when the Navy football party left for the scene of the battle. For weeks visitors to the Naval Academy have recognized that something big was impending, but the midshipmen managed to go about their business in some sort of fashion, make something out of their class work and in general follow the routine of the institution. However, things broke loose last night, and carryings-on that under ordinary circumstances would be regarded as grave offenses against discipline were overlooked entirely. Statues, buildings and walks were decorated with bright colored paints, boats and ordnance were grouped in front of Bancroft Hall, and a lot of midshipmen who should have been studying or sleeping spent the night mixing things up in a way that will take the labor gang of the academy a week to clean up, but it is unlikely that any one is going to try to find out who are guilty.

The mottoes, in letters on the walks up to six feet in height, exhorted the players to "get Smythe," or "Smear Wood" or do many of the other things which they will try to do on Saturday. The fine old wooden figure-heads of old fighting frigates, which now adorn the academy grounds, were wearing decorations of red and blue paint today, even Tecumseh, the god of midshipmen who are trying to pass examinations, being covered with war paint.

The short but feverish send-off, which the regiment of midshipmen gave the football party this afternoon, was in the same spirit. There was only time to form an informal procession from Bancroft Hall to the cars which were taking the football players away, but the procession was formed so that the players heard the yells and songs of their comrades as the cars pulled out.

At the head of the procession were the midshipmen's own band, the new goat taking the place of the one who failed to do his part last year, and two "army" mules.

The general view of the Navy coaching staff was expressed today by Lieutenant B. F. Perry, who said that the Army, on individual ability, should win from the Navy by ten points. This does not mean, however, that the Navy expects to be beaten, but that it must overcome superior individual ability by the precision, variety and speed of its attack. This the Navy will try to do, and its friends think it will succeed.

FORDHAM TACKLE INJURED.

Fallon Not Expected to Be Able to Play in Two Remaining Games.

Barney Fallon, star Fordham tackle, was injured in practice yesterday and will not be able to play in the remaining two games of the season. Fallon has been bothered with a bad knee nearly all year, and when the old injury was aggravated in the tackling practice the Maroon lineman was put out of action for the rest of the year.

Coach Frank Gargan gave the team a long workout in tackling, followed by a scrimmage with the freshmen. He was assisted by Tom McNamara, halfback of the Fordham team in 1916. The freshmen were first given the ball and used the Rutgers plays, which they have been practicing all week.

The line-up of the varsity in the scrimmage, which is expected to remain the same against Rutgers, was Malone and Dunne, ends; Dunn and Smead, tackles; Walbridge and Fallusy, guards; Stevenson, centre; McGeough, quarterback; Graham and Woerner, halfbacks, and Manning, fullback.

Landis to See Army Play Navy Provided He Can Get a Ticket

CHICAGO, Nov. 22. — Baseball Commissioner Landis left today to attend the Army-Navy football game at the Polo Grounds, New York, Saturday, but without the necessary ticket to get him past the turnstiles. "If it were a baseball game, I'd be sitting on top of the world," the Commissioner said. He hopes to arrange for a ticket in New York, but scalpers charging $45 for them are warned to stay clear.

SERVICE UNIFORMS BEGIN TO APPEAR

The Army and Navy began their joint invasion of this city yesterday, and by nightfall the main thoroughfares were liberally dotted with uniforms of blue and khaki. These early arrivals formed only the advance guard of the army which will see the two service elevens battle at the Polo Grounds tomorrow, but there were enough of them to fill the hotel lobbies and lend a war-time touch to the streets.

The West Pointers opened their headquarters in the Hotel Astor at noon and were immediately besieged by a host of ticket seekers who, apparently, had been waiting for just that opportunity. Since there were no tickets to be had these last-ditch optimists got nothing for their trouble, but their demands were so persistent that Captain Ridgway, who was in charge, escaped to the Polo Grounds and left Sergeant Dannell, who has seen two generations of athletes go through West Point, and his staff of clerks to answer the telephone and keep the line moving.

The Navy representatives did not arrive until last night. Their headquarters in the Commodore were open during the afternoon, but unoccupied, so ticket hunters again came away empty handed.

There was little change in the betting odds on the game yesterday. The Army remained the favorite, the prevailing price being 3 to 2. J. S. Fried & Co. had a commission of $7,500 to bet on the Army against $5,000, but found no takers.

The annual Army smoker and rally was held at the Astor last night under the auspices of the Association of Graduates of the United States Military Academy. The meeting was an enthusiastic one and was well attended by active and retired Army officers.

The Navy boxes for tomorrow's game were allotted to the senior Representative in Congress and senior graduates of the Naval Academy, and no list of those who will occupy them was prepared. A list of all other box-holders follows:

COLUMBIA VARSITY SCORES THREE TIMES

Haughton Sends Team Through Lengthy Practice—Special Drill on Tackling.

Columbia's gridiron gladiators ran the gamut of football instruction at Baker Field yesterday, taking up in turn individual work, dummy tackling, punting, forward passing, signal drills and finally scrimmaging. After this thorough going over Coach Percy D. Haughton dismissed them for the day, but will probably have another stiff workout today, his last of the week, since tomorrow is to be a day of football sightseeing for the Columbians. In many respects yesterday's session was the most exhaustive and detailed of the season, and in going back to fundamentals Haughton showed the extreme care that he is taking to have his team well drilled and at the top of its stride for the Dartmouth game at the Polo Grounds Thanksgiving Day.

The return to the tackling dummy was probably occasioned by the indifferent work in this respect against N. Y. U. Punting and the gentle art of bringing the other fellow to earth have been the two hardest problems for Haughton to overcome.

To bulwark the junior varsity in the scrimmage two freshmen players and Assistant Coaches Barr and Reynolds were again pressed into service, but the second team's defense was not stiffened so much that the varsity could not shoot three touchdowns over the goal line. The seconds were able to score only once, when Craven got free around an end and raced for the rest of the distance.

Hardy, Hamon and Manning were the regulars who carried the ball over. The first two bucked their way over the goal, but Manning's score came when George Pease flung a forward pass into his arms, a long run following.

It was a lengthy scrimmage, as most workouts are at Baker Field these days. Haughton is going at all possible speed, taking care, however, not to drive his men too strong after the strenuous N. Y. U. game. The return of Wiberg has practically cleared the hospital roster.

ARMY ELEVEN READY TO INVADE NEW YORK

Team Will Arrive Today and Take Final Workout on Field at Polo Grounds.

LINE-UP STILL UNSETTLED

Special to The New York Times.

WEST PONT, N. Y., Nov. 22.—So far as the Army is concerned, the curtain was rung down this evening on the preparations for the Navy contest in New York on Saturday. Except for a signal practice, which the West Pointers will hold on the Polo Grounds field tomorrow afternoon, the Army's guns are silenced, and the cadets are awaiting the call which will send them into their final football battle of the year.

As the hour for the game draws near there is an undercurrent of feeling in the Army camp that this soldier eleven is about to find itself. Physically, some of the men on the team are in none too good condition. This is admitted by those close to the squad. No predictions of victory are forthcoming from any other than the most ardent admirers of the team, but there is a quiet confidence astir, and the general atmosphere during the past week has shown unmistakable signs of an improvement of the morale all around.

The Army's record this season does not justify any such odds, however, as is indicated by reports, making the cadets the favorites in the betting. The West Pointers know that this contest will be a gruelling one, for nearly every man on the eleven has been under the Navy's fire before and knows what to expect. Army will put its all into the contest in an effort to break the tie which exists between the two institutions in games won.

In the practice today only the lightest sort of work was on the program. The rain of the early morning had made the field soggy and there was no idea of taking any chances of a possible twisted ankle or a wrenched knee. However, Head Coach McEwan and his assistants, at the close of the preliminary drill, lined the men in a dummy scrimmage, during which every man on the squad, varsity and reserve list, got a chance to play.

Reeder Kicks Well.

There was a kicking drill also. Garbisch and a substitute, Reeder, who might qualify as the "Pfaffman" of this Army squad because of his field-goal ability, worked for a long spell at drop-kicking this afternoon. Both these men booted over the ball frequently from long and short distances and with an accuracy that was pleasing to the watchers. With Bill Wood and Gilmore sending down long spiral punts, Army's kicking game left but little to be desired.

Head Coach McEwan did not announce his probable line-up for Saturday's game. This may not be decided upon definitely until the eleven goes through its final rehearsal in New York tomorrow, but the varsity lined up in practice tonight as it ran through its répertoire of plays in the signal drill as follows:

It seems settled that Doyle will start at right end, where much doubt has existed for some time. Doyle's last performance was against Yale, and he played well in that contest. He is light, weighing but 150 pounds, but makes up for a lot of missing poundage by his aggressiveness and heady play. He is playing his second season, having been a substitute last year. Doyle played football at Syracuse High School before entering the Military Academy.

While Captain Mulligan has been shelved considerably of late, his presence in the varsity line-up today is taken to mean that he will start against Navy instead of Heney, the promising substitute who has been used more frequently of late at the left tackle position. The only other uncertainty exists at left halfback, where it is thought that Tiny Hewitt, former Pittsburgh star, may be chosen by the Mentors to start against the Middies. Ives, as star defensive back, is not in any too good condition, and Hewitt seems the logical choice in this place.

Others May Play.

There are other outstanding near-varsity men who are almost certain to get into the big game at some stage, among whom are Don Storck and Frazer, ends; Henney, Mack and Stowell, tackles; Stewart and Schmidt, guards; Strohecker, centre; Yoemans, quarterback, and Dean, Daly, Bladisell and Scheiffler, ball-carrying backs.

The order for the movement to the metropolis was issued today. The football squad will leave here tomorrow morning, arriving at Grand Central terminal at 10:19. The party will be led by Captain John J. McEwan and will go to the Hotel Astor, which hostelry will be Army headquarters over the week-end. Returning, the football squad will come home at noon on Sunday.

The corps of cadets, 1,200 strong, under command of Colonel Merch B. Stewart, Commandant of Cadets, will leave West Point for the scene of the gridiron contest Saturday morning. The Military Academy band and field music will accompany the cadets, the command reaching Highbridge at 12:20 P. M. Three special train will carry the West Point party. Upon arrival at Highbridge the cadets will march to the Polo Grounds, and after the military manoeuvres they will all sit together in the sections assigned to them on the north side of the field.

At a monster football rally held in the area of the south Cadet barracks tonight Brig. Gen. F. W. Sladen, Superintendent, made the important and pleasing announcement to the corps of Cadets that they would be permitted to remain in New York on Saturday night until 12 o'clock midnight. Orders previously had been issued requiring the departure from the metropolis at 10 P. M. Only the joy of victory over the Navy could match the wild acclaim of the Cadets when the announcement was made.

CORNELL IN SCRIMMAGE.

Varsity Perfects Running Game in Drill Against Third Team.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 22.—Cornell's preparation for the Penn game approached a climax this afternoon when, under splendid weather conditions, the varsity worked its running game in an hour's scrimmage with the third team. Although the mix-up was not strenuous it served to give the varsity an excellent drill in executing the off-tackle play and other weapons in the running attack the Ithacans plan to use against Pennsylvania.

A part of the drill was given to perfecting the kick formations and going down under punts. Buckley and Raymond played the ends; Kearney and Savage, tackles; Morris and Berean, guards; Affeld, centre; Pfann, quarterback; Patterson and Ramsey, halfbacks, and Cassidy, fullback. The second quartet of backs—Rooney, Tilton, Friend and Whetstone—also got into part of the scrimmage.

Youngstown to Honor Brown.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Nov. 22.—A special train will carry about 1,500 persons from here to Pittsburgh Saturday to see Harvey Brown, Youngstown boy, play with the Notre Dame football team against Carnegie Tech.

Yale Students Will Invade Boston Wearing Oldest Hats

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 22.—Disreputable looking hats are expected to be seen in large numbers at Boston tomorrow with the arrival of the Yale undergraduate body which will accompany the football team for the annual classic with Harvard at Cambridge on Saturday. In a final address to the students last night, Malcolm Aldrich, captain of the Yale eleven two years ago, advised that all should bring their oldest top pieces to the game. "You are going to get a chance to toss your hats over the Harvard crossbar," said Aldrich, "because Yale is going to win and there will be a make dance around the field. So take your old hats."

MODIFIED FOOTBALL URGENTLY NEEDED

Dr. Stewart Paton of Princeton Says Changes or Abolishment Will Come in a Few Years.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 22.—"College football, if left unchecked, will reach the point within the next few years where it will have to be greatly modified or abolished. The college sport, with practically everything in the hands of the coach, and with the problem of providing seating accommodations for the immense crowds attracted to the games, is becoming less and less an undergraduate activity, and is largely a form of amusement for the alumni."

This is the opinion of Dr. Stewart Paton of the Princeton University Faculty, as expressed in an article appearing in The Daily Princetonian here this morning.

"While the present exaggerated importance is attached to football we are constantly in danger of an emotional explosion which will put an end to games between the larger universities. The enormous crowds attending the games between leading universities has produced a seating and a resulting financial problem too large for the undergraduate manager to handle without devoting too much time to these transactions.

"My opinions are not based on what I have observed in 'Big Three' or in Princeton football, for I believe that conditions here are better than elsewhere," Dr. Paton continues. "Football when played by amateurs and in the spirit of sportsmanship has excellent characteristics and deserves a high rank among athletic games. Unfortunately we have not been able to retain the amateur spirit in the college game, and a semi-professional spirit which permeates the sport is having a marked effect upon our universities. This has necessitated the calling in of experts to direct the management of the sale of tickets.

"The result of this has been to build up a complex business organization in order to make the playing of the games possible. In some instances, on account of the financial income derived from football, the other sports of the colleges and universities have become financially dependent upon the success of the football teams."

35,000 PER GAME IS YEAR'S RECORD

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 22.—Approximately half a million persons already have seen Harvard and Yale in action thus far this season and the big battle on Saturday will push the total still higher by more than 50,000.

Figures secured from the big universities show that the average attendance at the fourteen games thus far played in the Bowl and Stadium is about 35,000 per game, the Harvard-Princeton game in the Palmer Stadium being included in these figures. Assuming that a capacity crowd of 51,800 will see the game in the Harvard Stadium on Saturday, the attendance figures for both teams for the season will be as follows:

HARVARD.		YALE.
R. I. State	18,000	No. Carolina	15,000
Middlebury	22,000	Georgia	15,000
Holy Cross	42,800	Bucknell	16,000
Dartmouth	51,500	Brown	20,000
Tufts	35,000	West Point	75,238
Princeton	56,000	Maryland	15,000
Brown	41,000	Princeton	75,238
Yale	51,500	Harvard	51,500
Total	317,800	Total	282,976

DARTMOUTH MEN OUT.

Three Substitutes Are Declared Ineligible for Columbia Game.

Special to The New York Times.

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 22.—Dartmouth's chances of beating Columbia in the Polo Grounds on Thanksgiving Day received a severe jolt today when three backfield men were declared ineligible because of scholastic standing. Fortunately, the men are substitutes, but they would surely have been in the game.

Because of an injured leg Bob Hall will not be able to kick well. His place could have been filled by Loomis, who is ineligible. Fallon, substitute quarter for Dooley, and Ahlquest, substitute for Leavitt at full back, will also be lost to the squad.

Coach Hawley has been impressed with Columbia's steady improvement during the last few games and has warned his squad that they will face a strong team in their last encounter.

DERN RUNS PENN ELEVEN.

Quarterback Returns to Position After Operation on Leg.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—For the first time in more than two weeks Johnny Dern, Penn's hard-working quarterback, appeared on Franklin Field today and called the signals for Team A in a ten-minute signal drill. Dern underwent an operation for an infected leg just after the victory over Pitt and was not able to play in the Penn State game.

Dern's leg has improved much faster than was thought, but it is still doubtful if he will be able to start the Cornell game on Thanksgiving Day. The injury has not quite healed and the coaches will not know for a few more days if he will be able to stand a grueling game. Dern did not lose a single pound while he was confined to the hospital, but his muscles have softened. After Dern retired to the dressing room Team B scored three touchdowns on Team A in a long scrimmage, Douglas, Eustace and Thayer making the scores.

NEBRASKA LIGHTENS WORK.

Disabilities Interfere With Training for Game With Syracuse.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 22.—The Nebraska University football team today tapered off its training for the game with the Syracuse University eleven here Saturday. Coach Dawson has experienced difficulty in fitting the Cornhusker warriors for the fray because of the disabilities incurred in the contest last Saturday.

The head of the Husker camp intimated today that Ogden, playing his first season in the varsity ranks, probably would replace McGlasson, guard, who was injured in the Iowa State game last week. Herb Dewitz, half back, may get into action. Dave Noble, back field man, who was injured in the game with Notre Dame, will be in the line-up, it was said.

LAST HARVARD DRILL IS HELD IN SECRET

STUDENTS CHEER ELEVEN

Follow Players to Locker Room and Stage a Big Demonstration—McGlone in Shape to Play.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 22.—Harvard's final practice today for the Yale game was shrouded in mystery. Even the men working on the new seats and in the telegraph stands were driven from the Stadium while the varsity team put on its finishing touches which, it hopes, will be good enough to beat Yale on Saturday. Later the gates were thrown wide open and 2,000 undergraduates rushed onto the concrete seats, cheered and sang as Harvard's three elevens worked out on a few kick-off returns. They then followed the players to the locker building and sang and cheered some more until Fisher's football warriors dressed and started off for the Belmont Country Club in a procession of motors.

Harvard ran through its plays today as it in all probability will start the game on Saturday. The line from left to right end includes Combs, Eastman, Hubbard, Greenough, Dunker, Evans and Hill. The backs were Cheek, Hammond and Coburn, while Lee was the first man at quarter, with McGlone working for a time with the first team. It is not taken here that Lee will begin the game at quarter ahead of McGlone, but Coach Fisher said before going to camp tognight that he would not make his final decision until the last moment.

Jenkins on Third Team.

McGlone ran this afternoon as if he were completely recovered from his bumping down at Princeton, but Grew, who is counted on as first substitute at either guard, was still walking with a cane. The first team of substitutes were arranged in the same manner as it was yesterday and Jenkins continued to run through signals with the third team.

At the mass meeting last night both Lee and McGlone were on the platform with the players who are expected to begin the game, and Jenkins and Hammond were on the platform also. Cordingly, however, is the man on whose punting most reliance is now placed in the event of a mishap to Hammond.

Harvard's optimism continues and the team has been brought down to the scratch, feeling that it has an even chance to win.

The coaches are positive that their line has improved enough to be able to cope with the New Haven forwards and, having almost the entire first and second set of backs to work with for two weeks, Ned Mahan sees a great improvement in his carriers. The work this week has been tremendously hard, although there have been no contact scrimmages. Bob Fisher believes that much of the time lost earlier in the season has been made up and that Harvard will have a much improved team in the Stadium against Yale.

To Depend on Old Plays.

Captain Hubbard on the line and Coburn in the backfield are regarded as indispensables. Coburn has developed into one of the best defensive backs Harvard has had in several seasons, and Captain Hubbard is the life of the line. Eastman's work has been speeded up to a marked degree and so has that of Evans, the other tackle. There has been much talk about the new offense which Harvard has been putting on during the last two weeks. There may be some new wrinkles, possibly some laterals and plays with rushline interference, but Coach Fisher is strong for the old plays which the players know well and which, if properly executed, are good enough to provide Harvard with its share of the gains, according to the viewpoint of the head coach.

The betting continued 2 to 1 in Boston today but no more has been heard of the 3 to 2 money which said that Yale would win by at least 18 points.

Coach Baldwin Wary of Injuries Before Lafayette Encounter.

Special to The New York Times.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Nov. 22.—A light workout today marked the final practice for the Lehigh squad in priming for the Lafayette game here on Saturday afternoon. While a bit of offensive scrimmage was meted out to the regulars, it was by no means gruelling, and every precaution was taken to prevent possible injury. That several of the regulars are not in perfect condition was divulged at a "pep" meeting shortly before the start of the practice session, when Coach Baldwin, who was one of the speakers, stated that although handicapped somewhat with injuries his team is prepared for the battle.

The final polishing will take place tomorrow when the two squads will be run through a long session of signal drill. A monster smoker is arranged for tomorrow night.

LAFAYETTE FINISHES DRILL.

Last Practice for Lehigh Game Devoted to Perfecting Plays.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTON, Pa., Nov. 22.—The Lafayette football squad was put through its final paces in preparation for the Lehigh game this afternoon. There was no scrimmage, but the Lehigh formations were demonstrated once more and then the Maroon team was given considerable work in prefecting a number of new plays which will be used against their old rivals on Saturday at Bethlehem. From all indications all the varsity men, with the possible exception of Ernst, will be able to start against Lehigh. If Ernst does not play, Ford will take his place at quarter, with Chicknoski calling the signals. The sale of tickets has been unusually large and the Lafayette allotment has been practically exhausted by students and alumni of the Easton Institute.

BEZDEK TO BE PREPARED.

May Start Wentz Against Pittsburgh If Field Is Muddy.

Special to The New York Times.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Nov. 22.—That Coach Hugo Bezdek of Penn State expects to be prepared in the event of a muddy field on Thanksgiving Day against the University of Pittsburgh was evidenced in practice this afternoon, when he spent a large part of his time with Barney Wentz at the fullback post in place of Light. Wentz pierced the second team line almost at will, and if the going is at all heavy next week it is likely that he will start.

Mike Palm, star quarterback, was kept out of the scrimmage session today, Lafferty directing the varsity attack. Palm is rapidly recovering from his injury, but the coaches want to save him as much as possible for the final game.

NOTRE DAME OFF FOR GAME.

Leaves for Pittsburgh to Play Carnegie Tech Tomorrow.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 22.—Coach Rockne and the Notre Dame football squad left tonight for Pittsburgh, where they will meet Carnegie Tech on Forbes Field on Saturday afternoon. Today's practice was light, consisting of gymnastic exercises, a short signal drill and a dummy scrimmage against Tech plays. With the exception of Don Miller, whose injury will keep him out of the game, the squad is in good shape.

YALE ELEVEN HOLDS LAST DRILL IN BOWL

O'HEARN OUT IN UNIFORM

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 22.—Yale's entire student body tonight completed preparations for invading Boston tomorrow with the Eli football eleven for what the betting odds of 3 to 1 forecast as Yale's first gridiron victory in seven years over Harvard. Yale is confidently expecting victory, despite the coaches' warnings against overconfidence and reports from Cambridge that Harvard is having a whirlwind week preparing an eleven which may hurl the Eli's back to a standstill in the clash Saturday.

The Elis covered all the Harvard money in sight today, and financial offerings from Cambridge closed tonight with the odds at 3 to 1 against Harvard. Yale heeded no warning note in the willingness of the Crimson backers to give odds that Harvard will score.

In the face of such flattering odds, some of the undergraduates are preparing to celebrate Yale's greatest athletic season in thirty years with victories in all four major sports—football, baseball, track athletics and rowing—against both Harvard and Princeton, in freshman as well as varsity athletics, together with titles in basketball, rifle shooting, tennis and swimming.

Charley O'Hearn, Yale's all-around star, who has been out since the Bucknell game with an injured leg, was out in uniform today, but it is not expected he will play against Harvard. He will, however, accompany the team.

Today the Yale team went through another hour's routine in which the first two elevens reeled off the plays selected as scoring possibilities against Harvard. It was the final visit of the year to the Bowl and to the practice field for the squad. The scrubs did not report. Their season closed last night and they will be tendered a dinner next week. A student cheering section gave a final welcome to the team from the sidelines during the afternoon's rehearsal.

Immediately following the final signal drill, Johnny Schoonmaker, manager of the football eleven, shipped the baggage of the team to Boston under the charge of two assistants. It will be awaiting the arrival of the squad in the Yale dressing rooms in the gymnasium tomorrow.

The squad of thirty-six players will leave here at 10:32 o'clock tomorrow morning over the Shore Line for Boston. The team is due in Boston at 2:30 o'clock at the Back Bay Station. The players will be taken in automobiles to the Stadium, where they will dress in the gymnasium locker rooms and practice an hour, after which they will return to the Hotel Lenox, their quarters while in Boston. The team will be given a dinner there Saturday night, win or lose.

The election of a captain for next year has been ordered postponed until after Thanksgiving Day.

Yale's line-up against Harvard has been finally ordered as follows, with assurance tonight that every player is in excellent condition:

WILL RUN SPECIAL TRAINS TO BOSTON

New Haven Road Announces Schedule of Extra Service for Harvard-Yale Game.

The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad will run several special trains to Boston today to accommodate persons in this city who attend the football game between Yale and Harvard in Cambridge tomorrow. Extra trains will leave the Grand Central Terminal at 10 A. M., 12:20 P. M., 12:40 P. M. and 4:30 P. M. The Knickerbocker Limited and the Merchants' Limited, regular Boston trains, will run extra sections for Boston only at 1:03 P. M. and 5:03 P. M. respectively.

On Sunday extra trains will be run from Boston to this city. These will leave Boston at 10 A. M., 1 P. M., 3:30 P. M., 5 P. M. and 5:03 P. M. These trains will have parlor cars only, and dining car service will be provided. With the exception of the train leaving Boston at 3:30 P. M., these trains will be operated as limited trains.

Traffic regulations for the game were announced by the Harvard Athletic Association yesterday. The game will start at 2 P. M. and the gates will be opened at 12:30 P. M. The gates on North Harvard Street are numbered from the Anderson Bridge. Holders of tickets in sections 23 to 37 should enter the stadium at gate No. 1, those holding tickets for sections 38 to 51 at gate No. 3, sections 1 to 10 at gate No. 4 and sections 11 to 23 at gate No. 5. Holders of standing room tickets on top of the stadium will enter through gate No. 4.

For persons parking automobiles either in the private parking field or the Brighton playground off Western Avenue there will be a special entrance through the wire fence directly into Soldiers Field. Persons parking cars on the Metropolitan Parkway in Brighton may enter either through the pedestrian gate at the southeast corner of the field or through the gate opposite the Newell boathouse on the northwest side of the field.

Automobile traffic will be handled as follows: After 12 o'clock noon, Harvard Square from Quincy to Brattle Street, Boylston Street, Cambridge, the Anderson Bridge and North Harvard Street, Brighton, will be closed to automobile traffic as far as Western Avenue, Brighton. The only automobile gates admitting to Soldiers' Field will be on the Metropolitan Parkway at the southwest corner of the field. These may be reached from Boston by Commonwealth Avenue to Brighton Avenue to Union Square, Allston, to North Beacon Street to Everett Street to Soldiers' Field. Cars coming from Watertown and Waltham should come via North Beacon Street to Everett Street to Soldiers' Field. The whole of Allston Bridge will be open for traffic. From 12:30 P. M. until 2 P. M. the Cottage Farm Bridge and the new temporary bridge will be one way coming toward Cambridge; at the end of the game, from 4:15 until 5:30, they will be one way going toward Boston.

Taxis and other automobiles which do not park, if coming through Brighton, may unload their passengers at the corner of North Harvard Street and Western Avenue about 200 yards from Gate No. 5. If coming via Cambridge by the Parkway from Boston they will be required to unload and turn at De Wolfe Square on the Parkway, about 800 yards below the Anderson Bridge on the Cambridge side.

There will be no tickets on sale at any gate. All occupants of automobiles which park within Soldiers' Field must show their tickets when entering the gate in order to be admitted.

GREENLEAF SERVED WITH COURT ORDER

Receives Summons Just Before Beginning Pocket Billiard Match With Shoemaker.

MAYER THE COMPLAINANT

Champion Must Show Cause Today Why He Should Not Be Restrained From Play Pending Action.

Shortly before Ralph Greenleaf, the world's pocket billiard champion, stepped to the table for his special match against J. Howard Shoemaker of New York at the Strand Billiard Academy yesterday afternoon he was served with a summons which ordered him to appear in the Supreme Court of New York County, at the Special Term, Part I., this morning, to show cause why he should not be restrained and enjoined from playing this match during the pendency of the action started against him by Joseph Mayer of Philadelphia, President of the Hudson Recreation Company, Inc., and holder of the National Championship Pocket Billiard League franchise in Philadelphia. Mayer contended that Greenleaf had violated his contract with him and started the action in order to force Greenleaf to abide by the terms of the agreement. The court summons was signed by Justice Daniel F. Cohalan of the Supreme Court of New York County.

Greenleaf accepted the service of the summons, then went into the exhibition room and started the match. He said that he would be represented at court this morning by counsel and did not expect to answer the summons in person. He said that he had nothing to say, but that his counsel would explain for him in court. He said he felt that he had a good case and was willing to go through with it. He contended that he had violated no agreements in playing the match.

The officials of the National Championship Pocket Billiard League refused to make any statement yesterday as to what action the league will take, but Frank A. Dwyer, President of the league, when interviewed at the National Recreation Academy in Brooklyn, said that there was no question that Greenleaf not only had violated his contract with Mayer, but also had been guilty of a violation of Rule 9 of the league, which stated clearly that no player in the league could engage in outside matches without gaining the consent of the holder of the league franchise in the city where the exhibition match was played.

Mayer's Complaint.

"I am the President and General Manager of the Hudson Recreation Company, Inc. This company conducts a large billiard academy in Philadelphia.

"On Oct. 30, 1923, on behalf of the plaintiff, I entered into an agreement with E. Ralph Greenleaf, the defendant herein, a copy of which agreement is hereto annexed and made a part hereof. This agreement provided in substance that in consideration of the sum of $125 per week to be paid by the plaintiff to the defendant, the defendant agreed to play exhibition games in the billiard academy of the plaintiff. In further consideration of such payments the defendant also agreed to give the plaintiff first call on his services and that at no time between Nov. 16, 1923, and April 5, 1924, would he play exhibition or match games other than those scheduled in the National Championship Pocket Billiard League, without the consent of the plaintiff.

"In addition to the amount specified in said contract the plaintiff had prior to the making thereof agreed to pay the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company the sum of $100 per week for the defendant's services. The plaintiff was therefore obliged to pay the defendant $225 per week during the term of said agreement and in addition his traveling expenses while playing scheduled games in the National Championship Pocket Billiard League.

"On Nov. 21 the defendant informed deponent that he was going to play a match with one J. Howard Shoemaker at the Strand Billiard Academy, in New York City, which was to be played in a series beginning on the afternoon of Nov. 22, 1923.

"Your deponent informed the defendant that the plaintiff would under no circumstances consent to such a match at this time, and that if he played Shoemaker despite plaintiff's consent it would be in violation of his contract with the plaintiff. The said Greenleaf thereupon informed deponent that contract or no contract he was going through with the match with Shoemaker and that nobody could stop him.

Fears Greenleaf May Lose.

"The said Shoemaker is the former national amateur pocket billiard champion of the United States, having held that title for a period of ten years. He is considered one of the best pocket billiardists in the world, including both professionals and amateurs, and has actually won matches from the defendant on two occasions. In my opinion as a billiardist [I was at one time amateur billiard champion of the United States] there is serious danger that Greenleaf may lose the match with Shoemaker. If he should lose, his drawing power would be sure to decrease. The value of the plaintiff's contract with me would be greatly lessened and the plaintiff would suffer irreparable damages thereby. I am informed and verily believe that the said Greenleaf is financially irresponsible and would not be in a position to satisfy judgment if one were obtained against him."

Both Greenleaf and Mayer consulted with Thomas A. Dwyer, secretary-treasurer of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company yesterday, but Mr. Dwyer declined again to take any sides. He said that this was a matter for the league to settle and not for him. He explained that this was the first case of this kind that had been called to his attention in recent years.

Henry Mayer of 27 William Street is counsel for Joseph Mayer, the plaintiff. Greenleaf will be represented by Rudolph Stand, counsel for the Strand Academy.

Charles S. Kline, who is president of the Strand Academy, said yesterday that Greenleaf had arranged to play for him a few weeks ago and that in requesting Greenleaf to honor his agreement he was doing nothing more than that which was within his right.

It was learned that Greenleaf, in the event he is restrained from playing, his contract with Mayer canceled, and that he also is suspended by the league, will not be out of work. Kline yesterday stated that he had offered Greenleaf a two-year contract calling for $6,000 a year for Greenleaf to play for him only three days out of each week.

Greenleaf Wins Two Games.

Despite the burden of the legal controversy, Greenleaf was returned a winner in both blocks of his scheduled six-block match with Shoemaker. In the afternoon game Greenleaf won by the score of 125 to 115, but only after he had been trailing at one time by 125 to 106. He went out in the fourteenth inning with an unfinished run of 32. He had a high run of 38. Shoemaker had consecutive high runs of 43 and 36.

In the evening game Greenleaf won by the score of 125 to 42. He went out in the tenth inning with an unfinished run of 60. The crowd requested that he continue his run and he totaled 68 before he missed.

At the end of the second block Greenleaf leads by 250 to 157. The match is at 750 points and will be continued this afternoon in the event Greenleaf is not restrained from playing by the court.

O'Callaghan, Stevens Back, Played Despite Broken Rib

Doctors yesterday discovered that Harold O'Callaghan, Stevens fullback during the past season, is suffering with a broken rib and that he received the injury in the game against the U. S. S. Colorado eleven two weeks ago. Since then he has played his position throughout the contest with the Massachusetts Aggies and Swarthmore. Though his injury gave him great pain, he suffered in silence, fearing that discovery of the nature of his hurt would mean his removal from the game.

COLUMBIA IS VICTOR IN CLASS A SQUASH

Gould Makes First Appearance of Season and Helps Beat Princeton Club.

HARVARD ALSO WINS MATCH

Standing of the Teams.

Princeton	1	1	0
Crescent A. C.	0	2	0

The Columbia and Harvard University Clubs won the two games played yesterday in the Class A interclub championship of the Metropolitan Squash Tennis League. Columbia, with the aid of Jay Gould, who was making his first appearance of the season, defeated the Princeton Club on the latter's courts by the score of 4 matches to 3. Harvard, which drew a bye on the opening day of play, made an impressive showing in its first match, making a clean sweep over the strong Crescent A. C. team, which included in its line up R. Earl Fink, the national champion, and Charles M. Bull Jr.

For the second time within a week, Fink bowed to Hewitt Morgan, Harvard's newly-developed star. In the final of the national Fall scratch tournament, Morgan won in three games out of five, after losing the first two games. Yesterday, Fink again started strong and took the opening game in comparatively easy fashion, only to have Morgan come through in the next two games for the match at 6—15, 15—10, 15—17. Harvard is now tied for first place in the team standing with Yale, which drew a bye yesterday and won its first match from Columbia by the score of 4 matches to 3. Princeton and Columbia are tied for third each with 1 game won and 1 lost, and the Crescent A. C. is last with 2 games lost.

Gould Shows Old Form.

Gould's work in his first match of the season was marked by the same sterling brand of squash that he showed last year, in spite of the fact that he has been ill and was troubled with a sore throat. He allowed A. W. Riley only 6 points in the opening game and 2 in the second, winning 15—6, 15—2. The Columbian hit everything within reach, making his usual uncanny gets almost off the floor and playing the angles in the most effective fashion. Riley seldom was able to do more than to get the ball back, so completely did Gould have the play under control. Gould's speed and headwork and his quickness in seizing upon his openings kept the Orange and Black representative on the defensive throughout the match.

Kingsley Kunhardt, number 2 on the Blue and White, was carried to two bitterly-fought, extra-point games before he was able to win from Basil Harris. The first game was set 3 points and the second 5, and each of them was won by the margin of a single point. R. H. Haines of Columbia was likewise extended by Gavin Brackenridge before he was able to win in straight games at 18—16, 18—17. In neither of these two games was there anything to choose between winner and loser. Either game might easily have gone the other way.

R. V. Mahon won Columbia's fourth match, defeating N. G. Larson, after losing the first game, at 14—17, 15—8, 15—11. J. M. Denison, R. L. Farrelly and J. C. Neely won for Princeton. Neely won by the default of W. A. Kimbel at the end of the second game, each having won one. The former Columbia basketball star was accidentally struck on the mouth by his opponent's racquet during the second game and play was stopped for several minutes before it was resumed. As his team already had clinched the victory, Kimbel defaulted after Neely won the second game. Denison defeated M. L. Cornell, 15—5, 15—9, and Farrelly won from F. S. Keeler, 15—9, 15—12.

Fink-Morgan Match Prolonged.

The match between Fink and Morgan was the only one of the seven between Harvard and the Crescent A. C. that went to an extra game. Every one of the six others was decided in quick fashion. Charles M. Bull Jr., second man on the team, was able to get only 7 points in each game from F. Van S. Hyde. Murray Taylor disposed of C. W. Dinges at 15—5, 15—7. William Rand Jr. allowed N. F. Torrance 2 points in the first chapter and 4 in the second. P. M. Morrison defeated C. W. Fyfe at 15—7, 15—6. Rand won from J. C. Tredwell at 15—3, 15—13, and Donald Bellows could take only 3 points from G. M. Rushmore in the first game and 10 in the second.

Fink led throughout the opening game with Morgan, using a straight up-and-down drive with great speed to good effect and practically depending upon it for every one of his points. Morgan did not find himself until the second game, when he got his angle shots working in pretty fashion. His method of taking his opponent's smashes off the front walls with his nick shots was most effective in handling Fink's speed and enabled him to keep the ball in play with little of the effort that the other was making. Fink held a slight lead at the start. As Morgan gradually warmed to the play the Harvard star evened the score and went into the lead, which he increased until toward the end, when Fink rallied and pulled up a bit.

Fink Stages Rally.

Morgan continued his winning play in the third game and went into a lead of 11—6. At this point Fink changed his tactics and started to angle his shots for the first time with any consistency. He picked up eight points before his opponent could get a one and tied the score at 14—14. The game was set three points. Fink won two points and then became hand out. Morgan won the game by taking three points in his next hand on a telltale, a service ace and an out.

Three Gonzaga Players Win Detroit Trip on Toss of Coin

SPOKANE, Wash., Nov. 22.—The toss of a coin gave three Gonzaga players a trip to Detroit and disappointed three others yesterday. When Coach Dorais chose his team to oppose Detroit University he was unable to make a choice between Gray and Frazier, ends; Keyes and Lynch, halfbacks, and Sweeney and Hedges, quarterbacks. In his office the man flipped a coin to decide. Gray, Keyes and Sweeney won. Gonzaga alumni and representatives of the city and Chamber of Commerce are to accompany the team to Detroit to witness the game.

JEROME AND DUANE AT GARDEN TONIGHT

Bronx Rivals Will Clash Again in Feature Bout—Davis and Brown in Semi-Final.

Boxing followers of the metropolitan district are looking forward to an exceptionally fast bout tonight when Frankie Jerome and Carl Duane, both of the Bronx, meet in a scheduled fifteen-round engagement that will feature the boxing show at Madison Square Garden. This will be their second meeting of the present indoor season. The last bout resulted in a draw. In their previous meeting, which opened the season at the Garden on Sept. 21, Jerome was regarded as a slight favorite, but Duane by making a strong finish earned a draw.

Both boys have trained hard for this bout and each reports himself in the best of physical condition. Both will report at the offices of the New York State Athletic Commission this afternoon at 2 o'clock for the purpose of weighing in. Their agreement calls for 122 pounds and each is expected to be well inside the weight limit.

Willie Davis and Mickey Brown, who waged a great battle in the semi-final to the last Jerome-Duane bout, will meet again in the semi-final tonight. Frankie Ritchie and Jimmy Hutchinson will meet in the opening bout of four rounds, while the six-rounder will bring together Nat Pincus and Jack Snyder.

SELLER BEATS FAY IN SQUASH MATCH

Standing of the Teams.

	Won.	Lost.	Tie.
D. K. E.	2	0	0
Harvard	2	1	0
Princeton	2	1	0
N. Y. A. C.	2	1	0
Montclair A. C.	1	1	1
Crescent A. C.	0	2	1
Heights Casino	0	3	0

F. A. Seller of the Montclair A. C. defeated W. P. Fay of the Harvard Club, 15—12, 18—17, in their postponed match in the Class B interclub play of the Metropolitan Squash Tennis League on the courts of the Harvard Club yesterday. This victory gave the New Jersey team the match between the two combinations by the score of 4 to 3. Seller was struck on the head at the beginning of the contest between the two players on Nov. 13 and the team match resulted in a 3—3 tie. Harvard now becomes tied with Princeton and the N. Y. A. C. for third place, each team having won two games and lost one. Montclair has won one, lost one and tied one. Seller must meet E. P. Cyplot of the Crescent A. C. to break the 3—3 tie between these two teams.

The Montclair veteran's clever playing enabled him to offset the superior speed of Fay. In the first game Seller led all the way. The second chapter was close throughout. Seller let down a bit, while the Harvard representative continued to play up as in the first game, with the result that the New Jersey man was compelled to call upon all his resourcefulness to keep on even terms with the other. At no time was either player more than two or three points in the lead. When 18—all was reached the game was set 5 points. Each won 4 points, and then after several hands-out Seller won the deciding point.

STARS EXPECTED TO SHINE.

Conference Leaders Will Depend on Grange, Kipke and Martineau.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Individual play of three gridiron stars is expected to assume an important part in deciding this year's Western Conference football championship. With three teams in striking distance of the title and all depending on the outcome of the closing games Saturday, the individual star of the season on each of the teams is counted on to put through the plays that will spell victory and the championship.

Illinois, with four victories and no defeats, meeting Ohio State, is depending on Harold Grange, outstanding star of the big ten. Minnesota and Michigan, meeting at Ann Arbor, are the other teams with a chance at the title. Kipke, Michigan's shining light, will be pitted against Martineau, Minnesota star, and second only to Grange in individual scoring in the Conference.

Ohio State, strongly determined to humble Illinois, is depending on the united efforts of the eleven to stop the smashing attack of Grange.

GAMES TO BE REPRODUCED

Western Contests to Be Shown Here, Play by Play, Tomorrow.

H. A. Carr of this city, President of the Western Conference Association of New York, announced yesterday that the football game between Michigan and Minnesota at Ann Arbor and that between Wisconsin and Chicago at Chicago will be reproduced, play by play, tomorrow afternoon at the Aldine Club, 200 Fifth Avenue, for the benefit of graduates of these colleges in this city. He also announced that the Ohio State-Illinois game at Columbus will be reproduced at Ohio Society rooms in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. The reports are scheduled to begin at 2:30 P. M., New York time.

MILTON BEATS CATENA.

Springs Surprise by Gaining Decision in Rink Arena Bout.

Tommy Milton, the Harlem flyweight, received the decision over Henry Catena, former National Guard champion, at the close of a hard fought twelve-round bout at the Rink Arena in Brooklyn last night. The result came as a big surprise, as Catena had entered the ring a strong favorite. Milton, however, made an exceptionally fine showing and, by landing the cleaner punches, carried off the honors in nine of the twelve rounds.

KIRBY EASY VICTOR IN GARDEN BOUT

Boston Boxer Beats Simmons of Pittsburgh in Intercity Contest—Krebs Out of Final.

The 7,000 fans who attended the amateur boxing show at Madison Square Garden last night witnessed a varied program, in every bout of which the principals were willing and eager to fight. In the 175-pound class intercity final Tom Kirby of Boston had an easy time disposing of Stanley Simmons of Pittsburgh. Kirby was much the better boxer and was never obliged to extend himself. He easily blocked his opponent's blows and at the same time kept sending tantalizing left jabs at Simmons's face until it was covered with blood.

The final in the 118-pound class was ended in short order when Patsey Ruffalo of Mount Vernon had Robert Chaparro of New York staggering and helpless after about two minutes in the first round.

Paul Gulotta of New York received warm applause when he defeated Bob Griffin of Boston in the 126-pound intercity final. Gulotta easily checked his rival's rushing attack.

In the 130-pound intercity class Fred Krebs of New York, although getting the decision over Frank Senk of Pittsburgh in the semi-final, was so severely cut up that he could not compete in the final. Yale O'Kun of the Education Alliance, New York, who beat Bart O'Neill of Boston in the other semi-final, won the final by default.

The summaries:

STANWIX CAPTURES TIP TOP HANDICAP

GENERAL THATCHER BEATEN

Special to The New York Times.

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 22.—For the second day in succession the colors of the Rancocas Stable were carried to the front in the featured event on the card at Prince George Park this afternoon, when the two-year-old colt Stanwix, well ridden by M. Fator, easily accounted for the Tip Top Handicap, a sprint of six furlongs for all ages. Stanwix, carrying 102 pounds, came home in front in a field of ten, earning $1,000 for his stable and running the distance in the fast time of 1:13 1-5. The winner paid $10.70 on a $2 ticket in the mutuels.

The victory of the chestnut son of Ballot was all the more creditable against the older horses in the race, as the two-year-old was away slowly and was outrun during the early stages. In the last three furlongs he gained rapidly on the leaders and won with ease. Mrs. R. G. Miller's five-year-old gelding Wellfinder quickly took the lead at the start and set a fast clip, going to the quarter in 0:23, the half being reached in 0:47 3-5. Wellfinder could not hold the pace, faltering in the final test.

J. S. Cosden's two-year-old Lord Baltimore II. then took up the running, but went wide entering the homestretch and then faded completely to finish last. Stanwix had been forging ahead, after being in seventh position at the quarter-mile pole. Fator sent him through on the inside turning into the homestretch, saving ground, and the colt closed with a fine burst of speed, disposing of the leaders in the last sixteenth to win by two and a half lengths over the Greentree Stable's three-year-old filly Pandowdy. Pandowdy came up on the outside with a rush as the winner was coming through on the inside and beat R. L. Gerry's three-year-old colt Cyclops by a head. The latter had taken the lead for a brief period at the head of the homestretch, but weakened in the closing strides. He held on just long enough to beat Wellfinder for the short end of the money. W. C. Clancy's Hullabaloo, the favorite in the betting at 11 to 5, quit after being up with the leaders.

Flint Stone Surprises.

The Nevada Stock Farm's General Thatcher, the odds-on public choice at 7 to 20, was another favorite to go down, being beaten in the Rosemont Purse, for three-year-olds at a mile and seventy yards, by J. McMillen's Flint Stone and the Greentree Stable's Moonraker, the latter the second choice in the wagering.

Moonraker, with Corcoran in the saddle, sprinted out to an easy lead and saved ground throughout the journey. The chestnut son of Broomstick faltered in the last furlong when challenged by Flint Stone, which had been fated off the early pace, responded courageously to a drive by Fields and was up in the last sixteenth to beat Moonraker by a length.

General Thatcher moved up into second place at the turn out of the backstretch with a menacing challenge for the leaders, but tired as it short, finishing four lengths behind Moonraker and the same distance in front of Hell Gate. General Thatcher carried top weight of 111 pounds, giving three to the two that beat him. The winner paid $18 in the mutuels and ran the distance in 1:44.

The Scandal Purse, a six-furlong dash for two-year-old fillies, was an easy victory for the Greentree Stable's Leopardess, which was one of two favorites to come home in front during the course of the afternoon. The bay daughter of Dominant, ridden by McAtee, rushed to the front soon after the barrier went up, saved ground all the way and never was in serious danger, winning by a length and a half from the Rancocas Stable's Peter Pan filly Exploit. Exploit, with M. Fator up, ran a good race, but was never able to seriously menace the flying Leopardess.

Marie Martin Tires.

The Audley Farms' Marie Martin showed a good turn of speed, but tired slightly in the final test, although she was able to hold on to take the short end of the purse from Roman Girl. The winner was the 1-to-2 favorite.

Zev's Retirement Announced; In Memoriam Not Coming East

Special to The New York Times.

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 22.—There will be no more match races among the leading three-year-olds this season, it was definitely decided here today. Sam Hildreth announced this afternoon that Zev will be shipped to the Rancocas Stable's farm at Jobstown, N. J., to be retired for the season. Zev has won a total of $286,073 and will thus lose the opportunity for the present of surpassing the total of $291,275 piled up by the English horse Isinglass. A telegram was received here this afternoon from Carl Wiedemann, owner of In Memoriam, stating that the conqueror of Zev had been retired from training and could not be prepared in time for a match race with Zev during the meeting at Prince George Park.

THREE U. S. HORSES SCORE.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. — Three United States Army horses, ridden by army officers, scored against the cream of the jumpers of Canada and the United States yesterday at the Toronto (Canada) Horse Show, the War Department announced today. In the premier event of the show, the $500 jumping stake, Miss America won first place and Nigra won third. In the difficult pen jump event, Jacksnipe won second place.

These three horses, all owned by the army, are among the horses being trained at Fort Myer, Va., to represent the United States at the Olympic Games next year.

It was necessary to jump off the $500 stake three times before the first three horses could be placed. Ballymacshane, an American horse, owned by M. Bontecou of New York, which won second in the $500 stake, probably will be among the United States entries at the Olympic Games.

WORLD'S TURF RACE AT PARIS DOUBTFUL

J. D. Cohn Believes Americans Would Not Send Horse on Such a Long Journey.

THINKS MAY 3 TOO EARLY

Suggests Grand Prix Open to 3 and 4-Year-Olds to Be Run the Latter Part of June.

PARIS, Nov. 22.—The opinions of other leading experts on the plan for an international race at Longchamps next May to decide the champion running horse of the breeding of 1920 are printed today by the racing paper Paris Sport.

Jefferson D. Cohn, owner of Sir Galahad and Checkmate, two of the possible competitors, believes such a match would be most difficult to arrange, "first because the Americans would not come."

"The Americans," he says, "like to compete when they have the best chance of winning, which is not the case in such a race, necessitating a voyage, and in which a horse ought to have six months for acclimation. Can you name a single American crack which could come through Europe and compete with the best English and French horses?"

Captain Cohn believes the selection of representatives will be most difficult. The date suggested, May 3, is also too early, he says. He would prefer the creation of a Grand Prix open to three and four-year-olds, weight for age, to be run about the end of June over a distance of 2,400 meters, in accordance with the regulations of the English sweepstakes.

Neither objects to the proposed date, but both are convinced that 2,400 meters would be the most suitable distance. They favor two representatives for each country and selection by elimination tests between the winners of the classic events for two and three-year-olds.

GOULLET AND PIANI PAIR.

Will Join Team in Six-Day Bicycle Race Next Month.

Alfred Goullet, winner of numerous Garden grinds, will be paired with Orlando Piani, the Italian champion cyclist, in the international six-day race which will start on Dec. 3 in Madison Square Garden. Goullet signed a contract yesterday to ride in the coming race and chose Piani, with whom he rode so brilliantly in team races during the last outdoor season at the New York Velodrome, as a partner.

In picking Piani, Goullet said: "Grenda and McNamara are both good riders, but I don't think either of them is anywhere near as fast as Piani. I want a rider who will be able to score points in the sprints with me, and I am sure I will have an ideal teammate."

Piani showed considerable enthusiasm when informed that he had been chosen to ride with Goullet. He stated that he had been training on road riding for over a month and that he was confident that with so formidable a man as Goullet for partner he would realize his ambition to win a New York six-day race.

Squash Tourney Postponed.

The invitation squash tennis tournament which was to have begun tomorrow on the courts of the Princeton Club was yesterday postponed until Monday.

Dibut, Cuba's Pitching Star, Is Obtained by Cincinnati

CINCINNATI, Nov. 22.—Pedro Dibut, ranked with Adolfo Luque as Cuba's greatest pitcher, has been obtained for the Cincinnati Nationals, according to a special dispatch to The Cincinnati Times-Star from Havana, Cuba. Pepe Conte, representing the Cincinnati club, came to terms with Dibut today, the dispatch stated. Dibut is a sturdy right-hander, a little larger than Luque, Cincinnati's star pitcher last season, and is the sensation of Cuba's Winter league.

NEWTON IS WINNER IN PINEHURST FINAL

Brookline Golfer Defeats Davis by 3 Up and 2 to Play in Carolina Tournament.

PINEHURST, N. C., Nov. 22.—The annual Carolina tournament was brought to a close here today when F. C. Newton of Brookline, playing at the top of his game, defeated H. K. B. Davis of Mount Tom by 3 up and 2 to play. Newton, North and South amateur titleholder and medalist in the tournament, covered the course in par figures and never made a really bad shot. After the fourth hole he had the match well in hand and permitted his opponent to win only one hole, the tenth.

Davis was the first to score when he took the third hole with a par 4 after a fine second shot from the rough to the edge of the green. Newton rimmed the cup on his try for a half. Newton took the fourth hole almost making an eagle 2 and going down for a birdie 3. He assumed the lead at the fifth hole when Davis hooked his drive into the woods. The next two holes were halved in par figures but Newton became 2 up at the eighth hole which he won with a birdie 4. At the ninth hole, Davis missed a two-foot putt for a half but he gathered in the tenth when Newton's second shot fell short of the green.

This was the last hole that Davis won. He played a beautiful second to the sand on the 400-yard eleventh but missed his put and had to be content with a half. At the twelfth, a par 5 affair, Davis, after trapping his drive, played a fine out but Newton laid his third shot dead to the pin and holed out for a birdie 4. They halved the next three holes and Newton ended the match, 3 and 2, when they both went down in 3 on the sixteenth green.

The cards:

Out—
Newton	4	5	5	3	3	3	4	4	4	—35
Davis	4	5	4	4	4	3	4	5	5	—38
In—
Newton	5	4	4	3	4	4	4	4	4	—36—71
Davis	4	4	5	5	3	4	3	5	5	—37—75

The summaries:

Third Sixteen—A. S. Higgins, St. Andrew's, defeated E. H. Palser, Essex, 1 up (30 holes).

WANT TO CONTINUE WALKER CUP MATCHES

Financing Trip Only Impediment, Says Secretary Lee of U. S. G. A. on Return From Abroad.

That British golfdom is anxious to continue the Walker Cup international matches begun two years ago is the word brought from the other side by Cornelius S. Lee, Secretary of the United States Golf Association. Mr. Lee has been abroad since last July, spending most of his time in England and Scotland and playing considerable golf with the leading amateurs of those two countries.

"Everybody I talked with over there is anxious to have the matches continued," Mr. Lee said yesterday. "The only thing that can possibly interfere with holding these matches annually is the question of finances, and it is because golf authorities in England and Scotland are uncertain as to how the trip can be financed that they are reticent about sending a team over to the United States this year."

Unlike the situation in the United States, where there is a national organization, made up of member clubs all over the country, which contribute toward the expenses of operation, the British have no national golf body. The Royal and Ancient Club at St. Andrews is a governing body only in that it is vested with authority to pass on rules and regulations governing the game. It is in no other way a governing body such as is the U. S. G. A.

Furthermore, the British have not yet reached a point where they charge admission to championships—a practice adopted here a few years ago. In fact, St. Andrews itself, being a public course, is unable to charge admissions. So that the only way that the expenses of a team can be defrayed is through popular subscription, a method that was used when the first Walker Cup team came over to play the Americans at Southampton a year ago. In that instance the method was not quite successful, since there arose a controversy over the selection of the team and the amount subscribed was not sufficient to pay the expenses.

When the American team paid a return visit to England last Spring, its expenses were defrayed by the U. S. G. A. out of its funds.

According to Mr. Lee the Royal and Ancient Club is still considering the invitation extended it by the U. S. G. A. to send over another complement of golfers next year and will be glad to continue the matches if ways and means can be devised for meeting the expense of such an expedition.

"I talked with a number of golfers on the other side relative to the proposal of the U. S. G. A. to adopt a ball somewhat lighter than that which is the standardized ball of the present time and most of them are favorably inclined toward such a change," continued Mr. Lee. "They feel over there as some do here that the ball used at the present time has a trifle too much length."

WINE IS INCLUDED 'ON ATHLETES' MENU

Beer Also Will Be Served to Olympic Performers at Training Quarters in France.

PARIS, Nov. 22.—Light wines and beer will form part of the menu served to the Olympic athletes of nations electing to house their teams in the Olympic Village being erected near the Colombes Stadium. The settlement will be under the direct supervision of the French Olympic Committee.

So far, only the Americans, British and Italians have arranged to use various hotels and chateaux as their permanent residences during the games, and all three nations have reserved accommodation for a certain percentage of their teams at the Olympic Village. It is expected that, owing to the low figure charged by the French Olympic Committee for housing and feeding the athletes, most of the countries suffering from depreciated currencies will avail themselves of the opportunity afforded them by the French committee.

The village will be set out in groups of forty-four villas, each large enough to accommodate three athletes. All the latest sanitary devices have been installed, running cold and hot water, showers, &c. A safe deposit vault, foreign exchange bureau, barber shop, athletic goods store and laundry will also be available.

A large recreation hall is being built in the centre of the village. Meals will be taken in common in the large dining room adjoining the recreation hall. The following menu has been decided upon:

Breakfast: Coffee, tea or milk with bread, butter and jam. Eggs with bacon or ham, tea.

Dinner: Hors d'oeuvres, fish or entree or one egg, one order of meat, one vegetable, cheese, fruits. Half bottle red or white wine, or half litre beer, or half bottle water. Coffee, tea or milk.

Supper: Soup, entree, one order of meat, one vegetable, entremets and dessert. Beverages similar to noon-day meal.

The prices have not yet been fixed by the committee, but will be established upon cost prices of food and service.

ROLAND TODD TO BOX HERE.

Middleweight Champion of Europe Due to Arrive Tomorrow.

Roland Todd of England, middleweight champion of Europe, is expected to arrive in New York for his first visit of America tomorrow, according to word received here yesterday.

Todd is coming here in quest of more ring laurels and is expected to enter a challenge for a bout with Harry Greb involving the world's middleweight championship.

THE CONFUSED BRITISH ELECTION.

Prime Minister BALDWIN'S forcing of a general election on the issue of protection has led to an almost unexampled state of confusion, moral and political, in England. Nobody seems to know exactly where he stands or what he ought to do. This is partly due to the fact that the kind of protection urged by Mr. BALDWIN is both vague and elastic. In one place it means one thing, in another something wholly different. When plainly asked if protective duties would be maintained if they were found to work badly, he replied that they would not be. They may be changed from time to time. In fact, they may be altered while you wait. This evasive attitude on the part of the leader of the Conservative Party makes it hard to pin him down, but it leaves the public feeling that the whole affair is very mixed and uncertain.

Mr. BALDWIN is supposed to be a plain man without any dialectical kinks in his intellect, yet he has had to make explanations, and then to explain his explanations, very much as if he had been a subtle reasoner about protection like Mr. BALFOUR in 1905 and 1906. For example, the Prime Minister in one of his earlier addresses gave a pledge that no tax would be laid on English food. But this was felt to be too indefinite, and he was pressed for particulars. Then he stated that wheat and meat would be untaxed. Ah, but what did he mean by "meat"? Did he perchance mean only "butcher's meat"? How about bacon? Well, the unhappy man was forced to say that he did mean bacon, too, "the poor man's food," and also butter and eggs. If driven hard enough, he would doubtless make it clear that he would never consent to lay a tax on beef tongue or sheep's kidneys. But it is doubtful if any English election ever before saw a Prime Minister driven from pillar to post as regards the details of his plans, which, even so, he keeps partly veiled from the public view.

The plunge of the Conservative Party into a half-formed protective policy has caused much searching of heart among its members who have always stood for free trade, and also disclosed a remarkable agility on the part of some of them in getting out of an awkward predicament. Thus Lord ROBERT CECIL, just translated to the safety and silence of the House of Lords, in saying good-bye to his constituents affirmed that he remained a convinced free trader. Still, he observed in a rather orphic manner that it was not a theological discussion which had been thrust upon the country, and that therefore he did not feel called upon to throw any obstacles in the way of the Government. Much curiosity was felt as to what Lord DERBY would do. He stood up at Manchester and stoutly asserted that he proposed to continue to be known as a free trader, but added that he was not a "bigoted" one. In other words, he would stick by the Government even if it went counter to his most cherished political belief.

There has been a lot of this kind of moral gymnastics. In convulsions of the sort The Spectator easily leads all the rest. It admits that Prime Minister BALDWIN is committing himself and his party to the most outrageous economic fallacies and political blunders, but concludes that it is the duty of all to stand by him who do not wish to push the country into the abyss of socialism. The editor of The Spectator fairly writhes at having to vote for protection which his soul loathes, but hopes that Prime Minister BALDWIN, if he is returned to power, will make his protective tariff as wishy-washy as possible, and even then agree to submit it to a "Poll of the People." So many Conservative free traders are suffering agonies of a similar kind that their pitying friends must be glad for their sake that the election is so soon to be over.

The predictions are at present that the Conservatives will win, though by a narrow and insecure majority. If they do get one, it will be because the contest is three-cornered and the Liberals and Laborites are fighting each other as persistently as they fight the Conservatives. Mr. GARDINER has been tearfully pleading for a kind of working agreement between the Liberal Party and the Labor leaders, but none is as yet in sight. If the Conservatives obtain a plurality of the votes, it will be not because the country is in love with protection, but because it dreads the Labor Party and shudders at the thought of a capital levy.

A DEMOCRATIC ROAD TO RUIN.

It is to be hoped that Senator KING of Utah speaks only for himself when he says that there will be no union between the Republicans and Democrats on Secretary MELLON'S plan for reducing taxation. Senator WALSH of Massachusetts showed the path of wisdom, safety and patriotism when he said the question "is not a partisan "one. Let us get together with a de- "mand, whole-hearted and in a non- "partisan spirit, to reduce downward "and sharply the tax burden of the "American people—and above all, let "us do it at once." To do otherwise, to be afraid that the Republican Party may get too much credit—in other words, to imitate the mean and narrow partisanship of the Republicans in 1919—is to oppose the preponderant, the overwhelming desire of the American people.

To refuse to co-operate in a plan to check the bleeding of the pockets and the business of the country is, considered from the mere point of partisan prudence, immitigably foolish. The people know what is hurting them. They know how to punish those who, from petty and mistaken notions of political advantage, prevent the cure. Senator KING, to be sure, says that the Democrats will have their own plan, aiming at reductions greater than those proposed by Mr. MELLON. Apparently he thinks, the Democrats must have their own project. Public sentiment has already approved Mr. MELLON'S. Mr. KING agrees to the lowering of the rates on small and moderate incomes and the abolition of the nuisance taxes. But he joins the La Follettians in advocating an excess profit tax and higher inheritance taxes on great estates. We recommend to his attention these remarks of a Democratic newspaper, The Atlanta Constitution:

> The La Follettes of the Senate—and there are quite a few La Follettes also in the House—are determined, if they can, to not only fight any plan to reduce Federal taxes, as has been outlined as feasible by Secretary MELLON, but to actually impose further tax burdens upon the savings of the thrifty people of the country.

Senator KING is in bad company. He is inviting the Democratic Party to disaster.

DR. COOK'S CONVICTION.

The wildcat stock promoters in the Texas oil fields began to run for cover when Dr. FREDERICK A. COOK and thirteen of his co-workers in plucking the credulous were placed on trial in a Federal court at Fort Worth. Scores of fly-by-night companies closed their offices, the fungus oil press that advertised for victims suspended publication, and familiar faces were no longer seen in hotel lobbies. "It is amazing," said a visitor to Fort Worth, "how boldly these companies "float their worthless stocks. There "are any number of them fleecing the "innocent investors. I found the "town running wild." At Fort Worth the "reloading scheme" flourished. Its design was to merge defunct oil companies, the stockholders of which were asked to buy stock in the holding concern equivalent to 25 per cent. of their original investments. Thousands were persuaded to do this by glib canvassers and prospectuses. It was easy to get stockholder lists of the moribund and extinct companies. Dr. COOK'S Petroleum Producers' Association absorbed 250 of them with a guarantee that the merger company would pay dividends. It did—two of them in "stock." In one of his letters, of which he sent out as many as 300,000 a week, Dr. COOK gave a "reloader" investor this assurance: "In reply to yours of Aug. 28, there "is no market whatsoever for Heart "of the Duke at present. When the "same is converted into Association "shares it will have a market value "of one dollar a share."

The doctor also went gunning for shareholders of oil companies that still had assets. When they passed a dividend, shareholders were invited to take stock in the Petroleum Producers' Association. A letterhead bearing the name of the still going company was used. COOK'S promotion functioned under a "declaration of trust." Nothing in this document obligated the trustee to use the proceeds of stock sales for any specific purpose, but it provided that ultimately the assets would be divided among the shareholders. In some of these "promotions" the life of the trust was fixed at twenty years. If the trustees were dishonest, they could vote themselves any sum in salaries without violating a Texas statute. While this declaration of trust has been attacked, no decision upon its validity has been rendered by the court of last resort.

At his trial Dr. COOK contended that he was doing business within the law. But he had not reckoned with the Department of Justice at Washington. It was able to convict the defendants of fraudulent use of the mails and send them to jail for long terms.

The prosecution proved intent to defraud by introducing in evidence representations that the merger company could count upon settled production from more than 100 wells to pay dividends. A declaration that the "prob- "able yearly income after the pro- "posed drilling in fifty wells in the "Coridcana field will be between "$180,000,000 and $360,000,000" was also put in evidence. Dr. COOK swore that he had "only altruistic aims" in his "venture." The merger, he maintained, was a process of evolution. It would have been a great success, he argued, had oil not dropped to a dollar a barrel. According to the doctor's counsel, former United States Senator BAILEY, "COOK would have "made a success of the enterprise if "the Government had not come along "and interfered when it did." It was said in his behalf that he "took hold "of a dozen broken-down oil con- "cerns and made an honest effort to "rebuild them into paying concerns." The jury did not take that view of the case. Giving the defendants the benefit of every doubt, it brought in a verdict of guilty. If Dr. COOK did not discover the North Pole, he discovered the way to wealth in Texas. But it led to the prison door. It was characteristic of the man that as a promoter of wildcat oil companies he boasted that he had reached the Pole. The fiction was his certificate of integrity.

A POWERFUL PLEA.

It was not to be expected that President COOLIDGE would make direct and immediate response to the impressive document in support of our entering the World Court which was presented to him on Wednesday by representatives of the Protestant Churches in America. No answer was asked. The annual message to Congress, in whose preparation the President is now engaged, will undoubtedly carry his views on this important question and assure the public of what it has reason to expect, especially because of his announced attitude toward President HARDING'S policies. The World Court plea had back of it the Council, in which most of the denominations in the Protestant Churches are organically represented, numbering in their membership twenty million people. Still other denominations have also shown their sympathy, through their official representatives. They see in the World Court not only the fruition and consummation of decades of American discussions, plans and desires for peace through justice based on law, but a "concrete expression of Christian spirit."

With these forces zealously seeking to bring America into co-operation with other nations in establishing such an agency for international justice, with the American Bar Association unanimously for it, with President HARDING'S dying bequest in his ears, it can hardly be conceived that President COOLIDGE will not urge the Senate to adopt the proposal which was sent to it last February. This proposal embodied the plan proposed by Secretary HUGHES for entering the Court without involving the United States in any way in the League. The President may expect to have the great body of informed public sentiment behind him, and it is to be hoped that with the aid of such a sentiment he will be able to bring the World Court resolution out of the Committee on Foreign Affairs for the final consideration of the Senate. That would mean its adoption.

DEVASTATIONS OF HIRAM.

HIRAM JOHNSON was caught in a moment of "rare good humor" the other day. For some time his good humor will continue. He beckons to the "rank and file" in forty-eight States. Alike to Presidential preference primaries and conventions of "hand-picked" delegates he sounds his terrible approach. His posters blare from the walls of "every Republican club in Hudson County," New Jersey. SANFIELD MACDONALD of Oregon has already given him that State, Montana and California. Mr. JOHN DEVOY, who seldom permits himself to agree with anybody, heartily agrees with HIRAM, who "offers an American policy." The conquering Californian, unwilling to deny himself to any of these United States, seems ready to act upon Mr. GEORGE HENRY PAYNE'S thoughtful suggestion that "Senator JOHNSON might develop un- "expected strength in certain parts "of New England."

Conditions have entirely changed since 1920, and Mr. JOHNSON has changed into a reactionary. Then he was used by astute politicians against candidates whom they feared. Any strength that he develops on his own hook will be "unexpected." It is right and necessary that he should go to Massachusetts and strive to collect a delegate or two. It ought not to be doubtful that, a mountain among mountains, he will loom over Vermont and rescue its helpless Republican voters from the machine that is seeking to impose Mr. COOLIDGE upon them. He comes as an emancipator to the "rank and file." If they refuse to throw off their chains, it won't be on account of insufficient clanking on his part. Already he has won a preliminary victory. He is going to issue his message at Chicago Nov. 27, thus forestalling Mr. COOLIDGE and dimming the interest in his recommendations to Congress. The President can only recommend. Mr. JOHNSON always commands.

There is but one speck in this ungarnered fruit. What will avail the unexpected strength in New England if the expected weakness continues in California? In his June letter of disillusion Mr. JOHNSON poured out the sad conviction of his soul:

> I am under no illusions now about California. Really, C. K., I doubt if I could carry it against HOOVER, HARDING or any other candidate. The old crew are in the saddle. For the first time since 1910 they have the State, all its offices, and an active, militant organization, both in publicity and otherwise, in the large counties. What friends we have in Los Angeles are discouraged, and not only that, but they do not command the confidence of the general public. No newspaper can be counted on there, as we have learned to our cost. So you see we have our difficulties ahead of us.

The difficulties have grown worse. The California Republican opponents of Mr. JOHNSON are fighting him tooth and nail. Were his habitual wisdom and that of his counselors not known, he would seem to be much in the position of a man who is paying calls while his house is on fire.

SETTLED OUT OF COURT.

A public satiated with the long-drawn-out and scandalous details of the Stokes divorce case has reason to be thankful that the Stokes separation suit was settled out of court. This is not to say that there was no form of court intervention. The Judge before whom the trial was to have come gave a great deal of time and labor to the consultations which finally brought about an agreement between the parties directly concerned. It is a fine precedent which in this way has been set by Mr. Justice WASSERVOGEL. No obligation, express or implied, lay upon him to seek an adjustment of the controversy. But he took with him into conferences with counsel so high a reputation as a Judge, and such persuasive powers, that he was able to do much both to save this county from the expense of the trial and to prevent further unpleasing revelations on top of those which had already wearied and disgusted the public. It is devoutly to be wished that other Judges may follow his example in cases of domestic relations where it is possible to compose disputes, or at least effect reasonable compromises, while avoiding the washing of a great deal of dirty linen in public.

THE AMENDED CLEAN BOOKS BILL.

The gentlemen who tried to put the so-called Clean Books bill through the Legislature last year, and almost succeeded, are going to try again this year. They intend to amend the bill by removing its worst feature. The bill so vigorously urged last year provided that any single word or phrase or sentence might be taken out of its context and, if regarded as objectionable in itself, should be enough to condemn the book containing it to suppression. Obviously, this would make the Bible and Shakespeare and most of the classics obscene within the meaning of the statute, and we were offered no relief except that the Vice Society, which makes the complaints against books suspected of impropriety, would let the Bible and Shakespeare alone. A law whose promoters frankly admitted that it would be enforced against some offenders and not against others was a little too rank. No wonder it failed.

Now it is proposed that indictments may be based, as in last year's bill, on a single word or phrase, but that the rest of the book may be offered in defense by the publisher, and may be accepted by the Judge. But does the essence of indecent publication lie in the nature of certain words in themselves, or in those words as part of a coherent narrative? This is not a question for laymen, but in view of the known intentions of the Clean Books League it would seem that it is only trying to get what it has always wanted, though in a less unpalatable form.

Justice JOHN FORD, President of the League, makes about the lamest possible argument for permitting indictment on a single phrase. It is simply that if indictment must be based on the immorality of a book as a whole, the Grand Jury will not take the trouble to read it all. They will indict "comparatively short books," says the Justice dolefully, but they will not read long and dull books whose publishers "take pains to call attention to the vicious pages." But Justice FORD himself last year took pains to call attention to a few sentences taken out of a very dull book five hundred pages long. Of course, he did it with a moral purpose. But let him consider that Grand Jurors are perhaps average citizens, as indeed the law supposes. If they will not read a long and dull book which he regards as naughty, neither will other average citizens. Not all of us have the endurance of Justice FORD.

A book too dull to be read even by Grand Jurors in the line of duty is not likely to do much harm. This whole agitation arose from the fact that Justice FORD in his private capacity disagreed with certain other Judges (and juries) in their official capacity regarding the decency of certain books which apparently he alone has the strength to read through. Because of this disagreement, the law must be amended so that none of us may read a book offensive to Justice FORD.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Profit at the Expense of Good-Will.

What the managers of our theatres should charge for admission, on either ordinary or special days, would seem to be a matter to be settled, on the one side, by what the managers can get and on the other by what the public is willing to pay for what it wants. There is little if anything of moral obligation in this matter of price, and certainly there is none of the compulsion to pay what is asked that exists in the case of food and rent.

At the moment the question for the manager to decide is whether it really will be profitable for him, for the sake of the immediate dollars he can get from the crowd of people attracted to the city by the Army-Navy football game, to exploit them, or whether it would be wiser to be more moderate in his demands in the expectation that thus he can acquire the capital of good-will that is as useful in the theatrical business as in any other. Should he take the first course, he will have his reward, for great numbers of these visitors are going to the theatre that evening, whatever it costs, but many who pay will do it with a feeling that they have been victims of the extortion which they like to regard as characteristic of New York in its dealings with strangers, and they will go home to tell their neighbors that this is a city inhabited mostly by robbers.

That will be a wild exaggeration, and they will not really believe it themselves, but the statement will have its effect, none the less, and it is an injurious effect from which the theatre managers will suffer with all the other metropolitan business men. If they have something of what is called "vision," they will see this.

Bondholders Who Are Careless.

Not wholly unrelated to the matter of paying big prices for theatre tickets is the fact that while investors in Government bonds are supposed to be careful folk, intelligently looking after their own interests, a considerable number of them show exactly the opposite qualities.

It is reported officially that Victory notes to the amount of $40,000,000 have not been presented for payment, though interest on them stopped months ago; also that $22,000,000 of matured War Savings certificates remain uncashed, though interest on them, too, has stopped; and, what is a still more striking proof of negligence or stupidity, $43,000,000 worth of the temporary bonds bearing only four coupons, that were given out until the permanent bonds could be printed, never have been offered for exchange.

According to these figures, the owners of over $100,000,000 worth of these gilt-edged securities for one reason or another are not collecting the interest on the money they lent the Government, and are not treating the principal of their loan as common sense dictates that it should be treated.

Some of the bonds, presumably, have been destroyed accidentally; others have been laid away in secret places and forgotten, while still others, perhaps, have been hoarded in safe deposit boxes, just as gold coins and bank bills are by queer people who think thus to provide against some terrible time of financial crashes.

From all this folly the Government is profiting in the sense that payments due out of tax money have been deferred and in some cases never will have to be made. It is a sort of profit, however, which the Government does not need nor want to make.

And what happens in the case of the Liberties and the War Savings certificates also must be happening to some, though probably to a less, extent in the case of other bonds, railway, industrial and municipal. Even bank deposits are forgotten in many instances and lie unclaimed for years and years, till finally they must be treated as abandoned and ownerless.

It Doesn't Seem Credible.

Till further information is at hand, it will be safest to maintain open minds, and rather deeply skeptical ones, in regard to the report from Paris that an engineer there, by doing some mysterious thing in a house, can bring to a sudden and full stop any motor-driven vehicle passing in the street.

Ways of doing this are not absolutely inconceivable, for long-distance control by radio waves, not only of automobiles, but of ships and airplanes, is a possibility already and repeatedly demonstrated. In all these cases, however, the object controlled has been equipped with apparatus designed to receive the etherial impulses and translate them into another form of energy. The cars and trucks passing the Paris house could not have been equipped thus, and the only faintly plausible theory to explain their stopping, if really as described, would be that there was some sort of interference by induced currents with their ignition systems.

Yesterday's story was merely a variant of others that have been coming from Germany for some time, and further back there were alarming yarns about an Italian engineer who could explode arsenals and the magazines of ships by mysterious shocks sent through the air to them from miles and miles away. A little real investigation disproved that claim, but it continues to bob up again in at least half the pictures of that next and greater war which enables so many people to get the joys of an anticipatory "I told you so!"

For Once They Are Right.

It is not often that one gets a chance to agree with the Russian Government, but there is not a little justification for the protests of the Soviet officials against the recent acquittal in Switzerland of the assassin CONRADI. It was indeed a strange verdict, and the Soviet Foreign Minister is right in saying that the Swiss jurors tried, not the assassin, but the Government represented by him, and the conviction of the latter brought about the acquittal of the former.

CONRADI'S explanation of his act was that the Russian revolutionists had killed his uncle and other members of his family. As an explanation that served well enough, but as an excuse for shooting the Soviet envoy it was ridiculous or outrageous, according to the point of view.

And, of course, the Swiss law, no more than that of any other country, recognises the right of private vengeance, even on people who deserve killing.

FIGHTING GERMAN FAMINE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Major Gen. Henry T. Allen, running true to his fearless form, has accepted the onerous leadership in the cause of common humanity to stay stalking famine as it threatens to destroy the lives of helpless men, women and children in Germany today. These are as much the victims of a cruel war as were the millions who fell before fighting guns. The aftermath of peace is a hideous mockery to these innocent sufferers. The war was not brought on by them. The terms of peace were not of their making. The intricate questions of international debts and of national capacity to pay do not enter into their lives. The legality or the illegality of the occupation of their territory is not discussed.

Empty stomachs do not indulge in words. They become articulate through action. All these people know at present is that they are hungry; that their children are dying for want of milk; that the sick and feeble can no longer hope for sustenance; that even the daily rations of black bread and soup are rapidly becoming unattainable; that the conditions of the Near East are now the conditions of the Nearer West—and yet in the face of all this appalling calamity our great country, in which the barns are more than filled with plenty, is standing by literally callous to the appeal and skeptical as to its veracity. General Allen knows whereof he speaks, and his statements would be more than upheld could we but read the contents of the mail bags arriving each week from Germany.

This is no question of international policy, of further parley or of Government politics. It is the emergency of suffering and of actual starvation. America has always been just and eternally generous. No nation has ever turned to us for food that has not been fed. No nation has ever asked us for raiment that has not been clothed. Therefore, are we at this crisis to be once again loyal to our great heart or are we to stuff partisanship cotton into our listening ears? Are we to stand by supinely and allow the people of a country with which we have declared friendly relations to be left during the trying months of Winter destitute of the bare necessities of life? Shall any of us hate so that we refuse to help? Shall we steel our souls so that they become metallic and thus ignore the cruelty of want? Shall we do nothing while the voices of little children are piteously crying for bread and while the old and feeble are appealing for those crumbs which are falling from our own tables of prosperity.

As a 100 per cent. American, without one drop of German blood in my veins, I wish to urge the immediate support of the efforts of Major Gen. Allen, and I beg those who read this letter to remember the white crosses in the cemeteries of France and to realize that our soldiers who laid down their lives would be the first to give their approval in the nobility of their souls to this human movement freed from all political bias or partisanship.

In the name of mercy and of God's charity, let us help those who need it!

ELISABETH MARBURY.

The $10,000 a Year Budget.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is there no one to stand up for the husband with the $10,000 income? You say "If * * * the woman earning $2,000 a year really does spend more money for clothes than she who shares in her husband's income, then it is because, to the extent of her resources, the former buys what in her own judgment she ought to have, while the other, lacking the power of the purse to get what she wants, must prove her needs to the convincing of her mate—and doesn't always do it."

"Lacking the power of the purse"—ye gods! The writer is probably a plutocrat. Otherwise, he would know that people living on the moderate income of $10,000 draw up a budget—house, food, fuel, service, insurance, light, telephone, &c. If there were only this mean, tight-fisted $10,000 husband and his down-trodden wife the clothing problem would be very simple. In the model budgets made out for our guidance by experts we are allowed three children from three to eight years of age. Somehow those budget children never grow up! Every year they are still three, five and eight. But in our real families they do grow up, and oh, how expensively! And alas! some of us are so imprudent that we have, in this year of grace, as many as four grown-up children at once.

Now the budget must be adjusted to the needs of these children. The mean, stingy, $10,000 husband is apt to remark: "My dear, you really must have a new coat." To which the cringing, sycophantic wife replies: "Oh, no, this will do perfectly well. Those girls are coming in pretty fast and if the girls are to go to Summer camp I really must retrench." You note the "I." She draws the checks, pays the bills, estimates the needs and spends the money—"more wisely than I could," says her husband.

Since these stingy, $10,000 husbands are too modest or too busy to reply, I protest on their behalf. (Convincing budgets supplied if a "stamped, self-addressed envelope is received.")

Fancy there was a twinkle in the eye of your plutocrat, and that he said to himself: "I ought to get a rise out of that." Here it is.

Where Klan Parades Are Barred.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your paper of the 16th inst. your correspondent at Atlantic City writes regarding the prohibition of Klan parades, "This is the first action taken by any city government against the hooded order." This is an error. This city, Daytona, Fla., has an ordinance against the parading of any masked or hooded men. We have no use for Know-Nothingism or cowards who conceal their identity.

THE RETURN.

How shall I know
On that new day of living,
When I shall see your eyes again,
When I shall hear
Your voice so low and calmly giving
Me the long story of the empty year—
How shall I know—
Your words are cool and even—
That in the hours falling
So slowly from my days
Like blossoms from a tree, that Heaven
Was not all soft above your ways?

How shall I know
That you, too, yearned and fretted
For this high hour, this pinnacle
Of life—as I,
An arrow caught within a bow, and whetted
With waiting, wonder, and a sigh?

How shall I know
That you have seen the far light
In a tall window of that ancient house
That has no road,
Or gate, or knocker? But they, at sight,
Who love will know their own abode.

How shall I know?—
Oh, there are things unnumbered
For which I wait to find somehow—
Somehow—yet words
Will be but nothing, or as though they slumbered.
Your eyes will whisper to me like dark birds.

HIRAM JOHNSON'S RECORD.

Protests Against the Republican Machine Commended.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In his letter to THE NEW YORK TIMES, Mr. Samuel Colcord represents himself as a "loyal Republican" who is forced to "gasp" on being told that Hiram Johnson may be the Presidential nominee of the Republican Party. As Mr. Colcord's gasping is due to his misunderstanding of several historic episodes, would it not be a kindly and neighborly act to set him right, to the end that he may again catch his breath? Says Mr. Colcord: "When our popular hero, Roosevelt, returned after a year in the jungles of Africa in necessary ignorance of the political situation, was it not Johnson and Gifford Pinchot who, by a gross, though perhaps not intended, misrepresentation of Mr. Taft, lured our former Rough-Rider President to the one political mistake of his life—to the wrecking of his party in a national election and his own political undoing?"

The picture here presented of Hiram Johnson as a Svengali, aided and abetted by the mediumistic powers of Gifford Pinchot, hypnotizing Theodore Roosevelt into committing political hara-kiri does credit to Mr. Colford's imagination. Does he not display an amazing grasp of Roosevelt's psychology, who, as we all know, preferred always to follow rather than to lead? It relieves the situation somewhat to learn that "the gross misrepresentation," by which the Messrs. Johnson and Pinchot hurried Roosevelt to his undoing, was "perhaps not intended." That is, according to Mr. Colcord, the Messrs. Svengali may not have intended to will the supine Roosevelt to do that which he did not intend to do. Perhaps all three of them were under some occult influence, the source of which has not been traced. But has it never occurred to Mr. Colcord that Roosevelt, Johnson and Pinchot, at that historic crisis, were honestly outraged by the tyrannical, reactionary and unjust methods of the Republican national machine? A protest against a steam roller may turn out disastrously, but it is eternally and fundamentally justified!

Mr. Colcord goes on to attribute the defeat of Hughes for President to Hiram Johnson: "Thus for a second time," asserts Mr. Colcord, "Hiram Johnson made Woodrow Wilson President." Johnson, having thus contracted what will seem to many Americans to be a pernicious habit, must be, if Mr. Colcord's logic is sound, planning now to reopen the door of the White House to Wilson. In other words, he who was Svengali to Roosevelt continues to be Santa Claus to Wilson. As the French say, "It is to laugh."

"It would give the writer much pleasure," says Mr. Colcord, "to show how this same 'Republican' headliner and his little coterie of irreconcilable isolationists defeated the will of the Republican Senate majority and of a great majority of the rank and file of the party from November, 1919, to March, 1920." So, here's the real milk in the Colcord cocoanut! What did the "great majority of the rank and file of the party" do when ordered from the White House to support Wilson against Johnson and his colleagues? Has Mr. Colcord forgotten the outcome of a "great and solemn" Congressional referendum? And what of the 7,000,000 plurality given to Harding at the last Presidential election? Mr. Colcord considers it evidence of the wild enthusiasm of the voters of this country for a World Court! He is a humorist up to the very end of his extremely readable letter.

WILSON'S POPULARITY.

A Sign That America Will Yet Take Her Place in World Affairs.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The other night at an uptown moving picture theatre various incidents were shown of the Armistice Day observance at the national capital. Each incident was greeted, as it should be greeted by loyal Americans.

Then there was flashed on the screen a caption including the name of the greatest martyr of the World War, and the applause that greeted the name, compared with the handclapping that had gone before, was like the crashing of thunder, long sustained, as against the rattle of a stick drawn across fence palings—like long-sustained thunder, growing louder, stronger as the picture was shown of Woodrow Wilson making his latest appeal to the soul and honor of the American people.

For one who loves his America and wants it to be the greatest force for the emancipation of mankind from the despotism of potentates and politicians and the chicaneries of diplomats, for those who long that this nation may fulfill that destiny, the road to which was indicated to it by that illustrious invalid, that demonstration is an augury. It is an augury that the day is coming when the plain people of America will rise in their wrath against those who martyred Woodrow Wilson on the altar of their narrow conceit and frustrated the hopes of the world for the sake of their petty jealousy and sordid ambitions. It is an augury that the day will dawn when the American people, who so completely understand Woodrow Wilson's vision and share it with him, will demand that our nation take its God-appointed place at the head of the table of the nations and secure the boon of eternal peace for humanity suffering now so terribly because of the frustration of this vision.

This was the message that came to me through this extraordinary demonstration elicited by a "moving" picture. It revealed the thought that lies closest to America's heart. It is good to know that it is a hope deferred, not a hope destroyed.

Well Entangled in Europe.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will the Bok Peace Commission select a plan that will be the means of bringing peace to the world? In the writer's opinion, any plan selected must have in its operation a just and fair payment of reparations from Germany and also lay the foundation for a spiritual rebirth of Europe. This can only be accomplished by America and Americans guiding and counseling Europe. To say we are not entangled in European affairs is denying that Europe owes us anything, and we might as well agree now to a cancellation of all debts due us by Europe as try and deceive ourselves on this score. Our fear of European entanglements is a bugaboo. We are interested and entangled in European affairs to the tune of 13,000,000,000 American dollars, and unless we take the present opportunity offered us to interest ourselves in its collection we will have further to entangle ourselves in European policies and politics. This sum is worth appointing a committee of American business men to try to collect. Fear never built a city nor made this country what it is today, but it is fear that is holding America back today and leaving Christian civilization to rot and revert to savagery.

$20,000,000 for a Liquor Fleet.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If while depriving the country of valuable revenue derivable from a tax on the manufacture and sale of light wines and beer, Congress, as is proposed, appropriates $20,000,000 to building a fleet of fast cruisers as aids to prohibition enforcement, such action in the eyes of the world would obviate the country-wide opposition to the law to the dignity of a revolution and increase the unfavorable attitude of other nations toward prohibition.

CHILDREN'S SOCIETY ANSWERS ATTACKS

Submits Brief Opposing Proposal to Turn Over Its Work to City or State.

REPLIES TO HECKSCHER

Declares Benefactor Was Informed Fully of Organization's Functions and Aims.

The New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children through its attorney, Cornelius J. Sullivan, yesterday submitted to the New York State Commission to Examine Laws Relating to Child Welfare a brief opposing any proposal for its functions to be taken over by State or municipality. The brief also contains an answer to statements made by August Heckscher at the time of the split between the Society and the Heckscher Foundation for Children.

The Society denies that it costs [illegible] a week to care for each child, as was charged by Mr. Heckscher. It suggests that Mr. Heckscher evidently arrived at his figures by "charging up all the law enforcement and corporate work as part of the cost of child maintenance." On the subject of cost of child care, the brief states that in 1921 the cost was $7.36, that in 1922 the cost went up to $8.26, where it stayed until the society moved into its new home at 106th Street and Fifth Avenue, and that from Jan. 1 to Aug. 31, 1923, at the termination of its agreement with Mr. Heckscher, the cost was $12.85.

"The issues raised before your honorable commission by August Heckscher at the hearing on Oct. 29, 1923," says the brief, "resolve themselves into two questions:

"1—Whether the work of societies for the prevention of cruelty to children should be taken over by the State or municipalities?

"2—Was Mr. Heckscher fully informed regarding the history, functions and work of the New York society prior to his offer of a benefaction to the society?"

History of Society Reviewed.

The brief contains a review of the history of the society and its record, which follows in part:

"The New York society, the parent of more than 500 similar organizations in the world, in the forty-eight years of its existence, has acted on 503,784 cases of cruelty, abuse, neglect, exposure, abandonment and improper conditions, including complaints of delinquency, affecting children under the age of 16 years. The society has, in this same period, sheltered, fed, clothed and provided medical attention to 275,472 children, pending a disposition of their cases by courts or other official agencies or an adjustment of the serious conditions which made it necessary to take legal steps for their protection."

The brief shows that 22,000 adult offenders against children have been brought to court by the society.

As regards shelter furnished to unfortunate children, the society's brief says that work goes on without expense to the city and without reference to "race, creed or color." It shows that there were 3,304 children in the care of the society last year, of whom only 36 per cent. were in custody on allegations of juvenile delinquency.

"In other words," says the brief, "the majority of children in the custody of the society are there because they have been victims, rather than alleged offenders.

The Personnel of the Society.

The society employs a force of thirty-eight officers and court attendants, at an average annual salary of $1,535; eighteen clerks and stenographers, at an average of $1,555, and twelve chauffeurs, porters and other helpers, at an average of $1,272. In the shelter department there are twenty-four matrons, nurses and attendants, at an average of $654 yearly. Seven staff officers are employed, at an average of $3,694 per annum. With this personnel of ninety-nine the doors of the society are never closed, day or night.

"The society has turned over to the Controller $962,599.78 collected from the parents of children committed to public institutions. In the first ten months of the current year it received from the city, from its appropriation, $129,166.66. In the same period it collected from parents, &c., and returned to the city a total of $61,728.03. The cost of operation to the society during this same period was $195,515.86.

"As to the suggestion that the society be taken over by the municipality or conducted as a bureau of the municipality, to do this would mean going backward half a century."

In regard to the question of Mr. Heckscher's knowledge of the society's activities, the brief says that Rudolph Degener, an officer of the society, and a relative of Mr. Heckscher, appealed to Mr. Heckscher for a motor bus to carry children to court, and that Mr. Heckscher wrote Mr. Degener to make an appointment to talk over "a scheme" on which Mr. Heckscher sought light. The brief refers to several oral discussions in which Mr. Heckscher subs

TRIBUTE TO MISS SPENCE.

Meeting to Honor the Educator's Memory Fills Town Hall.

The memory of Clara B. Spence, noted educator and founder of the Spence School, was honored yesterday afternoon at a meeting in Town Hall.

Many persons of prominence were in the audience, which filled the hall, and the speakers all paid loving tribute to the life and work of Miss Spence. Either side of the stage of Town Hall was banked with palms and white chrysanthemums. In front of the speakers' stand was a large bunch of lilies of the valley. Virginia C. Gildersleeve, Dean of Barnard College, presided.

President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University spoke on "The Place of the Private School in American Life," Charles M. Schwab told of Miss Spence in relation to civic affairs, and Dr. John H. Finley's subject was "The Personality of a Great Teacher."

Invocation was by the Rev. John Kelman of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Dean Gildersleeve, in her opening remarks, said that the meeting was arranged by the many friends of Miss Spence who wished to show their appreciation for her life work and of her gallant spirit which had proved such an inspiration to many. She quoted Miss Spence, who wrote: "Nothing shakes my faith that the Great Adventure, when it comes, will bring sweet surprises."

Miss Spence, Mr. Schwab said, was the greatest woman he ever knew, and he declared that finance and industry missed a great character because she turned instead to educational work. He read a letter written by a former graduate of the Spence School, who had not learned of Miss Spence's death, in which she paid high compliment to her former teacher.

Taking as analogy the ever-widening ripples created by a stone tossed into a lake, Dr. Butler said that just so the influence of the life and teaching of Miss Spence moved onward, its influence being felt throughout the lives of the many with whom Miss Spence came in contact during her life. Miss Spence, Dr. Butler said, was a part of our educational system; she served no private end, was rather was she a public servant.

Among those present were Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, Mrs. Elliott F. Shepard, Mrs. William Jay Schieffelin, Mrs. Dave Henry Morris, Mrs. John J. McCook, Mrs. Herman Biggs, the Rev. Ernest M. Stires and Mrs. Stires, the Rev. Dr. Malcolm James MacLeod and Mrs. MacLeod, Mrs. John Kelman, Mrs. Nicholas Murray Butler, Professor Caroline Spurgeon of London, the faculty of the school and twenty-two members of the Headmistresses' Association.

Before the Town Hall meeting a memorial serivce was held at St. Thomas's Church in Fifth Avenue, at 3 o'clock. The Rev. Dr. Stires, pastor, spoke in appreciation of the life of Miss Spence.

RENEW FIGHT TODAY ON SUBWAY IN PARK

Several Civic Organiations to Be Represented at Board Hearing.

SUPPORT FOR OPEN CUT

Two Associations Favor Plan, on Condition That Money Saved Is Spent in Beautifying.

The fight against the proposal to build the Washington Heights extension of the B. M. T. subway through Central Park by open-cut construction methods will be renewed this morning before the Board of Estimate, when the hearing begun a week ago will be resumed.

Representatives of several civic organizations who did not have opportunity to speak at the meeting a week ago will deliver their protests against the plan today. The proposition is based on the ground that the subway work would cause irreparable injury to the Park.

The Daughters of Holland Dames have joined in the protest against what they term "the desecration of Central Park." Mrs. Margaret O. H. Clay, Secretary of the organization, has written a letter to the Board of Estimate, in which she says:

"The length of the Park is about two and one-half miles and for a subway to be constructed by open cut through one mile or any portion of these Park lands will certainly destroy all trees and foliage for years to come and probably forever damage the appearance and usefulness of the Park, which was intended solely as a play ound and breathing space for the residents of the City of New York. Therefore the Daughters of Holland Dames desire to enter a strong protest against the construction by open cut in any part of our Central Park."

Conditional approval of the plan was voiced Wednesday, however, by the Central Park West and Columbus Avenue Associations, which stipulated that money saved by the open-cut method of construction should be applied to beautifying the Park. It was contended that much time and money would be saved, that the Park would be well protected, and that the surface could be made even more attractive after the completion of the subway than at present.

Jasper A. Campbell, in favoring the Central Park route said in part:

"Central Park needs a large sum of money to improve and beautify the entire Park. Evergreen shrubs, flowers, landscape gardening, preservation and proper policing are essential. I propose that the entire amount saved to the city by this method of construction be appropriated to beautify and care for the Park. I can see no reason why, if the temporary use of less than 1 per cent. of the surface of the Park along its western border can save this magnificent sum to the city, Central Park should not get the full benefit—a specified amount to be paid to it from year to year as construction is proceeding. This money, through the wise and careful judgment of the Park Commissioner, should beautify and improve the Park over the 99 per cent. of area available for improvement during the period of construction, when only 1 per cent. of the Park is being temporarily disturbed for the benefit of all the people of our great city.

"The people, you and I, need increased rapid transit on the west side at the earliest possible date. The city needs this new subway and needs it badly. The Park needs this money and needs it badly. When the subway is completed and the Park again filled in, with ample funds to restore it to its original beauty, the Park will be incomparably better than it would be if the subway was built up Central Park West and the Park did not receive this magnificent appropriation. We do not favor the building of this subway by an open cut along its western edge if the full benefit of this saving does not accrue to the Park."

Mr. Campbell said that members of the association, as well as representatives of the Broadway Association, the Harlem Board of Commerce, the Community Forum and other associations will be represented at today's hearing as in favor of the plan.

STOCK GOES TO MISS SMITH

Arbitrator Decides in Favor of Late J. H. Flagler's Secretary.

A report was filed in the Supreme Court yesterday by Charles E. Haydock, arbitrator in a proceeding between the Bankers' Trust Company, as executor of the estate of John H. Flagler, and Miss May C. Smith, who was Mr. Flagler's confidential secretary for many years, deciding in favor of Miss Smith.

At Mr. Flagler's death there were accounts in brokerage claims containing 15,000 shares of Ohio copper stock. Miss Smith contended that the stock belonged to her and the case was submitted to arbitration. Mr. Haydock decided yesterday that the stock belonged to Miss Smith.

The bulk of the estate went to Dr. Herbermann's three sons and four daughters, his personal effects being divided among his family and friends, including associates on the encyclopedia. Dr. Herbermann died in 1916.

An Error in Forgery Statistics.

An article in THE NEW YORK TIMES of Nov. 5 dealing with arrests for forgery erroneously attributed the statement upon which the article was based to the protective department of the American Bankers' Association. The statement was, in fact, issued by the Forgery Prevention Bureau, which is not connected with that association. The bureau quoted figures compiled by the American Bankers' Association showing that since Aug. 31, 1922, there had been 366 arrests for forgery and eighty-one arrests for hold-ups. Through an error these arrests were said to have occurred since Aug. 21, 1923.

Mrs. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte entertained at luncheon at the Ambassador yesterday. Among her guests were the Countess Thaon di Revel, Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, Mrs. Cecil Barrett, Mrs. Moses Taylor Campbell, Mrs. Bernard M. Baruch, Mrs. Dudley Olcott 2d, Mrs. William Hayward and Mrs. Lewis Clarke. Mrs. Bonaparte will give another luncheon at the Ambassador today.

Dance for Hotel Men.

Fred Sterry, President of the Plaza, and Edward C. Foss, managing director of the hotel, gave a supper and dance in the large ballroom there last night for 200 visiting members of the Alliance Internationale de l'Hotellerie. About a thousand guests were present for the dancing and the buffet supper, which was served in the small ballroom.

WILSON RESPONDS TO SOUTHERN GREETING

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Former President Wilson made a brief address from the bay window of his residence late today to several hundred members of the United Daughters of the Confederacy who went to his home during their annual convention here.

Mr. Wilson confined his remarks to an exchange of greetings and made no reference to public questions.

The former President expressed appreciation for marks of esteem which have been voiced for him by the convention, which yesterday cheered loudly at mention of his name, and today made him and Chief Justice Taft honorary members of the organization.

Mr. Wilson was assisted to the window by Mrs. Wilson. Removing his hat with his right hand and responding to the cheers of those gathered in the street below, he said:

"Allow me to express my warm gratitude for the kindly interest shown by you. I appreciate it very deeply."

"We're glad to see you," broke in a woman's voice.

"The Daughters always stand with you always," said another, adding that the convention had paid him a personal honor in today's session.

"I am very proud of the honor," Mr. Wilson responded, bowing and smiling.

The former President, himself a son of the South, remained by the open window several minutes talking with Mrs. Wilson and occasionally responding with smiles or a wave of a hand, to the group below.

After Mr. Wilson had retired from view, Mrs. Ella Moss Hussey, Chairman of the Nashville Chapter of the organization, called upon Mrs. Wilson and presented a large bouquet for Mr. Wilson, which he carried a few minutes later on his afternoon automobile drive. Mr. Wilson also wore the colors of the Daughters in his buttonhole.

Mrs. Frank Harrold of Americus, Ga., was chosen President General of the society at a spirited election earlier in the day, defeating Mrs. Amos Norris of Florida, 1,573 to 679. Mrs. Harrold succeeds Mrs. Livingston Rowe Schuyler of New York and will serve for two years.

WILL OF PRINCESS FILED.

Sarah Spottiswood-Mackin Leaves Property in Rome to Church.

The will of Mrs. Sarah S. Mackin, who received the title of Countess from Pope Leo and was made a Princess by Pope Benedict because of her work for Catholic charities, was filed yesterday. It names Cardinal Vannutelli, Dean of the Sacred College in Rome, as heir to her property in Rome with the exception of money, laces, securities and jewelry.

Princess Spottiswood-Mackin, as she was known, died in Westchester County Aug. 21 last. She directed that she be buried in the habit of the Benedictine Order in St. Louis, where her father, James H. Britton, was at one time Mayor. She gave $1,000 for a monument on which she wanted engraved, "She did what she could for humanity —Sallie Britton, Princess Spottiswood-Mackin." She gave $1,000 to St. Patrick's Cathedral and left her jewelry to her sisters, Elizabeth B. Katte of 784 Park Avenue and Fannie B. Nisbet of Yonkers.

The will leaves $500 to the Catholic Church at Troy, Mo., and a like sum to Dr. George S. Mooney of Yonkers. The residue of the estate is put in trust, the income to be applied to the support and maintenance during his life of her nephew, Robert L. Nisbet, and on his death to continue for the benefit of his mother, Fannie B. Nisbet. On her death the principal is to be equally divided between a niece, Louise Nisbet Hoes of 230 North Broadway, Yonkers, and James Britton Nisbet, a nephew, of 132 Elmwood Avenue, Evansville, Ill.

The value of the estate was not disclosed.

GLASS TRADE CURB BEFORE HIGH COURT

Government Attacks Agreement of Employers and Men in Limiting Hours.

ONLY HAND WORK INVOLVED

Defense Contends This Covers Only 30 Per Cent. of the Output and Aids Worker.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—An unique case was reached for argument in the Supreme Court today. It was an appeal by the National Association of Window Glass Manufacturers, the National Window Glass Workers and others to have set aside the decision of the Federal District Court for Northern Ohio holding them guilty of having, in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, entered into an agreement relating to wages and working agreements which had the effect of restraining interstate commerce.

For the first time in the history of the Sherman laws, John W. Davis, counsel for the National Association of Window Glass Manufacturers, stated, the courts were asked to hold an agreement between employers and employes on wages and working conditions a violation of law.

Explaining the peculiar conditions prevailing in the hand-blown window glass industry, which the Government had attacked in the suit, and asserting that modern developments in the manufacture of window glass were working to exterminate the hand-blown industry, Mr. Davis told the court that the agreement between the manufacturers and employes, to which the Government had objected and which provided for the operation of the factories for only a portion of each year, had not been entered into until after the industry had been compelled by the Government during the World War to work on short shifts to save fuel.

The arrangement had proved so beneficial to both employes and employers by insuring the former increased employment and the latter economies in the cost of production that after the war it was mutually agreed to maintain the arrangement. It was physically impossible because of the shortage of skilled hand-blown glass workers, Mr. Davis said, to keep all the factories going all the time.

There could be no restraint of trade or fixing of prices in the hand-blown glass industry, he continued, when 77 per cent. of the entire output of window glass was controlled by the American Window Glass Company, with its machine-made glass. The hand-blown industry had been able to live, he added, merely because of the forbearance of the machine glass manufacturers, who were willing, he suggested, not to undersell the hand-blown glass and drive it out of existence, because by accepting the hand-blown prices they were able to increase their profits.

Analyzing the opinion of the District Court, Mr. Davis asserted that there was no evidence to support some of the more important findings of the Court, and asked "since when are men to be condemned under a penal statute under mere suspicion and about which there is not a single word of evidence in this record?"

He declared that as a result of the suit there was not at this time a single fire lighted in any hand-blown glass plant in the United States.

Solicitor General Beck insisted that the agreement complained of had been entered into for the purpose of enhancing prices and that it imposed upon the public the additional cost of maintaining an industry which worked only a portion of each year.

The wage agreement complained of, he asserted, was entered into by the manufacturers and employes to limit the output.

Chief Justice Taft suggested that it seemed difficult for the hand-blown glass manufacturers to restrain a market when they produced only 30 per cent. of the entire output.

Bedtime Stories For Business Men

TAKING your business to bed with you is bad business.

It's this sort of thing that makes the sanitarium business a good business.

And yet, there are thousands of business men who kick and toss the whole night and go to work each day unfit for work.

It's the old story of all work and no play making Jack a dull boy.

What these men really need is relaxation.

With a Radio Set they can get mental relaxation,—plenty of sound and healthy fun, sport and amusement, and much that is inspiring and instructive.

This season has started off with Lloyd George and Woodrow Wilson delivering Radio messages to the American public.

All the popular song hits and dance numbers now come on the air before they find their way to the theater and cabaret.

One hour on the Radio each night just before bedtime will send any man to bed in a cheerful mood, humming perhaps an old familiar tune or thrilled by the contact Radio has given him with big thinkers.

The Westinghouse Radiola Grand represents the highest achievement in Radio receiving apparatus. Above all, it is extremely simple to operate. The entire set—batteries, tubes and loud speaker—is enclosed in a beautiful case of mahogany, and it needs no outside wires of any kind.

Yes,—the big business man needs his bedtime stories just as much as do the little folks.

HAYNES-GRIFFIN offer a safe and sane plan by which you can secure a Radio on seven days' free trial and a year's guaranteed service.

The HAYNES-GRIFFIN Plan gives you the privilege of returning the set and getting your money back if it proves in any way unsatisfactory.

Could there be a fairer and squarer business proposition?

Why not start in with a good night's sleep tonight?

"Le bon Dieu bless all widows! I love them all!"

IN PURSUIT, the Gray Rat of Rivière du Fer—a man most abominably notorious for the perfection of his vengeance. . . .

Between these two, desperate with hunger in the icy waste, Achille Patenaude, unwittingly in possession of the prizes sought by both men—the fortune of the Widow Grondin—and the girl of Red Rodrigue.

Out of the frenzied pursuit and the clash of conflicting wills grows the fervent prayer of Achille, "May the good God bless all widows! I love them all!" And he does, this rollicking French Canadian, who pits laughter against scowls and wit against brawn through the pages of "Luck of the Snows," by William Merriam Rouse—as spirited a tale of adventure as ever came out of the Northland—complete in

McClure's for December

This is only one of seven short stories which will hold you tense and breathless until the final word. For a tired mind or a listless spirit, any one of these stories is worth ten doctor's prescriptions.

Fiction that is different, holding a mirror up to life as it is lived hardest and most heroically. This is one element which stamps McClure's pre-eminently as the magazine made for men.

Another element lies in the articles of unparalleled news interest that inspire and inform. Take these two—in McClure's for December:

"The Lincoln I Knew"
By his Valet and Coachman

Here is a man who knew Lincoln as no other man knew him—who drove the circus wagon on which Lincoln and Douglass electioneered in Iowa—who was personal servant to Lee, and later shaved Lincoln with Lee's razor—who drove the President in a thrilling race from Confederates across northern Virginia—who took a drink with John Wilkes Booth, murderer of Lincoln, on the day of the assassination.

When you lay this article down you will know more about Lincoln, the Man, than by reading a two-volume biography.

F. W. Woolworth's Autobiography

Who, as well as Woolworth himself, could tell this romantic story of rise from dimes to millions? Yet for years this autobiography had lain concealed—until McClure's unearthed it.

You who sometimes feel beaten in the battle for success—read this story of a sick man who was fired from a $10 job because he couldn't sell—and who later erected the most magnificent office building in the world, costing $13,000,000—profit from 5 and 10 cent sales!

Other Great Features

Dr. Frank Crane and W. H. Crichton Clarke debate the question of preparedness and find they stand on the same ground, in "The Maintenance of Peace," by Major General James G. Harbord; "A Daughter of Delilah," another of those stirring tales of the Government's fight against dope, by a former Federal operative; "The Pool of the Sacred Crocodile" details one of Jim Maitland's grim adventures in Egypt—told as only Major H. C. McNeile can tell a story; "The Baby and the Spy" unravels a mystery which for months baffled Allied Secret Service Agents on the Western Front—with a cost of thousands of lives. A fact-story that will grip you from the first paragraph.

These are only suggestions of the contents of McClure's for December—an issue that will make McClure's the most talked-of magazine in America.

Every Day Is "Value-Day"

A "bargain-sale" presumes that the seller has made some mistake in his merchandising and that the buyer gets the benefit. It is curious that the exploiters of bargain-sales can make so many mistakes and still stay in business.

D'Andrea Brothers do not believe in "bargain-days" or "bargain-sales." They credit their customers with more sense. Men who are really particular about their clothes are more interested in honest values than in so-called bargains. And with D'Andrea Brothers every day is "value-day."

UPHOLDS STATE LEVY FOR FRANCHISE TAX

Appellate Division Rules Property Should Be Assessed on Present Value.

STATE MAY NET $10,000,000

SUPREME COURT QUOTED

Worth of Holdings for Taxation Held Same as for Income and Sale.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 22.—By a unanimous decision the Appellate Division, Third Department, today ruled that taxes should be assessed against property "as it is and not as it might have been." This dictum, if applied in a number of special franchise tax cases, will net more than $15,000,000 a year for the State, it was said tonight. The opinion upholds the State Tax Commission's plan of assessing franchises and is of great importance to officers who assess real estate owned by and devoted to public utilities.

The decision was rendered in an appeal made by Attorney General Sherman in a proceeding involving a franchise of the New York Central Railroad Company at Amsterdam.

The New York Central reviewed by writs of certiorari assessments made against it in Amsterdam for the years 1917 to 1921, inclusive. At hearings before a referee last Summer, the road contended that the assessments were excessive and that there had been overvaluation.

The State Tax Commission had based its assessment on the cost of reproduction theory, and used in computing the cost of reproducing the company's property unit costs prevailing for the year in which the assessments were made. The company maintained these were war-time costs, and argued that costs which prevailed in and prior to 1915 should have been used. The road's attorneys also argued that if one particular item, a retaining wall on canal lands, was to be replaced in any of the years in which the assessments under review were made, a cheaper wall of different construction would be erected, and that it should be assessed for such a wall.

The referee upheld the contentions of the railroad and reduced the assessments by the application of so-called pre-war costs and the cost of the retaining wall named in the argument.

In reversing he referee Presiding Justice Cochrane, who wrote the opinion for the Appellate Court, holds that "taxes should be assessed against property as it is and not as it might have been," and further than the State Tax Commission adopted the correct method when it fixed the value of the company's property as of the value at the time the assessments were made rather than in 1915. In support of its decision an Adams Express Company case was cited in which the United States Supreme Court held that "it is a cardinal rule which should never be forgotten that whatever property is worth for the purposes of income and sale it is also worth for purposes of taxation."

HOPE TO HALT AIRPLANE BY WIRELESS DEVICE

French Air Officials Expect to Develop It From Automobile-Stopping Invention.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 22.—Following up its article of yesterday, describing the demonstration of the device for halting motors of automobiles from a distance, the Liberté this afternoon publishes an interview with an official of the Air Ministry, in which it is revealed that the French Government is in touch with successful experiments which are being carried along similar lines. The problem of applying the invention to the halting of motors in airplanes is also capable of solution, according to this official. This statement is based on the declarations of a very eminent specialist.

Yesterday's demonstration, according to this official, is another confirmation of the information received of the progress of this work in Germany. So far, he says, the Germans have succeeded in halting automobile motors only, and that at a short distance, and none of the motor trouble of the eight airplanes of the Franco-Rumanian line, which were forced to descend at the same spot in Bavaria was due to wireless waves. He also says that the perfecting of the progress will be followed immediately by a counter-invention to protect airplanes against it. This opinion is also held by M. Flandrin, President of the Aero Club and a former Air Minister, who says that if the announcement is true the discovery will revolutionize aeronautics.

The director of aeronautics at the Military Academy of St. Cyr, without being acquainted with the invention, says that if it does all that is claimed for it, it is of great importance, and he urged that the secret be strictly guarded for the army air service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Reports that French and German electrical engineers have perfected a device by which motors on automobiles, and perhaps airplanes, can be stopped from a distance, have been investigated by army radio and engineering experts and found to be exaggerated.

The investigations were made at places where reports said the devices had been successfully demonstrated in France and Germany, but as yet nothing has been discovered by the army experts to indicate that the device has been found practicable.

The army's investigations will be continued, in the belief that some of the experiments, particularly those being conducted in Northern Bavaria, may ultimately succeed. American observers are convinced that if the desired result can once be attained it will lead to complications of the most difficult sort in the operation of aircraft, watercraft and motorized vehicles of all sort in future wars.

Plenty of Turkeys This Year; Big Crop and Storage Stock

Turkeys are plentiful this year, says the United States Department of Agriculture. The crop is heavy, particularly in Texas, and turkeys are being raised in many new sections in Northern States. In Texas efforts are being made to increase local consumption. Supplies in Maryland and Virginia are reported large.

Heavy storage stocks of turkeys carried over from last year will be an important factor this year, the department says. Storage stocks are around 5,000,000 pounds, compared with 2,000,000 pounds last year. The price situation is influencing some farmers to hold their stocks for the Christmas trade. The department points out, however, that if prices are low enough to meet the average pocketbook, a heavy demand may be expected.

FAKE HOLD-UP TALE COSTS HIM A BRIDE

QUESTIONED IN GIRL'S HOME

Finally Admits He Was Having Fun With Friends—No Wedding.

Dispatches from Buffalo yesterday announced that Ralph U. Condon, 23 years old, had lost his memory and disappeared in New York six weeks ago after thugs had assaulted him and taken $2,000. It was added that just as one blow had destroyed Condon's memory, another had restored it when a board struck him while he was doing odd jobs in Buffalo.

To give the story a happy ending, the dispatch said that the boy's father would take him back to his home at Merrimac, Mass., and that as soon as he had fully recovered he would come to New York and marry Miss Winifred Hekking of 147 Fiske Avenue, Westerleigh, Staten Island, the wedding having been meant to take place two weeks after Condon disappeared on Sept. 15.

But the young man's father changed his mind and brought his son straight to New York. Then straight to Staten Island, and soon in the parlor of the Hekking home Ralph was telling how he left his rooming house at 48 Sterling Place, Brooklyn, on Sept. 15, crossed on the Staten Island ferry, met an Italian in a wagon at the pier, begged a "lift" toward his fiancée's home, was taken aboard and then assaulted and robbed by the Italian, losing the $2,000 he had saved for his marriage.

The next man remembered by the man named Robert Ruffel was taking him to Detroit. Then he got to Buffalo and went to work for a builder. A board hit him and all the past, including his romance, but not the $2,000 came back.

Condon's father asked a question. Ralph answered glibly. Miss Hekking's father asked another, and the youth had a smooth reply ready. But after that the questions came thick and fast and soon the young man was twisting and stuttering and floundering and contradicting himself.

And soon—so Miss Hekking herself told last night while her father nodded confirmation—Condon admitted that he had just gone off to Detroit to visit friends, there had been no $2,000 and no hold-up, and he didn't know why he did it. Miss Hekking, smiling bravely through traces of tears, said there was only one thing to do after that, and she did it. Condon had courted her for two years, her trousseau was all ready, her friends in Brooklyn, where she and family formerly lived, knew all about it, but—the wedding was off.

Condon accepted her decision. His father will take him back to Merrimac where he is general manager for J. P. Johnson, manufacturer of automobile tops. Condon is graduate of the Webb Institute of Naval Architecture here and was employed by the Peabody Engineering Corporation of 110 East Forty-second Street.

ARKANSAS ON DISPLAY HERE

Delegation With Exhibit of State's Products Welcomed by Merchants.

Headed by former Governor C. H. Brough, 125 residents of Arkansas arrived in this city yesterday on a special train to extol the resources of their State and exhibit samples of its products. Many women and girls were in the party, which was met in the Pennsylvania station in Jersey City by a committee of the Merchants' Association and later tendered a reception in the assembly room of that organization.

Louis E. Pierson, President of the association, who is chairman of the directors of the Irving Bank-Columbia Trust Company, made the principal address to the visitors. Other speakers were Mr. Brough, Samuel S. Reyburn, General Manager for Lord & Taylor; J. H. Hand, Managing Director of the Arkansas Traveling Exposition; Ray Smith, Secretary of the Fort Smith Chamber of Commerce, and Clay S. Henderson, a director of the exposition.

Mr. Brough said that the train contained 700 examples of his State's products and explained that one purpose of the visit was to induce the investment of New York capital in Arkansas development.

27 HORSES DIE IN FLAMES.

Thirteen Others Are Saved From Stable in Harlem.

A fire which swept swiftly through the boarding stable of Joseph Radine at 40 West 101st Street early this morning destroyed twenty-seven horses that were shut off before firemen could get to them.

The blaze was discovered by Patrolman Rhodes of the West 135th Street Police Station, who from a black away saw flames shooting from the windows of the two-story building. By the time firemen got there the flames, feeding on hay and other inflammable material, had spread throughout the building. There were forty horses altogether in the stable and firemen, working fast, were able to get thirteen out.

A report that the fire might be of incendiary origin brought Fire Marshal Brophy and detectives from the West 135th Street Police to investigate. The result of their inquiry was not made known. Only the brick walls of the stable were left standing. Several small buildings alongside the stable were saved only because the firemen kept constant streams of water playing on them.

TRUESDELL ADMITS VISIT TO SILKWORTH

SILENT ON GIVING MONEY

Partner in Brokerage House Declines to Answer, Saying He Fears Incrimination.

Earl H. Truesdell, partner in the defunct brokerage firm of Raynor, Nicholas and Truesdell, admitted on the witness stand at a hearing yesterday before Harold P. Coffin, referee in bankruptcy, 217 Broadway, that the conversation he had with William S. Silkworth, then President of the Consolidated Stock Exchange, just before the failure of the firm, concerned an investigation of the firm by the Consolidated authorities.

The firm failed in April, 1922, with liabilities exceeding $1,800,000. It was learned yesterday that the creditors would receive about 5 per cent. of their investments, the latest figures, according to the attorneys for the trustee, revealing that more than $1,300,000 alone was "lost" in the house account.

At the outset of the hearing, Referee Coffin said that a subpoena had been served on Mrs. Raynor, wife of the senior partner, but that she had not answered it and legal action would be taken. He was informed that Mrs. Raynor had been seen last on Broadway riding in her automobile and asked whether an automobile was considered a necessity for the wife of a bankrupt broker. Blaine Nicholas, another partner in the firm, was also missing yesterday. Truesdell said that he was in his office in the Post Office Building. Raynor has been missing since the beginning of the bankruptcy hearings. He was seen last in Chicago.

Refuses to Answer Questions.

Attorney William Abramson pressed Truesdell again and again to say whether he or his partners took a sum of money to Former President Silkworth in an envelope about the time the investigation was started. Truesdell stubbornly refused to answer either that question or any question in that connection on the grounds that it might tend to incriminate him. Referee Coffin upheld him.

"Do you remember complaints against your firm which were pending in Silkworth's office?" continued Attorney Abramson.

"Yes."

"When did you find that out?"

"Two days before the firm was expelled from the Consolidated Exchange."

"Did you ever have any conversation with Raynor about a visit to Silkworth."

"No."

"Did Raynor see Silkworth."

"Several times."

Attorney Abramson then repeated his question about Truesdell taking money in an envelope to Silkworth's office and received the same refusal.

"Did Raynor ever speak to you about money being paid to one of the Consolidated Exchange officials?" the attorney asked.

"Yes."

"What were the circumstances?"

"I refuse to answer without the advice of my counsel."

Truesdell then said that the policies of the firm were never discussed and that Raynor was the "inside man," coming down to the office early and staying until very late.

"Evidently a model man," commented Referee Coffin.

Peter B. Owens, office manager, was questioned as to several sums in cash, ranging from $500 to $1,500, he had paid out to Raynor. He had previously testified that these sums were entered under "an extraordinary and charitable account." He said yesterday that he never knew what the account or cash was for.

$12,000 in All Drawn Out.

Owens testified that Raynor started this account himself and no one else knew anything about it. About $12,000 was drawn out, he said.

"When Raynor drew this cash did he on any occasion put the money in an envelope?" asked Attorney Abramson.

"No," replied the witness. "He always put it in his pocket."

Owens admitted that for several months he had possessed a list of the names and addresses of the employes of the firm.

This drew the ire of the examining counsel, who asked him if he was aware that the non-possession of this list had caused the proceedings to be dragged out.

Owens said that he had not purposely withheld this information, though he had heard Mr. Abramson ask in court for the list and had not volunteered the information. Owens added that he offered the list to Assemblyman Fred Nicholas, formerly custodian of the bankrupt firm's property, but it was allowed to remain in his possession.

The hearing was adjourned to Dec. 6.

ATLANTIC CITY ACTS TO CURB KLANSMEN

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 22.—The City Commissioners today passed on first reading four drastic ordinances directed at the Ku Klux Klan.

Without designating the organization, the measures, introduced by Mayor Edward L. Bader, who is a member of the Roman Catholic Church, prohibit the parading or assembling of persons disguising their identity and the burning of fiery crosses.

The ordinance, providing penalties of jail sentences of ninety days or fines of $200, or both, are declared "necessary for the protection of the general inhabitants of Atlantic City."

The action of the Commissioners followed the appearance here of The New Jersey Fiery Cross, a Klan newspaper, published in Columbus, Ohio. The publication carried a story declaring the Atlantic County Chapter, which is reported to have a membership of 4,000, would parade on the streets of Atlantic City, "even at the price of bloodshed, if necessary." The organ also condemned the city's administration.

Mayor Bader, in a public statement, denied the Klan privilege to stage a demonstration. He also was a leading figure at a big mass meeting Sunday night in the St. Nicholas Parish Hall, when a vigilance committee was formed, with signatures from 2,683 persons. At this gathering Mayor Bader declared his life had been threatened.

The ordinances must be read three times for final adoption, but all five City Commissioners were in attendance today and there was no doubt of their accord.

Curtis Named on Bar Committee.

George M. Curtis Jr., 51 Chambers Street, yesterday was appointed a member of the Committee of Character and Fitness of Applicants for admission to the bar in the Second Judicial District, comprising Brooklyn, Queens, Richmond, Suffolk, Nassau and Westchester Counties. He succeeds Stephen C. Baldwin, who died last Summer.

Government Loses by Change in Fashions; Must Store Sealskins, Awaiting Demand

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The Government is losing substantial sums of money because American women have changed their fashions in furs and are showing less interest in sealskins, Secretary Hoover said today. Moreover, the Government has in stock some 10,000 fur pelts which may have to be held for a considerable period before disposing of them. The British, Japanese and Russian Governments also, the Secretary declared, were facing losses as a result of the change in styles.

The Government, Mr. Hoover explained, has practically a monopoly on seal fur production, by reason of its ownership of the Alaskan Islands where the seals have their rookeries. In recent years as many as 25,000 or 30,000 sealskins have been taken. This year's take, which was cut down to 12,000 when the depression appeared, was put on the market some time ago, with skins offered for sale at $30 apiece. About 2,000 skins were sold, and then the demand died.

The pelts will keep, and Mr. Hoover explained that the Government had put them in storage. Japan, Great Britain and Russia lose, because, under the treaties controlling the sealing operation, shooting the animals in the open Pacific has been stopped, and the Governments participating have joined in sharing with the United States profits of the killings on the islands. Since the Soviet régime was established in Russia, however, the American Government has been deferring payments to that Government.

It also looks like a hard Winter for the foxes on the Alaskan Islands, in the rearing of which the Government has a profitable side line. Hitherto they have been fed on the meat from the dead seals, have waxed fat and furry from it, and have developed coats which are even more valuable than the sealskin. There isn't anything to be done about it, Mr. Hoover said, except to put the foxes on half rations, stop killing the seals and wait until the sealskins come back into fashion. Orders have been issued to cut the animal seal kill in half again next year.

JURY WILL TAKE UP COTTON FIRM CRASH

SAYS HE LOST OVER $8,000

He Was Informed "Somebody Had Stolen Books" When He Tried to Collect His Profits.

A Grand Jury investigation of the cotton brokerage firm of Scott, Norris & Co., 7 Water Street, which was placed in the hands of a Federal receiver last Friday, will probably begin today, it was learned yesterday, as the result of a complaint lodged with District Attorney Banton by D. D. McElveen, a cotton planter of Franklinton, La. McElveen appeared in the prosecutor's office yesterday with his lawyer, Michael Barnado of Franklinton, and alleged that he had lost more than $8,000 through the failure.

He said that more than $5,700 of the money was in profits he had been informed by the firm he had made in cotton investments since last March, and added that when he attempted to get his money about a week ago he was informed in a telegram that "somebody had stolen the books of the firm."

McElveen made an affidavit to Assistant District Attorney Richard C. Gibbs. It was said Mr. Gibbs advised him to go to United States District Attorney William Hayward with the information which, it was alleged, indicated that Scott, Norris & Co. had illegally used the mails in soliciting customers.

Three Inquiries in All.

Mr. Barnado, his lawyer said, would call on Mr. Hayward today and request that the Federal Grand Jury be asked to begin an investigation. Should the Federal prosecutor consent, three official investigations will have been instituted against the brokerage firm, the first having been started by Attorney General Carl Sherman last Saturday, when he obtained an injunction restraining the firm from continuing in business.

It was learned that when Assistant District Attorney Gibbs began his investigation yesterday Mr. Banton was informed that there was a report in circulation in the financial district that a man who was not known to be an official of the firm had decamped shortly before the failure with about $200,000 of its assets. Mr. Gibbs, it was understood, was instructed to make an investigation.

McElwseen said that he began trading with Scott, Norris & Co. in September, 1922, after he had received letters from the firm stating that it was capitalized at $250,000, and could give excellent references regarding its stability and was in a position to make immediate deliveries on all orders. He added that the communications also declared that the firm required from its patrons only $4 deposit on every bales of cotton purchased in overnight trading and only $2 on day transactions.

Money Never Arrived.

He resumed trading through the firm He resumed trading through the firm in March when the cotton market began to rise. Eventually, when he had invested $2,300, on which he had a profit of more than $5,700, he said, he closed his account with the firm and demanded that a remittance be sent to him immediately. He alleged that he received a telegram from the firm in the latter part of September stating that the remittance had been forwarded and that the firm strongly advised against his making further purchases.

When he hadn't received the money on Nov. 9 last, he continued, he and his lawyer boarded a train for this city to make a personal demand. They bought a newspaper at Norfolk last Saturday, he added, which revealed that the firm had been placed in the bankruptcy court.

Following his departure from Mr. Banton's office Mr. Gibbs admitted that he sent a communication to Percival Wilde, 2 Rector Street, receiver for the brokerage firm, requesting that all the books of the firm be held intact for investigation by the Grand Jury.

It was learned that the National Cotton and Grain Co. will attempt today in the Supreme Court to obtain an order restraining Attorney General Sherman from issuing subpoenas in other brokerage cases now under investigation by him.

ROTHSTEIN 'TIRED' OF BEING A WITNESS

Says He Will Testify in Fuller Case Once More and Then Will Take Legal Action.

HE DOESN'T LIKE PUBLICITY

Declares Questions Are Mostly Irrelevant and Fears He Himself Will Go Bankrupt.

Arnold Rothstein told Referee Harold P. Coffin at a resumed hearing in the E. M. Fuller & Co. bankruptcy proceedings that he was "through with this bankruptcy business."

He said that he would come to court once more and if his presence was required after that he threatened to take legal action. Rothstein based his claim to be excused from the hearings on the ground that his business was being ruined by the unpleasant publicity to which he had been subjected and said that if the hearings continued, as seemed likely, for the next two years, he himself would be bankrupt.

"I have been here twenty times or more," said Rothstein. "On each occasion the questions I have been asked have been 1 per cent. relevant. The other 99 per cent. of the questions have been asked by attorneys who are seeking newspaper headlines."

Referee Coffin would make no promises as to the number of times the witness must appear. He said that dependeb on the attorneys for the trustees and pointed out that on each occasion Rothstein had turned up from half to three-quarters of an hour late. He told Rothstein that his evidence might shed light on the activities of Charles A. Stoneham, owner of the Giants, who has been involved in the Fuller case. This drew an angry retort from Rothstein.

Denies Baseball Connection.

"Mr. Coffin," he said, "I will give $100,000 to charity—and you can be the sole judge in the matter—if it can be proved I had anything to do with the baseball scandals of 1921."

Rothstein's threats to refuse to give evidence except on one further occasion left Referee Coffin unmoved. He told Rothstein that he doubted if he could take any legal action, whereupon Rothstein said that his attorney had advised him to "stand up for his rights."

The witness pleaded for a final day when this whole matter could be threshed out and his connection with the Fuller firm cleared up. Referee Coffin instructed the court stenographer to strike out from the records any reference to Rothstein's threats and complaints, but obtained an admission, which was put on record, that owing to his tardy appearance the attorneys for the trustees had not been able to conduct an examination.

Rothstein produced for the second time checks which he gave to E. M. Fuller & Co. the year preceding the failue. They totaled $172,358.58.

On Nov. 9, 1921, the payments abruptly ceased. Referee Coffin asked Rothstein why he suddenly stopped doing business with the brokers. Rothstein explained these transactions as the repayment of money he had borrowed on collateral and he also produced several checks showing the purchase of stocks through Fuller & Co.

"I don't understand the question," said Rothstein. "There was no particular reason for continuing to do business."

"Why did you suddenly stop giving Fuller & Co. checks after you had been furnishing them checks from April to November?" asker the referee.

Didn't Have a Pen, Perhaps.

"Perhaps I hadn't got a pen," came the retort. Referee Coffin questioned the witness about talk of partnership with the defunct concern. Rothstein said the matter was brought up on many occasions.

"That does not incriminate me," said Rothstein. "Talk is nothing. The partners promised me all kinds of things, because they thought I had money. They'd promise anything to anybody."

"You had plenty of money then?"

"Well, I had enough."

The examination of Charles A. Stoneham by Referee Coffin was adjourned to Dec. 20, due to the absence of one of his counsel, Judge Edward E. McCall, who is out of town. Leo J. Bondy, Stoneham's attorney of record, wanted the hearing to go on, protesting that he had come all the way from Florida to be present.

While the bankruptcy hearing was proceeding, William F. McGee and Edward M. Fuller, who some time ago were adjudged guilty of contempt of court and ordered committed to Ludlow Street Jail, but later transferred to Governors Island by order of Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard, appeared at the United States Court House with their attorney, Carl Whitney, and were further questioned by Federal Attorney Colonel William Hayward.

Shortly before 4 P. M. Fuller and McGee were returned under guard of a Deputy Marshal to their quarters in the military reservation in the upper bay.

Should Judge Goddard in the course of the next few days decide that the bankrupts have been sufficiently punished for their contempt and order their release, they will be rearrested, it was learned yesterday, by United States Marshal William C. Hecht on a recent indictment charging them with participation in fraudulent use of the mails, with Charles A. Stoneham and others.

Federal Judge William Bondy is expected within the next few days to render his decision in the William J. Fallon and Eugene F. McGee contempt proceedings. Rothstein's examination was adjourned until Nov. 26.

$75,000 GEM THEFT EXPOSED BY REWARD

Gems Were Stolen Oct. 29 From Mrs. Van Rensselaer's Pennsylvania Home.

"INSIDE JOB" SUSPECTED

$5,000 Offer Is Made by Pinkertons Here After Local Police Drop Case.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—The theft on Oct. 29 of jewelry valued at $75,000 at the home of Mrs. Alexander Van Rensselaer, Camp Hill Hall, Fort Washington, became generally known today for the first time when Police Chief Koons of Springfield Township discontinued his investigation, alleging permission to examine members of the Van Rensselaer household had been refused him.

The stolen jewels, numbering between fifty and sixty pieces, include a string of pearls, diamonds and other stones, mounted in platinum; brooches, earrings, combs, chains and watches.

While the theft was discovered by the members of the household three weeks ago every effort has been made to keep it a secret until now. With the employment of the Pinkertons today to aid in the hunt for the gems a reward of $5,000 and 10 per cent. of their value was offered, although they are fully insured. No demand for payment has been made on the insurance company.

Chief Roons, who was informed immediately of the loss, believes the crime was an "inside job" and that the person who took the jewels was thoroughly familiar with the house and the habits of the family. The jewels were kept in a bureau drawer in Mrs. Van Rensselaer's room and the discovery that they had been taken was made by a maid.

E. P. de Maio, superintendent of the Pinkerton agency here, denies that there is any desire by the Van Rensselaer family to "cover up" the theft or to shield the thief. Members of the family also maintained silence. Mrs. Van Rensselaer is ill and could not be seen. Her daughters, Mrs. A. J. Antelo Devereaux and Mrs. Gouverneur Cadwalder, said they knew nothing whatever of the theft.

"It is possible it may have been some sort of an inside job that was kept quiet in the hope of tripping up the 'suspect,' but that is merely a conjecture on my part," he said, "for officially the police knew nothing at all about it."

A full list of the jewelry stolen from the home of Mrs. Alexander Van Rensselaer, Camp Hill Hall, Pa., was sent out here yesterday by the Pinkerton office to every jeweler, pawnshop and second-hand dealer in the city. One pawnbroker, after reading the list, gave the opinion that the value of the stolen gems was at least $100,000.

The time of the robbery is fixed in the circular as between Oct. 26 and 30. It offers $5,000 for information that might lead to the arrest and conviction of the robbers and in addition 10 per cent. of the value of any or all of the jewelry recovered. The offer expires on the last day of next year.

The jewelry listed includes:

A diamond and sapphire ring, stamped J. E. C. & Co., or C. & Co., scratch mark 2,501. The ring contains one Burmah sapphire and ninety diamonds on the shank, mounted in platinum and gold.

A diamond lorgnette mounted in platinum, stamped G-6,532 and containing sixty-five diamonds.

A pearl necklace with diamond clasp stamped B-9,334, or F-4,013. It has an emerald and diamond clasp surrounded by forty-eight small diamonds and fifty-three pearls.

One diamond and platinum lorgnette chain, containing sixty-eight diamonds mounted in platinum.

One cluster diamond ring, the centre stone weighing about four carats. It is surrounded by seventeen small diamonds and has six diamonds in the shank with platinum and gold settings.

One three-stone pearl and diamond ring, scratch mark G-1,844. The centre is a button pearl weighing 2¾ grains. It has two large diamonds and eight small in the shank mounted in gold.

A platinum monocle mounted with rose diamonds.

A set of antique jewelry comprising pearl and gem necklace, spray brooch and a pair of diamond earrings, all mounted on gold backing and silver facing.

Marquise sapphire ring; heart-shaped sapphire ring; five breastpins; three pearl combs; a diamond comb; a gold comb of feather design; three bracelet watches and a pair of platinum and sapphire earrings.

The marking J. E. C. & Co. is said to stand for J. E. Caldwell & Co. In former days the firm marked its jewelry C. & Co.

OFFICIALS QUIT OFFICE TO BALK DIVORCED MAN

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 22.—Sooner than marry one of their village girls to a divorced man the Mayor and whole Council of Ploughné, near Brest, has resigned. Even the tears of the weeping bride-elect could not alter the decision of the village fathers, who do not approve of divorces.

When a demand was made that the village Mayor should put on his tricolor sash of office and marry the couple he refused. In haste the bridegroom sent a Deputy Sheriff to summon the Deputy Mayor to perform the ceremony. He also refused. Next he turned to the Senior Municipal Councilor, but he agreed with his superiors that divorce and the remarriage of divorced people should be discouraged.

Brittany is a stronghold of Roman Catholicism in France and the municipal authorities are acting in agreement with the priests.

MORO BANDS DISPERSED.

But Constabulary Will Keep the Field Till They Are Wiped Out.

MANILA, Nov. 22 (Associated Press).—Official reports received from Mindanao Province regarding recent fights in the Lake Lanao region between constabulary troops and Moro bands say that in the latest encounter three of the constabulary were killed and one injured.

The casualties among the Moros, the report said, had not been determined, but it was believed that seven had been killed and six wounded. The constabulary commander in Mindanao says the chiefs of Cotabato Province are aiding the constabulary in pursuing the outlaws.

The Moro bands apparently have been dispersed, but the commander of the constabulary said his men would remain in the field until the trouble-makers were wiped out.

A telegram from the Governor of Lanao to constabulary headquarters here says that two Christian Filipino hunters were killed by Moros recently. One Moro was killed.

Both Houses of the Insular Legislature have adopted a resolution creating a joint committee to look into the Moro situation in Mindanao and Sulu.

Women on Jury Grant $7,000 As Claim for Woman's Life

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—In the Federal District Court here today a jury composed mostly of women assessed the value of a Connecticut woman's life, 52 years of age, at $7,000.

The suit arose from the death of Mrs. Arma Shaw of Waterbury, who was killed in Waterbury on Nov. 21, 1920, by an automobile owned by Mrs. Elida W. Hiestand of Marietta, Pa., who had taken her son to a school at Watertown. Charles A. Ludlow of New York, assisted by L. Russell Carter of Waterbury, tried the case for Victor W. Shaw, the husband of Mrs. Shaw and administrator of the estate.

The defense was that there was no liability, inasmuch as Mrs. Hiestand had secured the services of a licensed chauffeur from a garage in Waterbury to drive the car.

SENATE RADICALS TO DRAFT PROGRAM

Will Decide on Farm, Railroad and Tax Policies Before Congress Meets.

IGNORE HIRAM JOHNSON

None Will Be Bound by Major Party Caucuses—May Demand Recognition of Russia.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The so-called Radical-Progressive group in the Senate is expected to hold a conference in the near future, probably before the assembling of Congress, at which a program will be discussed and a definite policy on such issues as farm legislation, transportation, and taxation formulated. Russian recognition may be included. Senator Norris of Nebraska is expected to issue the call for the conference.

Those who are expected to participate will include Senators La Follette, Norris, Brookhart, Frazier and Ladd from the Republican and Wheeler and Dill from the Democratic side of the chamber. It is considered certain that none of these will be bound by the caucuses of the major parties with which they are nominally allied. Messrs. Shipstead and Magnus Johnson, the Farmer-Labor Senators from Minnesota, will, of course, be among the numbers. It is doubtful if Hiram Johnson will even be invited to attend, as the California Senator's brand of "Progressiveness" is not endorsed by some of the leaders of the group.

Senator Wheeler of Montana said this afternoon that he favored holding the conference in advance of the meeting of Congress, and that in his opinion the Progressives should take a definite position on the big problems, namely, those of transportation, taxation and agriculture. Personally he favored the addition of Russian recognition to the program.

"This feeling of disgust is general," he said, "and everybody familiar with the political situation in the West knows this to be true. I am not prepared to discuss the third party proposition at this time. We must await development as to that. We of the Farmer-Labor party will not be hampered by no trade obligations. We are free to serve freely the cause of progressivism. And we have no animosities except against the reactionaries."

He laughed when asked if the Old Guard had made overtures looking to his acquisition as a cog in the Republican machine in the new Congress. The answer to that, he said, was that the Farmer-Labor party is out to put the Republican party out of business. The Republicans have given seats on their side of the chamber to Mr. Shipstead and Mr. Johnson, but this honor will not win them over to the majority organization.

Just now the Radical-Progressive organization is a little at sea because of the illness of their leader, Senator La Follette. Announcement was made today that a week or ten days may elapse before Senator La Follette will be able to resume his duties. His friends say his illness is not serious.

5 HOUSE SEATS CONTESTED.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—James R. Buckley formally notified the Clerk of the House today that he would defend his claim to a seat as a Democratic member from the Sixth Illinois District. On a recount he was declared elected by forty-two votes over former Representative Gorman, Republican, who has contested the election, charging irregularities.

Four other seats in the House are contested. Henry Frank, Democrat, has filed papers declaring that he and not Florello S. La Guardia, Republican, was elected from the Twentieth New York District. Former Representative Chandler, Republican, is contesting the election of Sol Bloom, Democrat, in the Nineteenth New York District, and former Representative Ansorge, Democrat, has filed a protest against the seating of Royal H. Weller, Republican, as a member from the Twenty-first New York District.

NORBECK BACKS JOHNSON.

South Dakota Senator Favors California for President.

WATERTOWN, S. D., Nov. 22.—Senator Peter Norbeck of South Dakota is in favor of the nomination of Senator Hiram Johnson of California for the Presidency, according to The Watertown Public Opinion, which announced the receipt of the Senator's statement by telephone today from Pierre.

"Sure, I am for Hiram; have been for a year," Senator Norbeck said in effect, according to the newspaper.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—Damages of $100,000 are sought from Dr. J. Clinton Boyer, a physician of this city, in a suit filed in the Court of Common Pleas today by a former patient who charged Dr. Boyer made him a narcotic drug addict.

Dr. Boyer is under indictment and bail of $1,000 charged with illegal possession of habit-forming drugs as a result of his arrest in September on complaint of the patient, John Rumbrech.

HOLDS SECTIONALISM A REPUBLICAN PERIL

ALLEGES DANGER OF DEFEAT

HAD JUST SEEN COOLIDGE

Latter Will Keep His Hands Off Contest as Not Being His Affair.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—After a conference with President Coolidge this afternoon Representative Graham of Illinois, Middle West Progressive candidate for the floor leadership of the House, issued a statement warning the Republican Party that if it was sectional in selecting important offices in Congress it would wreck itself. He intimated that, if the country was persuaded sectionalism still endured in this regard, a Democratic President would be elected next year.

President Coolidge, according to Mr. Graham, will maintain a hands-off policy in the contest between Graham and Representative Longworth, who, while from Ohio, is held by the Progressives to be tied fast to the conservative group. Mr. Graham said Mr. Coolidge felt that the matter concerned the House alone.

"It is of the highest importance that the Republican party be kept in power after the next election. With an excellent business administration of our national affairs, we are paying our debts, economizing on expenditures, our people are employed and we are having a typical Republican administration.

"A Democratic victory at the next Presidential election means to turn back the clock and to embark again on another money-spending excursion. If the Republican Party is to be successful, if its Presidential candidate is to be elected, it must be because the people of the country believe that the whole country is represented and being considered in the administration and conduct of national affairs by the party. We cannot be sectional in our councils.

"The contest being made in the organization of the House has nothing to do with individual candidates; it is simply an effort to make the House of Representatives what it ought to be and what the people demand it shall be, representative in its acts of the whole country, East and West, North and South. To concentrate power in any portion of the country does not meet this requirement.

"This is no radical or insurrectionary movement. It is a sane, progressive movement, but one simply in support of what we are convinced will be for the best interests of the Republican Party and country. It is just a matter of good, common horse sense."

Mr. Graham said that he went to the White House purely on his own initiative to "talk over the general political situation with Mr. Bascom Slemp, the President's Secretary. While there he learned that Mr. Coolidge was not engaged and so he saw him for a few minutes. Mr. Graham gave the President his views on the political situation, particularly in the West, it is said.

Despite the Progressive activity, the Longworth forces do not appear dismayed. They are confident that he will be chosen floor leader.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22 (Associated Press).—During his talk with the President Representative Graham expressed the view that continuation of Representative Gillett of Massachusetts as Speaker, with Mr. Longworth, an Ohioan, as Republican leader, would not prove popular with the country at large.

Mr. Graham declared that House Republicans supporting him were deeply concerned with the make-up of committees and would press for representation on all of the important ones, including the Republican Steering Committee.

THE PLAY

By JOHN CORBIN.

The Right Word.

"Failures" is the word. M. Lenormand, the Parisian "modern" whom the Theatre Guild has introduced to us, certainly knows what they are, and how to do them in a play. After the fourth of his fourteen scenes, it seemed that no frustration of high endeavor remained to be explored, no agony of heartbreak. But his little cignettes of life went on inexorably, revealing still further ingrowings of humbled pride, more and more horrible tortures of young love crushed and macerated.

In the thirteenth scene Jacob Ben Ami, who is the "He" in this chronicle of defeat, drank himself drunk on bad wine and murdered Winifred Lenihan, who is "She"—murdered her in a blaze of desperate passion and amid a torrent of agonized words as only Ben Ami could do it. But that was not the worst. In the fourteenth and final scene the other failures, with whom the play abounds, came in on the grisly scene and talked about it, and still talked about it, in the very best manner of failures.

Taken as what it sets out to be, the play is a notable achievement, technically expert in handling a new and highly effective technique and profoundly human in feeling. A three-volume novel could not tell us more about these people. This He and She are quite normal young folk, an actress, and a playwright of sound ability happily married. They lack only the hard sense and the self-control to stand up against a run of tough luck. When He is famished for the want of a few francs and shivering for the lack of an overcoat, She gives herself to a stage-door libertine—and thereafter continues that sort of thing. She tells him how and why she has done it and He accepts the sacrifice, mentally realizing that it is not without a certain nobility. But the wound to his love and pride ultimately drives him to contortion after contortion of self-torment, all unflinchingly but not unkindly portrayed. One may wonder why he did not go to work giving French lessons, as he once did, or digging ditches. The answer is quite sufficient. He was a failure.

In the earlier scenes the remorseless psychology is enlivened with character studies of artistic life that are shrewdly humorous and tinged with intelligent satire. Subsequent scenes from the life of a provincial theatrical company doing one-night stands in France—a series of cafés, hotel bedrooms and railway waiting rooms, each drearier than the other—are etched with biting acid. There is no touch of exaggeration in character, no forcing of the emotional note. Life is viewed as one normally sees it. The dominant mood is of a rather noble pity—the pity that has its source in humility and clear knowledge.

Miss Lenihan is admirably simple in her denotement of suffering and utterly poignant. Dudley Digges, who plays the most nearly self-controlled of the failures, characterizes with his usual distinction. The Musician is the most grotesquely vain of all these failures and is poignantly psychologised by Erskine Sanford.

The settings by Lee Simonson and the direction by Stark Young are in the high tradition of the Theatre Guild.

NEW MUSICAL COMEDY.

Mr. Watson Holmes	Winn Shaw
Oscar Riley	Eddie Nelson
I. Kahn	Joe Morris
Tom Mason	Sydney Grant
Dolly Dare	Frances Arms
Jack Vandeveer	Joseph R. Dorney
Sharlee Saunders	Juliette Day
Annabelle	Mitzi Manley
Jane Caldwell	Ottilie Corday
Mascnia	Mascnia
May and June	Field Sisters
Mrs. Vandeveer	Mrs. Mary Leroy

The new musical piece at the Sixty-third Street Theatre is entitled "Sharlee," and as entertainment it ranks about fair to middling. Some of it is unbelievably artless, but now and then, thanks principally to a few of the players, it has its moments. As a whole, however, it is not a conspicuously bright piece of work.

The most pleasant portions of "Sharlee" are those in which Juliette Day is engaged. Miss Day is demurely pretty, hardly robust of voice, but well worth one's attention whenever she is on the stage.

The eternally youthful Sydney Grant is also there, struggling with an impossible role, and there is occasional good work by Frances Arms and Eddie Nelson, although the latter works a little too hard to be uniformly successful. The piece tells a placid story about a cabaret singer who went to live in the country. Since this situation does not offer many humorous possibilities, various unrelated comedy scenes have been encrusted on the piece, much as in a revue. The system is not invariably successful.

The piece has been attractively produced.

P. M. A. Action Expected Today.

Definite decision by the Producing Managers' Association as to acceptance or rejection of the terms recently agreed upon by Lee Shubert and the Actors' Equity Association for a five-year extension of the present arrangement between managers and actors is expected today. At a meeting of the Managers' Steering Committee yesterday it was decided to pass the entire subject along to the general meeting of the association today for final disposition.

MUSIC

"Carmen" at the Opera.

By H. C. COLLES.

CARMEN, opera in French, in four acts. Book by Meilhac and Halevy, after the novel by Mérimée. Music by Georges Bizet. At the Metropolitan Opera House.

Carmen	Florence Easton
Micaela	Nina Morgana
Frasquita	Louise Hunter
Mercedes	Marion Telva
Don José	Giovanni Martinelli
Escamillo	José Mardones
Dancaire	Louis d'Angelo
Remendado	Angelo Bada
Zuniga	James Wolf
Morales	Arnold Gabor

Conductor, Louis Hasselmans.

Bizet's "Carmen" was given at the special matinee for the benefit of the Bloomingdale Day Nursery at the Metropolitan Opera House yesterday before a large audience. Mr. Louis Hasselmans conducted a performance which was admirable rather for its general musical effect than for any outstanding feature among the members of the cast.

Great Carmens are born not made, and Miss Florence Easton is not a born Carmen. She is delightful to hear because she brings artistic intelligence to all her work and she sings with a strong sense of the individual style and the lilting rhythm of Bizet's unforgetable melody. She has also evidently given considerable care to the dramatic presentation of the part, and she never forces it or attempts an intensity unnatural to her as inferior artists are so apt to do. Her chief merit, indeed, is that she knows her own capabilities well and keeps within their limits. Mr. Martinelli as Don José had not the same merit. He seemed too anxious to make his voice tell at every point, and it is so fine a voice that there is no need to insist on its power. Mr. José Mardones was disappointing in the popular Toreador's song. It was poor in vocal quality and wanting in energy. His real abilities were much better shown in later scenes, however. Miss Nina Morgana sang the gentle Micaela's song charmingly. But the ensemble numbers, of which the quintet in the second act and the card playing scene of the third act are typical, were the things which most seemed to carry the opera along and left the impression of general excellence in the performance. The contributions of Miss Louise Hunter and Miss Marion Telva were important in securing this result.

The new scenery and costumes are exceedingly effective and the courtyard of the inn (Act II.) particularly so. A small point of stage management might be improved in the mountain scene, however, where the flash of the gun was visible on the left of the stage and the bullet apparently passed through the solid rock before it reached the hat of Escamillo, who subsequently appeared from the right. Also when so much is done to secure verisimilitude in the stage pictures the movements of the crowds might be better manipulated. In "Carmen," as in certain other operas of the recent repertory, the chorus is too often massed in a solid phalanx of people, evidently determined to fulfill their contract, do their bit of singing and then troop off. They sang admirably, but a little more imagination in their grouping and movements would help the illusion, and opera cannot afford to ignore such details.

Gounod's "Romeo et Juliette" was repeated at the Metropolitan last evening and will be the first among twenty operas to reach a third hearing, now announced for next week's "popular Saturday night." In the present cast were Bori and Gigli, Delaunois, de Luca, Diaz, Didur and Rothier, and Hasselmans again conducted.

Philharmonic Society.

Glinka's overture to "Russlan and Ludmilla," Rachmaninoff's Symphony in E minor and a liberal selection from Wagner together make up the program of the Philharmonic Society's concert which Mr. Willem van Hoogstraten conducted at Carnegie Hall last night.

It was not the happiest possible choice, for although Rachmaninoff's Symphony is well worth playing from time to time as a change from the too narrow canon of accepted classics, it needs to be placed beside something which would provide a strong contrast. One might enjoy it more surrounded by Mozart and Stravinsky or Bach and Ravel, than in a sandwich between Glinka and Wagner. It was Glinka who initiated the Russian style of incisive rhythms and Wagner who perfected the German one of sonorous orchestration. Rachmaninoff inherits from both and uses his inheritance like the man in the parable who received ten talents. He does not wrap them in a napkin, but invests them at a good rate of interest, and the result is a symphony, profuse in effects, brilliant in color, lavish in sentiment, but not a work stamped with a strong individuality.

The slow introduction gives hope of more than the allegro fulfils; the second allegro which takes the place of scherzo is undoubtedly the most distinctive of the four movements, but of how many symphonies can this be said? It is possible to count quite a number of composers whose reputations would have been enhanced if their scherzos had been preserved and the rest of their symphonies lost. Rachmaninoff's slow movement muses pleasantly and a little vaguely; his finale is certainly brilliant, but like many other brilliant finales it does not let well enough alone. It is a typical instance of that determination to excel in a climax which has been the undoing of so much music of the post-Beethoven

The orchestra, under Mr. Van Hoogstraten's firm control, played Glinka's overture with military precision, and gave an exuberant performance of the symphony. Glinka's overture does not sound exactly an epoch-making work to modern ears and to many of the audience the use of a descending scale in whole tones may have passed unnoticed. But it is probably the first instance in music of the deliberate use of that device which has been so fully exploited for the enrichment of harmonic resources by later composers. In the opera to which this overture belongs the whole tone scale is used as the sinister motive of the magician. Thus do the abnormalities of one age become the commonplaces of the next.

The prelude to "Tristan" with Wagner's concert ending derived from the "Liebestod," the Siegfried Idyll and the overture and bacchanale from "Tannhäuser" were the Wagnerian group which formed the second part of this program. Of the last nothing shall be said. Even a critic may excuse himself from hearing the "Tannhäuser" music on two successive nights. The others had been beautifully prepared and were perfectly executed. But does Wagner deserve only execution? One would have given all the carefully graduated crescendos of the one and all the exquisitely modulated pianissimo tones of the other for just a breath of that spontaneous impulse which makes these the greatest love-song and the tenderest lullaby in the world.

Renee Chemet's Recital.

By RICHARD ALDRICH.

Miss Renée Chemet, a French violinist of repute, who has been heard in New York a few times, but not often enough to be well known to the public, gave a recital last evening in Aeolian Hall, in which she gave ample reasons for her repute. She played Handel's sonata in A, Lalo's concerto, Saint-Saëns's "Havanaise" arrangements of pieces by Chopin and Dvorak and Sinigaglia's "Rapsodia Piemontese."

She is most amply equipped with technical proficiency and a powerful, though not always a warm or engaging tone, but her style is marked by great spirit, dash and determination, and with a perfectly definite conception of what she is playing. That conception she realizes with unfailing confidence and competence, though it does not often soar into the regions of poetry or high imagination.

There was breadth and repose in her performance of Handel's sonata, and something approaching the style of the music. There was a nearer approach, and not unnaturally, to the style of Lalo's concerto. The work is not much played in these days, being neglected in favor of the "Symphonie Espagnol;" but that there is something in it well said is made to appear by so vigorous a performance as Miss Chemet's.

It is refreshing to hear playing so rarely deviating from the pitch, so direct and unaffected, so intelligent, even if some other and higher qualities have to go by the board in attaining them.

The Beethoven Cycle.

Perhaps it would have been as well if there had not been quite so much thundering in the index of the second concert of the New York Symphony Orchestra's Beethoven Cycle, given in Carnegie Hall yesterday afternoon. As at the first concert, the master was honored by a very strenuous fanfare by all the brass instruments of the orchestra, played before the first number. This seemed to warm up the brass players so much that they continued their strenuous efforts all through the second "Leonore" overture with which the program began. In a number of passages the orchestra was quite dominated by them, including passages where the other instruments had something to say that needed hearing, but that could not be heard.

It was an admirable idea of Mr. Damrosch's to play the second of the three "Leonore" overtures. It is not, doubtless, so great and so final as the third; but it has much that is interesting and beautiful of its own; a treatment of ideas that is in general the same but that sometimes has quite a different effect. And there must be a good many concert-goers who have heard No. 3 so many times as to know it almost by heart, and who—especially with the help of Mr. La Prade's clear analysis in the Bulletin—could trace the changes that the master made in his treatment and find the process interesting and suggestive.

Mme. Elisabeth Rethberg sang the great air "Abschelicher, wo eilst du hin?" from "Fidelio" in admirable style; with a prodigal abundance of voice fresh and beautiful in quality and poignant in expression. She and Jeannette Vreeland, James Price and Fred Patten then sang the quartet "Mir ist so wunderbar" from the first act of "Fidelio."

The symphony was the "Eroica," of which Mr. Damrosch gave a reading of notable clarity and tonal balance, and with modifications of tempo that must have been perfectly obvious as such to the meanest intelligence, leaving nothing to a subtler apprehension.

There was a "postlude" after an interval allowing those who wished to leave the hall to do so, according to the plan that Mr. Damrosch announced at the first concert. This was a song by Mme. Rathberg substituted for the ones on the program, and the Finale from the ballet "Prometheus." This was a happy thought, for the "Prometheus" ballet contains the theme upon which Beethoven wrote the variations forming the last movement of the "Eroica." It was a theme dear to the master's heart, evidently; for he used it a third time as a theme for a set of piano variations that have some resemblances to the symphonic treatment in the "Eroica," and also some marked differences from it.

New Tenor Gives Song Cycle.

George Schneider, a young tenor whose early career was inspired by example and precept of the late George Hamlin of Chicago, gave a recital of a single theme, Schubert's "Die Schoene Muellerin," in which he was assisted by Frank Bibb, last evening at the Town Hall. With slender material of a light, thin voice, Mr. Schneider made much of the varying moods of grouped songs, beautiful in melody and in mutual contrast, as he sang the cycle through with but one intermission. His German diction was clear and his equal valuation of words and music commendable.

CURLEY SAYS LAWS WON'T MAKE MORALITY

Baltimore Archbishop Suggests We May Go to Absurd Extremes Soon.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 22.—"You can never dragoon men by law into morality," Archbishop Curley of Baltimore told members of the Kiwanis Club at a luncheon at the Emerson Hotel today.

"We have too many laws," the Archbishop said. "There is a tendency in the United States to pile on a law to most every new condition that arises in public life. If a man happens to cut his throat with a razor, a law banning razors at once goes into effect.

"Knives and forks will probably be forbidden as lethal weapons within a few years.

"Without law there is no liberty, and a deep respect for law is essential, especially in a democracy like our own, but men who work constitutionally for the repeal of a law in which they do not believe are fulfilling their sacred civic duty just as certainly as the men who established the law.

"If we go on as we are we shall create a bureaucracy at Washington and a jobholder's régime in which one man in every three in the United States will be a political officeholder, and then we may as well move to Russia."

ESSENIN AGAIN IN JAIL, THIS TIME IN MOSCOW

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, Nov. 22.—Serge Essenin, peasant-poet husband of Isadora Duncan, has found his native land even less sympathetic to the artistic inspiration of Apollo and Bacchus than prohibition in America.

Essenin is in jail, with three other poets, and likely to stay there long enough to enable him to complete a new poem entitled "America as I Saw It," which he told THE NEW YORK TIMES a few days ago would be his masterpiece.

It happened thus: Shortly before midnight on Tuesday there was a telephone call in the Kremlin apartment of the Bolshevist poet laureate Demyat Tiyedni.

"Hullo, old top," said a cheerio voice. "This is Essenin, and I'm here in Police Station 47 with three other fellows. We want you to tell them to let us out."

Tiyedni knew the Russian Poets' League was celebrating the fifth anniversary of the revolution that evening. He also knew Essenin and his friends, so he wasn't unduly surprised, but asked further particulars.

"Well, it's like this," Essenin went on readily, "we were sitting in a beer saloon getting ready for the celebration, and the conversation turned on the Jews. Jews everywhere—even in literature, and so on. Then some chap at the next table butted in, and there was a bitter argument, and the result was we got arrested."

"So, not so good," said Tiyedni.

"Not good at all," came the unabashed reply, "when one blessed Jew man can put four Russians in jail.

Whereat Tiyendi rang off, and after a short talk with the Police Captain told the latter—perhaps more in prudence than friendship—"I won't back up these rascals; the law takes its course."

It appears that Essenin and his friends did not make anti-Semitic remarks, but criticised the position of Jews in the Soviet Government, mentioning well known names. They resisted arrest until a squad of police arrived. The police examination records say the three were only slightly intoxicated—which all who know Essenin may, however, doubt.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"What a Wife!" will occupy the National Theatre during the suspension of the "Cyrano de Bergerac" engagement. It will open there next Monday night.

Emily Stevens is withdrawing from the cast of "A Lesson in Love," which will go on tour next week. Miss Stevens will be seen soon in a play by Henry Kitchell Webster.

Eleonora Duse will repeat "La Porta Chiusa" ("The Closed Door") this afternoon at the Century Theatre.

The new Shubert theatre in Forty-fifth Street, as yet unnamed, will be opened in the near future with "Mary Jane McKane" as its first attraction. This is Arthur Hammerstein's newest musical production.

Ethel Barrymore's engagement at the Plymouth in "A Royal Fandango" will end within a few weeks, and the star will then go on tour in "The Laughing Lady," which she acted here last season.

Flint's Fine Furniture

NO OTHER furniture requires as much care in buying as a living-room set. It's easy to hide defects, it's easy, down in the lower layers, to skimp on quality. It's easy to shout about price and divert attention from quality. But the facts will come out. Your safest guide is to go to a dependable specialist. We'd rather have your respect than your money. An upholstered set you buy at Flint & Horner's will not only last, but will hold its original shape. The fine coverings can be seen, the inner making can be depended upon, for every piece is a test of Flint & Horner's reputation.

The upholstered group illustrated has reversible down-filled cushions and is covered in fine tapestry, a pleasing floral design in soft rose and blue on a black background interwoven with dull, lustrous gold. The pieces may be had separately. The davenport, 81" long, costs $200. The arm chair costs $100, and the wing chair, $90. The tapestry used costs $6 a yard. Any piece may be had in any other material at a difference in price of the cost of the material only.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Mostly Higher, With Irregular Changes—Slight Reaction in Foreign Exchange.

Perhaps the most striking fact about yesterday's stock market was the huge business done. Total transactions, reaching 1,541,000 shares, were the largest of any day since June 12, 1922. The market then was breaking heavily; it was the first business day after the bankers' conference at Paris had adjourned, declaring an international loan to Germany impossible under existing conditions and restrictions. In that respect, yesterday's market presented an interesting comparison, both in the general course of prices and in the European situation.

Neither the stock market nor the foreign exchange market, however, repeated Wednesday's vigorous recovery. Prices on the Stock Exchange closed higher in most instances; some stocks, chiefly of the industrial group, gained a point or more. But there was much less strength in the standard shares, and the railways, which had led in the preceding day's activity, hardly moved. This evidently meant that there were very large speculative realizing sales as well as large speculative purchases.

As for the foreign exchange market, that also had to withstand the pressure of speculative realizing. Sterling at one time had receded about 3¼ cents, but it recovered 2 cents of this loss before the close. The day's movement of the Continental exchanges was similar; all closed below Wednesday, but well above yesterday's lowest prices. Even cotton participated in the day's mood of speculative realizing; the spot price ended $1.50 per bale lower.

In several respects, yesterday's weekly Federal Reserve statement again threw interesting sidelight on the financial position. The first was in the matter of rediscounts, which are shown to have been reduced $45,000,000 further during the past week, making $137,600,000 reduction since the end of October. In the same three weeks of 1922 they increased $26,600,000. This contrast emphasizes the promise of an easy money market, though it naturally also reflects less extensive plans in finance and industry for the immediate future.

The second matter of interest was the trifling change in gold reserve, notwithstanding the week's large gold imports. The system's total gold reserve is now $3,700,000 below what it was at the year's high point on June 13, although some $140,000,000 gold has arrived from abroad in the subsequent five months and about $20,000,000 has been produced from our own home mines. This shows the magnitude of the infusion of gold in the form of gold certificates into outside circulation. It also has its part in accounting for such a phenomenon as last week's decrease of $40,000,000 in the reserve note circulation, which is now only $35,300,000 above the low point of the year, whereas a year ago the outstanding notes were $177,000,000 above the 1922 minimum.

In yesterday's foreign bank returns the Bank of France was again a point of interest. The Government was shown to have paid off 100,000,000 francs of its bank debt, making no less than 1,000,000,000 francs thus repaid in the seven past weeks. Simultaneously, the paper currency has been reduced by 1,371,000,000. This has been effected through the proceeds of the recent large funded loan, and there are doubtless those who will criticize the French Treasury for acting thus under its heavy burden of fresh public indebtedness. Yet when one compares such floating debt repayment, under all the circumstances, with the German Government's 70 quintillion marks indebtedness to the Reichsbank, which increases in geometrical progression, one must at least admit the sound instinct and magnificent courage of the French public financiers.

MONEY.

THURSDAY, NOV. 22, 1923.

Stock Exchange call money was easy, rate declining to a finish at 4½ per cent. from an opening and renewal of 4¾. There was only a nominal inquiry for accomodation. Time funds are in liberal enough supply at 5¼ per cent. for everything beyond 90 days, but the demand being slight number of trades in new money remained negligible; short date money loaned at 5 per cent. Commercial paper and acceptances prevailed without change in discount.

London Market.

Money in London unchanged at 2⅝ per cent.; short bills ⅛ up at 3⅝@3⅞ per cent.; three months' bills unchanged at 3⅝@3⅞ per cent.

Gold bullion is 1s 2d lower at 93s 11d per fine ounce. Taking the British Mint standard price of 85s per fine ounce as par, the market quotation of gold would represent a price of 110⅝ at London. On the same basis the highest London price for gold for the year to date was 114, on Nov. 19. The highest price since open trading in gold was resumed at London in September, 1919, was 149¾, on Feb. 6, 1920; the lowest, 102⅜, on Feb. 21, 1923. Highest price last year, 136, on Jan. 3.

Clearing House Exchanges.

Exchange of checks at the New York Clearing House, $741,000,000; balances, $83,000,000; Federal Reserve credit balance, $70,000,000; exchanges this day a year ago, $650,000,000.

In the above table, therefore, the figures of highest and lowest prices during 1923 and since date of issue are reduced to the form now used in the Stock Exchange quotations.

RUMORS STAMPEDE DAVISON SHARES

EXCITEMENT ON EXCHANGE

Davison Chemical, which during recent months has gained the reputation of being a "speculative football" on the New York Stock Exchange, yesterday acted true to form when it broke about 20 points in as many minutes shortly after noon. The stock which sold as low as 61 on Monday, had advanced sharply since that time and yesterday morning sold up to 78⅝. Shortly before noon statements appeared on the Wall Street news tickers which were construed as unfavorable to the stock and heavy liquidation began, forcing it down more than 20 points to 58. In breaking 20 points yesterday, the stock duplicated its record of Aug. 30 last, when it suddenly moved up from 52 to 72 and then reacted to a closing price of 55 on that day.

When the break in the stock started yesterday a large number of traders on the floor gathered around the Davison post to execute the orders which were flooding them from clients who had purchased long stock, but who immediately began to dump it on the market when the collapse started. Sales in the stock approximated 147,000 shares, which is understood to be far more than the floating supply of shares in the street as "insiders" are credited with controlling 51 per cent. of the 218,000 shares outstanding. Transactions in the stock were equal to about 10 per cent. of all business done on the Exchange yesterday.

The collapse in the shares, although it had been generally rumored about the Street before the market opened that a sharp break would be witnessed, surprised the rank and file in the financial district. Reports were circulated before the opening of the market that Davison would begin to collapse around 11 A. M. The market, however, continued strong all morning, the stock rising to 78⅛ after opening at 74¼.

Shortly before noon, however, when the stock was quoted around 78, there appeared the following statement on the Dow, Jones & Co. ticker service:

"R. W. Stewart, Chairman of the board of Standard Oil Company of Indiana, says: 'We have signed no contract with Davison Chemical. We have investigated the silica gel process two or three times.' Standard Oil Company of New York has investigated the silica gel process and has decided not to use it."

Heavy selling followed this statement and the stock started to slip off, one, two or more points between sales. When the shares dropped to 70, orders to unload literally flooded the Stock Exchange. Brokers from all sections of the trading floor rushed to the Davison post to sell for their customers. A rumor that the specialist had closed his books and would not accept further orders in the stock added to the confusion and aided the decline by causing additional orders to sell.

The stock of the Davison Company has been shot up and down in recent months by the circulation of numerous reports that the company was lining up the various petroleum companies to use is silica gel process in the manufacture of gasoline. The origin of these reports could not be traced, but they caused the building up of a heavy speculative account. Consequently, when the report was circulated yesterday that two of the largest Standard Oil companies were not interested in the process, speculators dumped their shares on the market for whatever they would bring. The Davison Company recently closed contracts with the Vacuum Oil Company, a Standard Oil unit, and the Royal Dutch interests for the use of its process, but no attension was given to these developments yesterday.

Late in the afternoon the New York News Bureau, printed on its Wall Street tickers a letter received some time ago from C. Wilbur Miller, President of the Davison Chemical Company, in which he stated that Standard Oil of Indiana never investigated the silica gel process and knew nothing about it.

Regarding the report that the specialist in Davisen Chemical stock had closed up his book entirely for all orders, J. O. Straus, head of the firm of Straus & Co., one of the specialists in the stock, said after the close of the market that he did not close his books except for stop-loss orders. He pointed out that when the stock started to decline the book was already full of stop orders. Later, when he was flooded with market orders, he said, it was impossible to take additional stop orders and at hte same time handle the market orders which were thrown at him from all directions. As a result the book was closed to stop orders, but, he said, they were again opened at 2:15 P. M., when the market for the shares again became orderly.

W. D. Huntington, Vice President of the Davison Chemical Company, yesterday said that there had been no hitch in the negotiations with prominent oil corporations for the use of the silica gel process.

ASSAILS TAX SYSTEM.

Head of Credit Men Declares There Is Widespread Dissatisfaction.

The increasing number of persons engaged in the governmental service is creating a bureaucracy which should prove of grave concern to the public, J. H. Tregoe, executive head of the National Association of Credit Men, declared in a letter sent yesterday to members of the Association. The letter said:

"There is widespread dissatisfaction—and this should be noted by our administration—over the many claims made for extra taxes and the necessity in almost every case of filing briefs prepared by attorneys at heavy expense. The costs of Government have mounted high in recent years; the burden of the taxpayer should not be made heavier than he ought to bear. At least, he should not be made to feel that the bureau entrusted with the collection of taxes is always against him."

Present Industrial Output

An essential factor in determining the probable future trend of business is a knowledge of the current production level of the leading industries and of all industries combined, and a comparison of this level with other critical points in the course of business since the close of the war.

An index of the volume of manufacture and a survey of current developments is presented in the latest Weekly Letter of the Harvard Economic Service. This Letter contains facts of considerable importance to executives concerned with present and prospective industrial output.

AUTO OUTPUT INCREASES.

Reports Upset Prediction of Curtailment in November.

Although several producers planned to curtail operations in November because of inventory taking, reports from automobile centres for the first week of the month indicate a production greater than in any week of October, according to Automotive Industries which, in its weekly review, says:

"Through its output of 381,000 cars and trucks, October became classified as one of the high production months of the year. Whatever slowing up may come toward the latter port of November resulting in the reduction of totals from the October figure will be due to normal causes and not to any unusual factor either in the manufacturing or sales field."

The reports did not include Ford operations.

CRUDE OIL PRODUCTION OFF.

California's Increase Is More Than Offset by Slump in Texas.

Crude oil production last week fell off sharply, according to the American Petroleum Institute. Output averaged 2,224,300 barrels, against 2,238,750 in the previous week and 1,645,000 barrels in the corresponding week last year. California recorded an increase of 2,600 barrels in daily average, but that was more than offset by a reduction of 21,550 barrels in Central Texas, the home of the new Powell field. In addition to California, the Wyoming and Montana fields reported an increase of 2,750 barrels.

Receipts of California crude oil at Atlantic and Gulf ports last week aggregated 1,327,000 barrels, against 1,350,000 barrels in the previous week.

ARGUE BRANCH BANK RIGHTS

Supreme Court Justices Question Counsel on State Power.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The position taken by the Controller of the Currency in the branch bank controversy was assailed in the Supreme Court today by Frederick W. Lehmann, former Solicitor General, in closing argument in the case brought by the First National Bank of St. Louis against the State of Missouri.

Contending that the national and Missouri State laws regarding the establishment of branch banks were in harmony, Mr. Lehmann declared that when the Controller of the Currency failed to enforce the Federal law by closing the branch established by the First National of St. Louis, Missouri had a right to do so.

Insisting that the proceedings instituted by Missouri were an illegal interference with matters wholly within the control of the Federal Government, C. A. Severance, representing the national banks which joined in opposing the State's position, asserted that the Controller of the Currency had complete authority to permit the establishment of branches and in a number of cases he had done so.

Asked by Justice Brandeis whether States could interfere should national banks attempt to do a life insurance business, Mr. Severance answered in the negative. In a reply to a question by Justice Sutherland, however he said he thought States would have authority under police powers and for the public welfare to prevent a national bank from erecting an inflammable building. Justice Sutherland then suggested that it had been contended that the action of Missouri in the present cases had been based upon the protection of public welfare.

REPORTS ON BANKING BILLS

500 of 19,000 Prepared Were Before Last Congress, Says Paton.

Five hundred bills affecting banking were introduced in the last session of Congress, of a total of 19,000 presented, according to Thomas B. Paton, general counsel of the American Bankers' Association, in his annual report made public yesterday. Forty-three State Legislatures considered many laws relative to banks this year, the report says.

With regard to the efforts to promote uniformity in banking law, Mr. Paton says:

"It is regrettable that the Negotiable Instrument act has been amended by the Legislatures of a number of States and is generally losing its uniform character. The amendments may be beneficial, but their application is only local.

"It will probably be a task confronting the law office of the association to draft a supplemental amendatory act bringing in all the existing amendments of the Negotiable Instrument act and containing such new amendments as experience indicates are needed, and urge its universal enactment in all the States."

MERGENTHALER EARNINGS.

The Mergenthaler Linotype Company for the year ended Sept. 30 reports net profits of $2,669,278, or $20.85 a share on the $12,800,000 capital stock outstanding. In the previous fiscal year the company's profits were $2,304,771, or $18 a share. The balance sheet on Sept. 30 showed a profit and loss surplus of $3,442,746, against $10,685,980, the reduction being due chiefly to the setting aside of reserves amounting to more than $4,000,000.

Philip T. Dodge, President, in a statement to stockholders said in part: "Notwithstanding the generally unsettled conditions of industrial and financial affairs throughout the world and the complications attending the company's business in foreign countries, the year has been successful. At present there are about 3,500 shareholders, averaging 39 shares each. There has been a substantial enlargement of inventory, mainly because it was necessary to carry larger stocks of machinery and supplies in the many selling agencies.'

The Public Service Production Company, formed two years ago by the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, announced yesterday that it had secured contracts for highway construction in New Jersey and North Carolina. Pennsylvania Railroad stockholders totaled 142,527 on Nov. 1, a new high record, according to a statement given out by the company. The previous high record was made on March 1, 1922, when the total was 141,921. The average holdings on Nov. 1 were 70.06 shares, the smallest since the present number of shares have been outstanding.

REPORT NO "WHITEWASH."

Consolidated Stock Exchange Committee Thus Describes Findings.

"The Special Committee of Five," said Mr. Budd last night commenting upon its five months of investigation, "was not what is commonly referred to as a 'whitewashing' committee. It was appointed on May 16 and immediately held a long session that lasted late into the night. Almost daily meetings were held from that time on; in fact, until the new President, Laurance Tweedy, was installed and the practices which theretofore existed had been entirely eliminated."

LOOKING TO ITALY FOR RAIL GUIDANCE

RESULT OF CONCESSIONS

Roads Showing Heaviest Losses the First to Be Turned Back to Their Owners.

Reports of a representative of the United States Department of Commerce in Rome that plans or concessions for the return of railroads in Italy to private operation, including a group of five railroads of about 5,000 kilometers, about one-third of the total Italian milage now operated, are being closely watched by railroad executives in the United States. The lines which are to be returned to private management, according to railroad executives, and an analysis by the Bureau of Railway Economics, are those showing the heaviest losses. They will in no way affect the main lines that will be continued under the management of the Government.

Under the plan the State will guarantee a specified annual revenue per kilometer, and for the first three months will make up any excess of expenses over receipts, while the operating company is to set aside a fund for the maintenance and renewal of road bed and equipment. All profits in excess of 7 per cent. are to be divided with the State, whose share increases gradually until it receives three-quarters of any amount over and above 12 per cent.

The Bureau of Railway Economics in Washington, which is making a close study of the Italian situation, has reported that the principles to be laid down with regard to the transfer of the State railroad lines to private operators are as follows:

The new companies to receive operating concessions only and consequently not to require much capital.

A minimum amount of gross earnings per kilometer sufficient to cover the minimum expenses under the most economic operations will be granted to the concessionaire.

The returns on the capital invested will be limited by the participation of the State in an increasing proportion in profits exceeding 7 per cent.

To leave entire freedom to the operating companies to reorganize the services taken over as they see fit, the only obligation being that nine-tenths of the personnel must be chosen from those in the employ of the State.

The announcement of these principles has resulted in no small amount of discussion in Rome and a wide difference of opinion as to the practicability of the plan proposed, it is reported. Especial attention is being given by local railroad executives to the ideas of Professor Ugo Ancona, an Italian economist. Professor Ancona has taken the attitude that the plan of concessions proposed will yield satisfactory results. He bases his opinion on the following arguments:

"The provision that has been most bitterly attacked is perhaps that whereby the State guarantees a certain amount of gross earnings per kilometer. Where even under the most economical management a deficit is unavoidable, the amount granted must necessarily exceed the actual earnings, and consequently will represent to all intents and purposes the payment of a subsidy to the operating company. However, this guarantee will not be such as to destroy the incentive to economical operation, for it will be only by expending the amount received with such care as to more than wipe out the deficit that it will be possible to obtain any profit. What the State really does is to admit that in spite of receiving a certain amount of gross earnings it is so wasteful in its expenditures that it is suffering a loss, and says to the operating company, I will guarantee the gross earnings and by effecting economies, you, who understand railroad operations better than I do, should be able to make a profit, while I no longer suffer a loss.

"The amount of the guarantee will be only sufficient to cover estimated expenses under private management. In this connection, the State is dealing with the persons who understand the railway business, and not bankers or business men who do not understand its problems.

"To obtain the concessions that are planned, next to no capital will be required and the only essential will be ability to produce results. If the gross earnings are maintained the State will pay nothing except where conditions are such that profitable operation is out of the question, and even then the amount will be much less than the deficit that it is now obliged to cover. There is no reason to expect the gross earnings will decline, and, on the contrary there is more reason to anticipate that they will increase as the economic development of the country proceeds."

"The greater opportunity for saving money is with reference to personnel, and in this connection the companies obtaining concessions will be able to eliminate all of the abuses that have existed under government operation and to reduce wages materially while still treating their employes with fairness."

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

List Reacts, Action Reflecting Paucity of Demand—Easterns and South Americans Up.

Yesterday was a day of reaction in the foreign exchanges, following the alternating scheme of advances and declines evident over recent period. As there was nothing in the news from abroad to stimulate fresh buying—in fact, dealers expressed the opinion that the recent advance had more than discounted the favorable news from that quarter—offerings came out in sufficient amount to cut into Wednesday's gains. Commercial bills, realizing sales and a renewal of the play of speculators all combined to bring about losses. The selling came chiefly from London and Amsterdam, the source of the inquiry previously.

The market was not a particularly active one, except in the preliminary dealings, when rates spurted fractionally higher from the openings, but with the demand completed rates eased off steadily. At the low of $4.35 15-16, sterling showed an overnight decline of 3 3-16 cents; French bills were down more than 14 points at 5.37½ cents, and Italian sagged 4¼ points to 4.33¾ cents. Holland, Spanish, Belgian and the Scandinavian remittances all joined in the decline. The Chinese and Indian currencies were higher, as were some of the South Americans.

German marks for the third successive days were quoted at 25 cents per trillion, or at the rate of 4,000,000,000,000 for one dollar, which was the price a week ago, and 6,000 at this date a year ago.

EXPECTS PROSPERITY IN NEW BUILDING

S. W. Straus Tells Coolidge Business Is Confident—Shortage of Labor Keeps Cost Up.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—S. W. Straus of New York was in conference today with President Coolidge. He told the President that the outlook was for the continuation of the building program on a very substantial basis and that the business interests of the country were confident prosperity would remain.

After leaving the White House Mr. Straus expressed himself as much impressed by the President's comprehensive understanding of the business outlook.

"There is a potential need for $8,000,000,000 worth of new buildings in the United States," Mr. Straus declared, "notwithstanding the fact that building operations this year are 25 per cent. ahead of 1922. Last year the nation's new volume of business was $4,000,000,000. This year it will be $5,000,000,000, so that it would require fully a year and one-half of the most intensive operations to make up the present shortage.

"With these large activities there is no likelihood of any unemployment problems, at least in the immediate future. Also the $5,000,000,000 of new buildings means that just this much new capital is being created which will contribute its share of Federal, State and municipal taxes.

"An important development is the great increase of Winter building. October building permits throughout the country were 25 per cent. ahead of September, although ordinarily building operations decline sharply in October. Last month's permits were 30 per cent. ahead of October last year.

"These facts reflect the universal confidence of the business interests of the country in a continuance of present business expansion."

With regard to building costs, Mr. Straus told the President that in his opinion he did not look for lower levels, owing to the demand for buildings, coupled with a labor shortage.

"Organized labor in the seventeen building crafts has lost 60,000 members in the last two years," he said. "This supply is being replenished through apprenticeship schools, but it will possibly be two or three years before the labor supply is commensurate with the demands."

Mr. Straus recently returned after making an extensive study of economic conditions in Europe. He stated that while he did not believe our nation would escape its eventual moral responsibilities as a world stabilizer, he did not believe the present a propitious time to participate in the European situation, owing to the widely varied points of view existing among the different Continental countries.

Moon Motor Output Sold.

Stewart McDonald, President of the Moon Motor Car Company, yesterday announced that distributers in fifty-five cities, representing 700 dealers, have purchased the entire output of 25,000 cars which the company expects to produce next year. The increase of 12,000 cars over the current year he attributed to the new six-cylinder model, which will sell at a lower price.

COTTON PRICES DROP ON PROFIT TAKING

The demand stimulated by the ginning figures seemed to have been pretty well supplied before the close of Wednesday and very heavy realizing sales caused sharp reaction in the cotton market here during yesterday's trading. May contracts, which had sold at 35.42 at the high point of the previous day, broke to 34.78 yesterday afternoon, or 74 points from the high record and 51 points below Wednesday's closing quotation. There were rallies of several points later on covering and the closing tone was steady, but last prices showed net losses of 25 to 41 points on the present crop positions and of 15 to 35 points on later deliveries.

The market was firm at the opening on a continuation of the buying movement inspired by the light ginning to Nov. 14 and relatively firm Liverpool cables, and December contracts made a new high record for the season, selling at 35.75 on the call. Later months failed to sell above yesterday's high prices, however, and there was a good deal of realizing from the start. Further trade buying to fix prices for both foreign and Southern account helped to absorb these offerings during the morning, but the demand of that character then appeared to be tapering off, and the market broke under increased realising or selling for a reaction. No special news feature was mentioned in connection with the decline which followed, but there were rumors that large long lines were being liquidated for the account of speculative interests in London, and a few stop orders were uncovered. December was relatively weak while the decline was in progress, breaking to 34.85, or 90 points from the early high price, and the general list sold some 45 to 55 points new lower. Closing rallies were attributed to covering or some rebuying by early sellers.

The relative weakness of December during the early afternoon was accompanied by renewed talk of cotton coming here for delivery. Differences between high and low grades in the Southern spot markets continue to widen out as the crop is caused by the bad weather of last month is manifested in the current receipts. But while the discounts on low middling, which is the lowest grade tenderable on contracts, have increased from 181 points on Oct. 5 to 168 points below middling at the present time, this has been a good deal more than offset by the advances in the general market. At yesterday morning's quotation of 35.75 for December, for instance, low middling would be worth fully 33 cents a pound for tender here compared with a value of around 27 cents at the beginning of last month. Such a price would seem sufficient to attract shipments here for delivery, should there by any lull in spot demand after the completion of November commitments, but it is considered doubtful by local spot people whether more than 85,000 or 75,000 bales of cotton could be handled here next month, and December recovered part of its loss in premiums on the late rally.

At one time during the early afternoon December appeared to be about 50 points over January as compared with 20 points at the close of Wednesday, but closed 84 points over the January delivery. There were rumors that for the first time in weeks Bremen was asking New York for offers of low grade cottons, and it was recalled in this connection that in previous years of big low grades discounts Germany has been a good taker of such cottons. The demand from that quarter this year is problematical in view of existing political conditions. Part of last season's exports to Germany are understood to have gone through to Russia, and there were rumors yesterday that plans were being made which might result in Russian shipments going direct.

Private advices received from Houston said there was a continued good spot demand there at the recent basis and added that end month exports from that port would amount to between 90,000 and 100,000 bales and would probably be even greater were Liverpool freight room available. The reports of a continued good spot demand were confirmed by the sales officially reported in the leading markets of the South, as the business for the day reached a total of 46,652 bales, compared with 46 791 on Wednesday. Prices were generally 25 to 50 points lower, the lowest quotation for middling cotton being 32.48 at Fort Worth, while the largest business was in the Dallas market, which reported sales of 13,415 bales and quoted middling at 33.60.

Yesterday's quotations follow:

10 YEARS' RAIL NEEDS PUT AT EIGHT BILLIONS

Chamber of Commerce Estimates Traffic and Freight to Be Provided For.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—American railroads will have to make an investment of $7,870,000,000 in transportation facilities during the next ten years in order to provide for the normal growth of traffic they expect, according to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

A special committee on Governmental relations to railroad transportation has placed this estimate before Julius H. Barnes, President of the chamber, basing it upon the calculation that passenger business will increase 25 per cent. and freight traffic one-third in the decade. The conclusions emphasized by the report are that Congress should refrain from altering the Transportation act, lest the roads be hampered in expanding.

The sum named is the minimum, the committee estimated, which will take care of the anticipated traffic load. Railroads now meet a traffic demand of 40,000,000,000 passenger miles annually in the United States and 420,000,000,000 freight ton miles. In 1933 the necessity of delivering 30,000,000,000 passenger miles and 560,000,000,000 freight ton miles is foreseen. To handle this, railroads are said to need 38,350 miles of additional track, 13,200 new locomotives, 725,000 more freight cars and 12,300 more passenger coaches.

The "establishment of more general confidence in the continuity of sound policy of rate regulation" on the part of the Government is needed, the committee concluded, and a fair trial of the Transportation act before any alteration in its provisions should be urged.

George A. Post of New York is Chairman of the committee which made the study, and its membership includes railroad officials, labor leaders, heads of farm organizations, bankers and others.

SEES RELIEF FOR FARMER.

Senator Capper Believes Congress Will Create Balance of Prosperity.

United States Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas, in an address yesterday at the Pennsylvania Hotel at a luncheon given in his honor by the Associated Traveling Salesmen, expressed the belief that Congress would enact legislation at its forthcoming session which would bring relief to the farmer and create an equitable balance of prosperity throughout the country.

He declared that the farmer was not seeking class legislation but merely sought relief in connection with transportation rates, taxation, which may be brought about through Secretary Mellen's proposal; abolition of the 50 per cent. surtax on Pullman cars, an outlet for the producers' surplus in European markets and the maintenance of home markets on a more profitable basis of distribution.

The Senator added that agricultural conditions in the West are improving, but that prices still were against the farmer.

L. J. Spencer Predicts Prosperity.

L. J. Spence, director of traffic of the Southern Pacific Lines, after a ten-thousand-mile tour over the system, reported that his survey of business conditions justified a prediction of continued prosperity. Improved conditions, he said, "would be greatly stimulated by a substantial reduction of income taxes during the approaching session of Congress and by reasonable assurance that there will be no radical legislation to undermine the fundamentals upon which the employment and prosperity of all classes of people depend."

Brooklyn Railroad Income Gains.

The net corporate income of the Brooklyn City Railroad Company for October was $158,106, as compared to $154,937 in the same month last year. For the first four months of the fiscal year the income was $644,544, against $615,248 last year.

The increased earnings for October were due in part to the increase in passenger revenue, which totaled $1,030,335 as compared to $1,014,228 in 1922.

Peerless to Put Out a New Model.

The Peerless Motor Car Company is contemplating putting a new six-cylinder car on the market, to be known as the Collins Six, according to reports in the financial district yesterday. Up to the present the company has produced an eight-cylinder car exclusively. The new car will be named after the President of the company.

Builds New Type of Locomotive.

A passenger locomotive of a new type, 45 per cent. more powerful than its present standard heavy passenger engine, the class K-4s, Pacific type, has been completed by the Pennsylvania Railroad at its Altoona works. The new engine, known as Class M-1, is of the Mountain type and has one more pair of driving wheels than the Pacific type.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The St. Paul Union Depot Company was authorized today by the Interstate Commerce Commission to issue and sell $15,000,000 in 5 per cent. bonds to be guaranteed by railroads using the station. A part of the fund will be applied to existing indebtedness and the remainder to additions and betterments.

The stock will be offered to stockholders at $20 a share, thus adding $1,000,000 to the company's capital and surplus account.

Oil Consolidation Is Progressing.

Granulated Sugar Up 10 Points.

Sugar refiners in the New York area yesterday advanced granulated sugar prices 10 points. The Federal Sugar Company is now quoting 8.90 cents a pound, while most other refiners are quoting 9 cents a pound flat.

American Cyanamid Directors.

WHEAT MARKET AGAIN ADVANCES

Covering Movement, Combined With Strength of Stocks, Helps Prices.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Liquidation was on in December wheat by both longs and shorts. Houses with Eastern connections sold the December and bought July on a free scale, while at least three of the local professionals who have been bearish of late started to cover their lines of December and to some extent replaced with sales of the deferred deliveries.

This covering movement, combined with the strength in stocks in New York and prospects that Germany might make a gold loan, carried values up rather sharply, with the finish at net gains of ⅝@1¼ cents, December leading. December closed about 3⅝ cents under the July compared with a spread of over four cents recently and there was some buying of May and selling of December, credited to a local cash house, around five cents difference.

The stubborn action of the market the past three days tended to increase the feeling that wheat can advance at times when all conditions are apparently against it. This would suggest that the bearish conditions had been well discounted. There is an impression that strong interests are holding large lines to prevent values going too low for the best of business reasons.

Export demand was fair, with sales of 600,000 bushels of Manitoba wheat 250,000 bushels of rye and 150,000 of barley, with 20,000 barrels of flour to Germany.

While cash corn dropped 1@4 cents in the sample market and some grades are off about 10 cents within a week, sufficient investment buying is coming into the market to prevent any material decline in futures. The latter closed ½@⅝ cent higher, with short covering on the strength in wheat a factor. It was noticeable that buying limits were raised in some instances during the day.

Offerings of cash corn were larger and the cash markets closed at the bottom, with Minneapolis offering loaded grain. Scarcity of elevator room is a factor in that market.

Oats are receiving more attention from commission houses and closed ⅝ to ¾ cent higher with rye up ¼ to ⅓ cent with a cash house buying December and selling May, changing over hedges. A cargo of 250,000 bushels of rye had been shipped from Duluth to Chicago.

There are around 550,000 bushels of wheat loading and to be loaded here for shipment to Buffalo for Winter storage.

Primary arrivals of wheat were 943,000 bushels; week ago, 1,731,000; last year, 1,537,000. Shipments were 957,000 bushels; week ago, 585,000; last year, 1,041,000.

Corn receipts were 1,102,000 bushels; week ago, 752,000; last year, 645,0 0, and shipments, 1,535,000 bushels; week ago, 293,000; last year, 424,000.

DENIES FREIGHT CUT WOULD HELP FARMER

New York Trust Company Analyzes Project of Reducing Rates on Export Wheat.

Wheat growers would not benefit from a reduction in freight rates on export wheat, according to the Index, published by the New York Trust Company, which has completed an analysis of the possibilities growing out of the proposal advanced by President Coolidge. The way is already open for farmers to transport their crops to the Atlantic seaboard at lower rates, according to the Index, which states that the barge canal is ready to handle such work, but despite the lower water rate, as compared with the railroad rate, approximately 75 per cent. of the total grain moved to the coast goes by way of rail.

"Close examination of the proposal further to reduce railroad rates on export wheat results in the conclusion that the only beneficiary of such a proceeding would be the foreign consumer," declares the Index. "Without going into the question as to whether a further 25 per cent. reduction would be fair to the railroads, it may be pointed out that Canadian railroad rates have for many years been fixed with a view to keeping Vancouver on a competitive basis with American Pacific ports: Port Arthur and Fort Williams with Duluth; Georgian Bay with Buffalo; Montreal with Philadelphia and Baltimore, and Halifax and St. Johns with New York and Boston.

"If our export rates were further reduced, equal reductions, it may confidently be expected, would be made by the Canadian railroads and the situation of the United States wheat farmer would remain unchanged. He would still be competing for foreign trade with the Canadian surplus four times as great as his own, produced at a lower cost and going to market on equally favorable terms.

"It may also be pointed out that if lower transportation cost on wheat to the Atlantic seaboard could solve the wheat growers' problem and stimulate lagging foreign demand, he would be expected to avail himself of the possibility of moving wheat from Buffalo to alongside ship by barge canal for 5½ cents a bushel—a rate far lower than the rail rate. Yet instead of the barge canal being largely used for wheat transportation, three quarters of all the grain from Buffalo for export moves by rail."

WARNS OF BRITISH TARIFF.

Trust Company Index Calls Imperial Conference Program Significant.

The fact that the British Imperial Conference in London has taken up the subject of tariff revision is of significance to Americans, in the view of The Index, published by the New York Trust Company, which in its current issue states that Premier Bruce of Australia was one of the strongest figures at the conference in which protective tariffs for British agriculturists were considered. Premier Bruce put forward five propositions, the first of which he definitely favors, the others being possible alternatives, says The Index.

"They are: The adoption by Great Britain of a tariff on foodstuffs and raw materials with a preference to the Dominions; a sliding scale of tariff and preference based on cost of production in Great Britain; a system of subsidies both to British and Dominion producers; an import license system to discriminate against foreign buyers; a deliberate policy of stabilization of prices.

"It would be unwise to prophesy the adoption of any of these policies, in view of political opposition and British traditions, but it is noteworthy that they are being strongly urged," says The Index. "Their relation to our own production of agricultural products and other raw materials is obvious."

Detroit United Railway Shares Drop

MONTREAL, Quebec, Nov. 22.—A sudden decline in Detroit United Railway shares on the market this morning caused considerable comment. Local directors of the organization state that the situation, so far as the company is concerned, continues unchanged and that operations are satisfactory. The company had in October one of the best months in a long time. The fare situation is still under consideration by the Michigan Public Utilities Commission.

Deposit liabilities show a decline of $41,000,000, as against an increase of $73,000,000 reported for the preceding week; cash reserves increased by $3,500,000, and the reserve ratio rose from 75.6 to 77.1 per cent.

A decline of $36,600,000 in holdings of discounted bills is shown for the Federal Reserve bank of New York. The Reserve banks of Cleveland and Philadelphia show reductions of $10,000,000 and $8,500,000, respectively, while the banks at Richmond, St. Louis, Dallas and San Francisco report a net liquidation of $11,000,000 in discounted bills.

The Chicago Reserve bank shows an increase of $10,200,000 in discount holdings, as against a reduction of $22,800,000 for the week preceding. Atlanta reports an increase of $4,900,000, and Boston, Minneapolis and Kansas City a combined increase of $3,100,000.

Paper secured by United States Government obligations declined by $31,900,000 and on Nov. 21 aggregated $341,600,000. Of this amount $209,000,000 was secured by Liberty and other United States bonds, $117,200,000 by Treasury notes and $15,400,000 by certificates of indebtedness.

All Federal Reserve banks show smaller Federal Reserve note circulation. Of the total decline of $40,000,000 New York reports $10,600,000, Cleveland $9,400,000, and Philadelphia $8,500,000.

Gold reserves increased by $1,400,000 during the week. The movement of gold through the gold settlement fund was largely to New York, that bank reporting an increase of $50,800,000 in gold reserves. Small increases, aggregating $3,800,000, are shown for Kansas City and Richmond.

Duty on Textile Samples.

A second conference between customs appraising officials and importers here on the question of proper appraising of textile and other samples will be held today at 2:30 P. M. in the office of the Appraiser of the Port, F. J. H. Kracke. Under a recent decision of the Board of United States General Appraisers, incoming samples for use in the sale of textile fabrics are appraised at the purchase price of the cloth before it is cut up into samples. This, importers claim, imposes a severe financial burden upon them. They contend the actual commercial value of the samples, in the condition as imported, should be taken as the basis of customs assessments. Importers at the last conference were asked to prepare certain data which will be submitted today.

Raw Silk Situation.

The local raw silk market is showing a better tone and prices have advanced slightly in sympathy with greater firmness at Yokohama. Some of the larger mills are said to be starting to contract for some time ahead in the belief that prices are about at bottom. The market at Yokohama advanced from 40 to 50 yen during the week. Although stocks are accumulating, the reelers are taking a firm stand against declines below present levels. For "double extra" sellers are asking 2,100 yen, according to H. L. Gwalter & Co., Inc., while "Kanagi No. 1" is held at 2,020 yen. Concessions offered by reelers at Canton are insufficient to meet prices here. Stocks are reported as about 10,000 bales. There is little demand for steam filatures at Shanghai. Cables report the Milan market as firm with prices tending upward.

Advance Less Than Expected.

Opening of the heavyweight, 1924, lines of two Southern mills at prices above last year's quotations is the feature of a quiet underwear market. One of the mills priced 16-pound mercerized trim union suits at $11.87½, and the other trim at $12.12½. The other made prices of $11.50 and $12 for similar merchandise. For later delivery the goods are priced 50 cents higher. It was predicted, according to the news letter of the National Association of Hosiery and Underwear Manufacturers, that 16-pound new numbers would open around $14.25 and before all the lines are opened, it says, this level may be reached. Mills opening below this figure are described as fortunate in probably having a supply of cotton bought at a figure substantially under the present level. During the past week some good reorder business has been noted for heavyweight garments, while there was a "fair" inquiry for lightweights.

Hosiery Conditions Abroad.

While in Paris on his recent trip abroad, Brackett Parsons, chief style designer for the Ipswich Mills, Ipswich, Mass., found beige the predominating color in women's hosiery. "Very few blacks are being worn for street wear," he said yesterday, "and practically none with clocks except lace ones. The tendency seems to be toward economy, and the cheaper grades of stockings in light tints are extremely popular with French women." Mr. Parsons was in Chemnitz, the great German hosiery centre, when the general labor strike was called, and found the mills making only fancies for sports wear and some drop-stitched fancy stripes. Despite wages of from $1 to $2 a day, he found German hosiery prices very high, being quoted in dollars and sterling. At the exhibition of hosiery machinery and merchandise at Leicester, England, Mr. Parsons found strong showings of artificial silk and real silk combination hose. These, he said, are superseding pure fibre and pure silk merchandise.

Gray Goods Sales Fair.

Trading was fairly active in gray goods here yesterday, much of the business taking place in printcloths. In the lower-count goods of this construction were large sales of 38½-inch 48-squares and 44-46s at 8¾ and 7¾ cents, respectively. Good-sized trading in 38½-inch 60-48s was reported at 9⅝ cents for nearby delivery and 9½ cents for January shipment. The same was true of 38½-inch 64-60s at 10⅝ and 11 cents, respectively. Nearby 39-inch 68-72s moved at 12⅝ cents. In the sheetings there were sales of 36-inch 5.50s at 9½ cents for December shipment and of 6.15s in the same width, for delivery in January, at 8⅝ cents.

High Cotton Hurts Business.

The present high cost of cotton is having an adverse effect on general business in certain parts of the country that is not yet fully recognized. This is especially true of New England where the inability of the cotton goods manufacturers to get prices commensurate with the cost of the staple has forced a more or less general curtailment of production and a consequent loss of purchasing power on the part of the mill workers whose wages are affected by it. This is reflected in fewer purchases of general merchandise, the effect of which strikes back to the producers of these goods and lessens their sales. The same situation exists in some of the important Southern textile centres, although its effects have not yet become so marked as in New England.

Higher Prices Are Inopportune.

Although, from a crop viewpoint, now is the time for cotton to be high, if at all, the contention was advanced here yesterday that it was unfortunate the staple should advance so sharply at this period of the year. Carrying out this thought, it was asserted that the minds of the retailers are now focused on the disposal of holiday wares, rather than on the purchase of staple merchandise, with the result that neither the manufacturers nor the wholesalers of cotton goods are getting any encouragement in advancing prices of their merchandise to levels proportionate to cotton costs. The attitude of leading retailers in practically all parts of the country is to let things slide until after the turn of the year, possibly with a view to showing their bankers "clean" financial statements. With the jobbers unwilling to stock up on cottons at higher prices in anticipation of a good demand later on the only alternative of the manufacturers is to "hold the bag" for them or curtail production still further. It is in further curtailment that now that the unfortunate phase of the situation lies.

This Buyer Was Foresighted.

Commenting yesterday on the business now passing in knitted underwear for the present season, a well-known local selling agent said that one of the most characteristic things about it is that while jobbing buyers want immediate delivery prices they do not want immediate deliveries. He cited the case of a certain buyer who recently placed a substantial order for cotton union suits for prompt shipment in order to avoid the higher prices growing out of the rise in cotton. The order was quite large for this time of the year and was given the benefit of present prices. Not long after it was placed, however, the buyer wired the agent to ship several cases as specified in the order, but to hold the other goods pending the receipt of new shipping instructions. That was the buyer's way of telling me that part of the goods were really bought for next Fall," the agent said. "The new instructions will probably specify delivery some time after Jan. 1, and many of the suits will be carried over into the new season.

Too Many Styles the Cause?

The same lack of important consumer buying of women's shoes that is complained of in the other leading cities of the East was said yesterday to exist in the metropolitan district. One of the reasons attributed for this is the wide variety of styles offered by the manufacturers. This variety, while evidently put out with the hope of stimulating business, was said to be having the reverse effect in that it confuses consumers and causes them to "spread out" such purchases as they are making. To meet their demands the retailers have had to stock up more than they would ordinarily or run the chance of losing sales. Having done so they are finding that the variety of their offerings is really acting as a boomerang and leaving them with many "stickers" on hand.

LINKS COTTON MILLS IN NORTH AND SOUTH

New England Southern Project Is Approved by the International Corporation.

CAPITAL IS $19,750,000

Plan Combines 586,000 Spindles and 6,500 Operatives in Canada and Four States.

BOSTON, Nov. 22.—Plans for the formation of the New England Southern Mills, to consist of a consolidation of a number of mills in South Carolina and Georgia with the plants of the International Cotton Mills in Georgia, Maine, Massachusetts and Canada, have been approved by the directors of the International Cotton Mills. The combined mills will have 586,000 spindles and will employ about 6,500 operatives.

The Southern mills to be joined to the International group are those for the acquisition of which Lockwood, Greene & Co. of this city have been negotiating recently, and all the companies in the combination will be managed by this firm. The new plants include the Lancaster Cotton Mills, Lancaster, S. C.; the Fort Mill Manufacturing Company, Fort Mill, S. C.; the Eureka Cotton Mills and the Springstein Mills, Chester, S. C.; the Pelzer Manufacturing Company, Pelzer, S. C.; the Tucapau Mills, Tucapau, S. C., and the Stark Mills, Hogansville, Ga.

The present International corporation, incorporated in Massachusetts, will be retained, but the name will be changed to New England Southern Mills. The plants of the International which go into the combination are the Cosmos, Yarmouth, N. S.; the Imperial, Hamilton, Ont.; the Hoganseville and La Grange, Georgia; the Lisbon, Lisbon, Maine, and the International Mills at Lowell, Mass.

All the mills in the combination are said to be running full, with product sold well ahead, except the Lowell plant, where new looms are being installed, and the Stark Mills, which are now under construction.

According to the announcement by the International directors, the annual sales will exceed $30,000,000. With the mills goes a large amount of outside property, including 2,160 houses, schools, churches, stores and community buildings, and 10,000 horsepower of water power. The combination will have 30,000 spindles in Canada, 70,000 in New England and 486,000 in South Carolina and Georgia.

The capitalization of the New England Southern Mills will consist of approximately $4,000,000 of International notes due in 1929, now outstanding; $4,000,000 of new notes, $5,000,000 6 per cent. prior preference stock, $6,500,000 preferred stock and 250,000 shares of no par value common stock. The company will own outright certain properties and will have control through common stock of the properties of the others. The only public financing required will be the sale of the $4,000,000 new notes.

Colonel Le Roy Springs will become a director of the New England Southern Mills.

The combined mills will have a diversified product, including print cloths, shade cloths, wide sheeting, sheeting and drills for export, ginghams, hose and belting duck and tire fabric.

GRAPE CROP SETS RECORD.

80,000 Carloads Produced This Year —Double the 1921 Total.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Federal statistics which show the 1923 grape crop to be the largest in the history of the country, indicate a total production of 80 000 carloads of grapes, compared with 37,000 carloads in 1921, according to attachés of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics here.

In 1921, 4,700 carloads of grapes were shipped into Chicago, 8,900 in 1922, and the estimate for 1923 is 12,500. Fifty carloads, or 150,000 gallons of commercial grape juice, were sold in Chicago in 1922.

To Open Blanket Lines Monday.

Announcement was made yesterday by the American Woolen Company that it will open its lines of all and part wool bed blankets for the 1924 season next Monday. No statement was made as to the prices that will prevail or the patterns to be featured. It is anticipated, however, that prices will be higher than those made at the opening last year, owing to the increase in raw wool and labor costs. The line is being shown somewhat earlier than usual, the opening last year having taken place about the middle of December. The goods are sold to the jobbers and the larger retail distributers.

Pay of $150 a Week Garnisheed.

An order was signed by Supreme Court Justice Cohalan yesterday garnisheeing the salary of Solomon Hurok, a concert manager, who has represented many artists and is employed by S. Hurok, Inc., at $150 a week. The order was obtained by Abraham Shuh, who obtained a judgment for $17,403 against Hurok on Nov. 17 for loans.

Another New Theatre for Broadway in Times Square Section.

ESTIMATED COST $250,000

Abraham Crosney Buys the Myron Arms, a Fourteen-Story Apartment on Broadway Corner.

Another new theatre, estimated to cost about $250,000, is to be added to the sixty-odd moving picture and legitimate houses now located in the Times Square section, as a result of a long-term lease signed yesterday for 1,662 to 1,666 Broadway, running through to Seventh Avenue.

Work on the new building will be started as soon as the present leases on the premises expire.

The property, which is located on the east side of Broadway, between Fifty-first and Fifty-second Streets, was leased by the Frank G. Shattuck Company to the Piccadilly Holding Company, of which I. Kaminsky is President and Lee A. Ochs, Treasurer, for a term of forty years at an average rent of about $90,000 a year, or an aggregate of close to $4,000,000.

The property, which at present is improved with a two-story building, has a frontage of 90 feet on Broadway, 60 feet on Seventh Avenue, and a depth of 170 feet.

The lessees propose to improve the property with a motion picture theatre with a seating capacity of about 1,500. The present building will be razed and the theatre will be built in the stadium style, with a thirty-foot entrance, bordered on each side by two stores. A broadcasting station will be part of the equipment. Plans have been prepared by Schloss & Orlando, architects.

A Location that Increases Business—
This is Proof!

THE tremendous increase in sales volume which Stroheim & Romann have experienced since moving to their new quarters at 730 Fifth Avenue, New York, is also affecting the branch offices which the firm maintains in Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, San Francisco, and Los Angeles. In these cities it has been necessary to enlarge the space occupied by each office so that the increased business might be taken care of adequately. . . . . .

It is planned that each of the branch offices, equipped as they are with a complete line of decorative fabrics, should, in atmosphere, be consistent with the splendid headquarters of the company in the Heckscher Building, New York.

IMMIGRANT INQUIRY GETS QUICK RESULTS

TISBO DEPOSITORS LOSE ALL

Receiver for Booras Brothers Says There Is No Hope for Their Clients, Either.

Restitution of $1,700 paid to a steamship sub-agency by two Italian women for transmission abroad, but never received there, was made yesterday as a result of the testimony of the women Wednesday at the hearing of the joint legislative committee to investigate exploitation of immigrants, of which Senator Salvatore A. Cotillo is Chairman.

Julius Simeone, member of the firm of Mercante & Simeone of 126 Mulberry Street, testified before the committee yesterday that he had repaid the money earlier in the day in Senator Cotillo's office. He declared that the failure to receive the money in Italy was due to delay on the part of his correspondents there. Mrs. Angela Barini of 117 Sullivan Street, who gave him $1,220, and Mrs. Susie Goldolfi of 161 Clinton Street, who gave him $480, received their money back.

Miss Bertha Rembaugh, receiver for the bankrupt firms of Vincenzo Tisbo & Bros. of 121 Mott Street and Booras Brothers of 15-17 Battery Place, testified that hundreds of Italians who entrusted the savings of years to the care of the two firms, in the belief that they were dealing with banks, would probably not recover a cent. The loss to Tisbo depositors, she said, totaled $500,000.

The Tisbo brothers, Miss Rembaugh said, apparently lost large sums through speculation in foreign exchange. They also lost in other enterprises. They were agents for several steamship companies and were also engaged in the laundry and bootblack business. Senator Cotillo exhibited a blotter on which they advertised Italian wines, with a price list.

Booras Brothers had about 1,200 creditors, Miss Rembaugh testified. Most of them were Greeks living in the South and Middle West, who had entrusted money to the firm for the purchase of steamship tickets or for transmission to Greece. After steamship companies canceled the agency, Miss Rembaugh said, the company bought the steamship Acropolis and placed it in service as the Washington, between Greek and American ports. On the second trip, however, the ship was libeled and sold to pay indebtedness.

Philip Bernardini of the Bernardini State Bank, 39 Mulberry Street, recommended legislation which would make the steamship and express companies liable for the acts of the sub-agents as they are for their employes and placing the agents under the supervision of the State Banking Department.

The hearing will be resumed this afternoon.

Brushing . . is not enough

The mouth glands must be set to work protecting the teeth day and night

You cannot brush your teeth every five minutes.

And yet that is the only way to prevent decay—unless you can keep your mouth glands active. They alone can protect your teeth day and night.

But now, through lack of exercise, these six tiny mouth glands have become weak.

Pebeco makes the mouth glands flow more freely. As soon as it enters the mouth an increased flow of healing fluids pours over the gums and teeth; in between the crevices where the tooth brush cannot reach. These fluids neutralize the acids of the mouth as fast as they form and keep the teeth always clean and safe.

Pebeco cleans the teeth thoroughly, but it does more than that. It stimulates a healthy salivary flow—and that alone can keep the teeth clean and safe against decay.
